A Rambling Interview With Harold Bell Wright While He Rambled Over St. Louis

Novelist Talks About Revolution, Which He Thinks Is Certain to Come, Our Art Museum, Our Forest Park, Our Stacks of Apartment Houses, and His Motto, Which Is "Don't Kid Thyself."

When Harold Bell Wright came to St. Louis for the first time during the past week, he invited a Post-Dispatch reporter who had interviewed him in connection with a news report of his visit here, to spend an afternoon going about the city with him. Following is a report of the rambling interview or series of interviews with the noted author that fell between the periods when the reporter was asking Mr. Wright questions about St. Louis.

WRIGHT thinks a revolution in this country is inevitable. He spoke of the "coming upheaval" as confidently as if a date for it had been fixed.

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT.

That the author of "The Shepherd of the Hills," "The Eyes of the World," "The Winning of Barbara Worth," "When a Man's a Man," and other best sellers really believes this, there can be little doubt. Even now he is going about the country getting the opinions of men and women, in order that he can "be of the most service when the blow-off comes," as he puts it.

Wright's range of acquaintances is wide. He said: "Some of my best friends are Catholic priests, and some are Indian medicine men. I know a lot of men who own mines, but a whole lot more who work in them. They all say there is going to be trouble. The reason is that some men have too much and others have too little."

The novelist, 8,000,000 of whose books are now in circulation, is a pleasant companion. He is inclined to be reticent, but he has a store of good stories and interesting reminiscences that he can sometimes be induced to tell.

The word that describes him physically is "lanky." He is that. With his coat of tan, his panama hat made like a sombrero and his soft, drawling voice, he could pass as a cowboy on leave from the ranch.

He thinks the "revolution" will be bloody, but not so much so as the French Revolution.

"We are given to calling the mass of the people ignorant," he explained. "I doubt that. There has been a lot of civilizing going on in the world since the French Revolution. There are too many fellows like you and I who don't want to have any violence.

"Still, some of it can't be avoided. When you have some men on the bottom saying, 'Kill every man with a white collar,' and some on the top saying, 'Turn the machine guns on them if they won't work,' then there's going to be a fight."

His Impressions of St. Louis

Wright's impression of St. Louis changed during his visit here. The morning after his arrival at Hotel Statler he said: "When I come to St. Louis I feel like a man who has gone into a tunnel." That afternoon, standing on the top of Art Hill, he confessed:

"Well, this is a different side of St. Louis than any I ever saw. There certainly is nothing oppressive about this." He gazed out over the West End.

"Are all those red roofs on apartment houses?" he asked, and the writer replied that most of them were.

"St. Louis is a homeless city," he laughed. "Those rows of apartment houses make me think of the cliff dwellers' villages on the sides of canyons. It is very pretty, but I never can enthuse over cities. Put the Sierras back of that view, and the city would look like a bump—just a little bump." The novelist, it may be added, has never lived in a city of any considerable size. His present home is Tucson, Ariz.

He was very favorably impressed with the Art Museum, particularly the statuary. While there, however, he ran across Boris Anisfeld's exhibition of Russian "modernist" pictures. He gazed at the pink camels and purple bird dogs in unfeigned disgust.

"Isn't that damnable!" he burst out. "And when there are so many good things, too!"

Writes Books, Not Literature

Then he got to talking about literature. "You know, I understand my limitations," he said. "I don't write literature—I write books. You never can tell who has the literary bug, though. One of my best friends is a hard-headed Irishman, who puts through big engineering projects in Arizona. One day he said to me:

"'Wright, why isn't the world producin' anny good literatoor these days?'

"'Thanking you very kindly, Bill' said I, 'I think it is because the genius of the world is finding expression in other ways. This is the day of great mechanical exploits. The genius of this age is inventive. If you, for instance, had lived in a certain age, you would have been a great sculptor; in another, a great poet; in another, a great warrior. Living now, you are a great engineer.'

"'Wright,' he said, shamefacedly, 'I did write a novel wanst—I started one.'

"'What happened to it?' I said.

"'Ah, 'twas too good, too good,' he said, with regret. 'I made the heroine so swate and the hero so irresistible in the furrst chapter that I had to marry them in the second; and I made the villain such a blackguard that I had to kill him in the third, and the d—— novel was over before it was hardly started.'"

"The main thing," Wright veered off, "is not the man, but the job. When a man has done his best, that's all he can do, and somebody else must carry on with the job.

The Men and the Job

"I knew a young woman, a social worker. She was doing lots of good, but she was ruining her nerves, and getting all fussed. I tried to steady her. One day we were riding in the desert. I jumped off and picked up a handfull of shells. There were thousands in my hand.

"'We've gone down 1300 feet here, and we still find them. They're all over several states,' I said. 'How many do you suppose there are in all?'

"'It's absolutely staggering; the mind cannot grasp it,' she replied.

"I threw the handful down, and one stuck on the tip of my finger. I held it up.

"'That's you and your reforms,' I said.

"She was a little angry for a while, but finally she admitted the point."

The writer asked Wright if he meant that the answer to everything is, "What's the use!"

"Not at all," he replied, quickly. "The answer is: Take your work seriously, but not yourself. My first commandment is: Thou shalt not kid thyself.

The Useful and the Useless

"There are only two classes of men in this country—useful and useless. One of them has to go. When we had no further use for our tails, we lost them.

"Two kinds of royalties have ruled the world—the royalty of strength and the royalty of privilege. I believe the royal family of tomorrow will be that of service. A man will be judged by what he does for the community.

"I made that statement to two audiences within a week not long ago. One was composed of 1500 workmen in a foundry, and the other contained so many millionaires the police guarded the hotel where they met to keep the Reds from bombing it."

Reverting to the subject that always is uppermost in his mind, the "revolution," Wright mused:

"I wonder what the farmer will do. He is the queerest creature of all. If anybody can tell what the American farmer will do next, he is a marvel. We are accustomed to think them reactionary, and I rather believe they are. Most of them would probably vote the straight Republican ticket, even if they were balloting on members of a soviet. However, one does strike the ultra-progressive type.

"One of these came down to my ranch one day. He said he heard I was going into dairying, and

and a Peaceable One, Says Leading Race Educator,

Can Certainly Be Found

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.

"AN APOLOGY from the colored people would not solve nor simplify this problem, even if I were authorized to make it. And I am not so authorized. We make no claim to perfection; we confess our share of responsibility. But the negro masses have made it plain to their leaders that no discussion of the present-day race conflicts in America will have their approval, which assumes that the blacks are more to blame than the whites."

Not the voice of Booker T. Washington, but much of his spirit is heard in that utterance. Emmett J. Scott was private secretary to the negro chief at Tuskegee Institute for 18 years, and spent a total of 22 years at the center of Afro-American culture. During the war with Germany, Dr. Scott served as a special assistant to the Secretary of War, a post which he resigned June 30 of this year to become secretary-treasurer of Howard University. Germany was beaten, peace had returned.

Two weeks later battles were raging in the streets of Washington. No one denies that white mobs began the strife. And no one denies that the blacks retaliated. The shadows of the White House and of Howard University, miles apart, became centers of conflict. The Police Department abdicated. Grinning citizens went o[illegible] "to see the fun" and were brought home with the more innocent dead. Federal troops finally recaptured Washington from the enemy, who retreated westward over the Alleghenies and fought in Chicago. It was then that I found Dr. Scott in his office at the university and asked him if he thought the whites and colored people of the United States were civilized enough to live together without making their common flag the symbol of chronic massacres.

South Should Lead in Settling Question, Says Dr. E. J. Scott

"I WAS born in the South. I have labored there. The masses of the negro people live there. For many years to come this will be true, and that section should take the lead in establishing definitely friendly relations between the races. The time has come when there is more than a sentimental motive for doing so. The new motive is economic, and it applies to every part of the country where workmen are scarce and the worth of the black man as a laborer has been demonstrated. Every American community must soon realize that it cannot permit lawless groups to persecute the negro if it wishes to enjoy the benefit of his economic contribution."

"If our ideals and professions are not moonshine and hypocrisy, then a peaceable solution will certainly be found," Dr. Scott began. "I confess there is much in the record to discourage optimism. During 1917 and 1918 the colored people of America gave a demonstration of patriotic loyalty, efficiency and courage unexcelled by any other element of our population. Democracy was at stake, yet during these critical years 100 colored men and women were lynched in the United States, more than ever before during a like period. That was discouraging."

Solution Can Be Found

Then Dr. Scott smiled at a happy recollection. "In the great victory parade in Atlanta an old colored man was perhaps the proudest marcher in the line. He bore aloft a banner attesting that 11 of his sons were serving in the army of the United States. It must have been a hard blow for him to learn that he had been topped by another old man of his race from Louisiana, who gave 15 boys to the fighting forces. But this must have hurt him still more."

Dr. Scott held up a Georgia newspaper. It contained the story of two young colored women, who, being pursued by two delirious white youths, sought shelter behind the locked doors of a neighbor's home. The white men beat on the door to break it down. An old negro came out, armed with a gun and ordered the assailants away. The white men attacked him. The old defender of womanhood shot one of the men. A white mob sent the colored man to a horrible death by lynching.

"But even through this dark scene in American life some pure, hopeful light shines," Dr. Scott resumed. "That terrible episode shocked the South. Listen to the Atlanta Constitution, which, in concluding a long editorial denunciation of the offenders, says: 'This monstrous affair does not concern Telfair County nor Georgia alone, but the American republic as a whole; and we might as well look the future squarely in the face and be prepared to accept Federal jurisdiction in crimes of this kind if our own State has not the courage to meet the situation and apply the remedy.'"

South Should Take Lead

That editorial was printed on July 25, when Chicago was entering her separate argument for Federal regulation of race wars.

"I was born in the South. I have labored there. The masses of the negro people live there. For many years to come this will be true, and that section should take the lead in establishing definitely friendly relations between the races. The time has come when there is more than a sentimental motive for doing so. The new motive is economic, and it applies to every part of the country where workmen are scarce and the worth of the black man as a laborer has been demonstrated. Every American community must soon realize that it cannot permit lawless groups to persecute the negro if it wishes to enjoy the benefit of his economic contribution.

"On the 1918 basis of 1,000,000 immigrants a year, the United States is now suffering from a deficit of at least 4,000,000 workers. And there will be a continuing deficit for while there is no immigration many foreign residents of the country are returning to Europe. The colored man has profited from this, and, of course, he knows it. He would, indeed, be the mental inferior of other Americans if he did not. I do not believe he plans to take an unjust or improper advantage of the circumstances, but it certainly does not weaken his claim to ordinary justice, which is all he asks of his fellow men.

"There is an interesting economic background to the Washington riots," Dr. Scott continued. "During 1917 and 1918 the Government needed many thousands of additional employes, as you know. Yet in many departments prejudice against the colored people remained strong and effective enough to bar them from the public service. This produced a curious and unexpected result: it acted rather like a boomerang. Private employers in the District of Columbia lost their white workers to the Government in very large numbers. The average salary of white men who went to the Government remained at $1200 or $1400 a year. But the skilled colored mechanic whom prejudice excluded from the public service found himself earning $5 to $8 a day. By a twist of events he had become the economic superior of many of his white neighbors here in the District.

"Now, it can hardly be said that the negro was to blame for this entirely natural effect of obvious causes. Yet he has been blamed by many envious persons, who would have us believe that the colored worker has got 'out of his place' and become a menace because employers pay him more than they used to." Dr. Scott smiled again. "I have some old fellows working around the university grounds here who collect $3.50 a day from us. They received about $1.25 under the pre-war wage standards. I can't abuse them and get a mob to chase them to make them work for less, but I fear that expedient is sometimes resorted to elsewhere in the economic struggle. It is one kind of human nature to strike at your most exposed competitor and the colored man is frequently the easiest target.

Tactics Undermining Democracy

"But such tactics, if permitted to continue, simply undermine our democracy and cannot possibly bring a solution of the problem. Thoughtful teachers, students and employers are coming to see this quite clearly. Side by side with the disgrace of lynching there is growing up in the South a determination among the better elements of both races to stop this evil before it engulfs the whole nation. So we have here an open letter to white college men of the South, signed by members of the faculties of 11 different state universities in the South in which a fine tribute is paid to the negro, and all are reminded that 'no people is stirred to higher things when habitually referred to in disparaging or contemptuous terms. Ordinary human beings live up to or down to the role assigned them by their neighbors.'

"Beside that fine letter may be placed the ringing denunciation by Gov. Bickett of North Carolina of the current effort to revive the Ku Klux Klan, in which he asserts: 'Just now all of us need to be considerate and kind and trustful in our dealings with the negro; the best and the wisest men in both races are.' On the encouraging side also there is the example of such Southern employers as the Tennessee Coal and Iron Co., which prizes its colored workers so highly that it it is catering on a large scale to the black man's strongest desires by providing fine facilities for education of his children, and other agencies for his welfare.

"No, I am not despondent over the outlook.

A Brief for League of Nations as Preventive of War by a Noted War Correspondent

Frederick Palmer Deplores the Spirit of Partisanship That Rages Around Covenant That Concerns the Whole Structure of World Civilization.

FREDERICK PALMER, the most widely known of American war correspondents, has had perhaps a larger experience of conflicts than any man living. He covered the Greco-Turkish war of 1896, the Phillipine campaign, the Boxer uprising, the Russo-Japanese war, various uprisings in central America and the first and second Balkan wars. In the first year of the Great War, he was with the British Army representing the press of the United States. Soon after we entered the war, Gen. Pershing appointed Palmer chief censor on the General Headquarters staff with the title of Major. He is the author of a [illegible] books. His "America in France" is a fine story of the work and services of our army [illegible] the great conflict.

By FREDERICK PALMER.

WE ARE making the league of nations a partisan question, when it is no more partisan than fresh air for school children or laboratory experiments to find a cure for tuberculosis or snake bite. It no more revolves around a single statesman's personality than the president of a railway is indispensable to the daily schedule of trains. Woodrow Wilson is one man, and 10,000,000 men have died in battle on the continent of Europe. He is 60 years old, with, perhaps, 20 years of life before him. The league of nations concerns the life and livelihood of billions of human beings for generations to come and the whole structure of world civilization.

> THE issue is between war and peace. If we are against the league, then let us arm. We cannot be the kind of partner in the league who suspects all his other partners of trying to take advantage of him. If we are for the league, then we cannot expect the first draft to be perfect. To start making reservations is to undermine world confidence in the league. We must rely on human nature, as we do in our relations with our neighbors, to meet fair play in kind.—FREDERICK PALMER.

I have voted the Republican ticket, and I may connect the responsibility of the Democratic administration with the management of the post-office, but I refuse to rely exclusively on this administration or on any political party, grooming for the campaign of 1920, for the future welfare of American humanity or of humanity in general.

We are told that the world war was inevitable. If so, it was the product of the old system. Do we want to continue the old system in order to make another world war inevitable? Or are we going to try a new system? Many observers in Europe hold that if the new system—the league of nations—had been in existence in 1914, we should have avoided the cataclysm which has immersed the wreckage of nations in the blood of their sons. This supposition of itself calls to the imagination of every progressive human being.

Soldiers Fought to End All War

The soldiers who fought in Europe were fighting to preserve their children from another such war, as I have heard them say again and again. That was their sense of self-preservation, the preservation of humanity from a repetition of the late orgy of human slaughter. The cry of the allied cause was not loot, as in the old days, but to end war. All allied propaganda in this modern antitoxin age found that it must avoid any reference to the glory and adventure of war, which once had its appeal to that human nature which the cynics say cannot be changed. Shall we be true in action to the thought which was the inspiration of the allied cause, now that the cause has won?

Now, in these days, when dirigibles and planes are crossing the Atlantic and drawing the nations still closer together, the statesmen and Generals who foregathered to make a treaty of peace under the direct mandate of modern democracy, did not follow in the reactionary steps of the Holy Alliance. Instead of restoring fallen Kings to thrones, they devised a covenant of a league of nations, which looks forward to a universal era of counsel and democracy, in which each nations shall be made secure in self-government in its own land. Are we to invoke the Monroe Doctrine against the very principles which it was meant to follow?

"League Essential Part of Treaty"

The purpose of the league of nations is to try to stop war. To try to stop war! Are we against trying? Those who say that The Hague conference and other methods devised in the past have failed only open the way for argument against their contention. Diplomacy has not stopped all wars, but it has stopped many wars. The Hague conference was not a failure, any more than any other effort, including any book, play or talk or legal disquisition or newspaper editorial which had for its object the teaching of peace or the devising of means to insure it. Within recent times the Venezuelan dispute, the Agadir incident, the Japanese school question, the firing of the Russian fleet on British trawlers, all were incidents which in the old days might have put the match to powder.

There were two great influences which I observed at the Paris peace conference. One was the passion of the old human nature which cynics say can never be improved—and, therefore, if their advice were followed, would not be improved—with its racial hates, its suspicions, its predatory desire for annexations, and its spirit of revenge seeking retributory punishment for a beaten foe. The other sought to counteract and minimize all these influences which would breed future wars, and to draw the nations of the world together in an agreement that would be worthy of the dreams of a lasting peace of the men who had given their lives to end war.

In the complex and bubbling play of forces, whether medieval or far-seeing, which required long discussion and compromise, the United States, with no territorial objects to gain, had an arbitral, pacific and mighty part. The league of nations had to become an insperable part of the treaty. As Mr. Wickersham soon found when he went abroad in a critical mood, this could not be otherwise in the practical working out of negotiations, as everyone else who has followed the peace conference knows. Though the covenant is far from the desires of extreme pacifists, who forget how arduous progress must be, it is the most forward practical step in international peace ever taken.

The old objects of conquest and the old grounds of suspicion are largely removed. The German and Austrian empires, formed according to the old system, by the forcible annexation of conquered peoples, by armies formed around royal dynasties, are resolved into as many states as there are races or people with language or practical interests in common dwelling within recognized territorial areas. Intolerable as is the Shantung provision, we must rejoice that far less than ever before, where the mixture of races leaves the location of boundaries in doubt, is the decision to be by barter of human beings at a council table. The doctrine of self-determination is invoked in the place of intrigue and bloodshed. While the citizens are not to decide as to their future nationality in all the disputed areas, the method is to be applied in five of the cases. How far public opinion may progress is shown by the declaration of thrifty, wise and happy little Denmark, that she does not wish to annex a part of Schleswig, which is peopled by Germans.

A Wondrous Change in Methods

This is a wondrous thing—a thing to make Louis XIV, King George III and Frederick the Great turn in their graves, while William Hohenzollern saws wood at Amerongen. Indeed, it shows that if human nature has not changed, its method of expression has changed. A hundred years is not a long time in the history of this old planet, but it is only a century and a half since George III on his throne stood for taxation without representation, and Frederick the Great on his mad wars of annexation the business of Prussia.

Carrying a step further the common law, which does not permit a man to overrun his neighbor's property, and a step further the Constitution of the United States, which does not permit the big State of Pennsylvania to overrun the little State of Delaware, the league of nations will not permit one of the stronger old nations to overrun one of the small young nations, to which the covenant and the treaty gave birth. It is more than a step—a stride—of a significance we hardly realize, so accustomed have we become to sensational events within the last five years.

Is the nation which freed Cuba and set her on her feet; which returned the Boxer indemnity to China; which brought popular education and sanitation to Porto Rico and the Philippines; which has sent its missionaries and teachers to distant lands, to repudiate the covenant, a covenant so eminently in keeping with its traditions and ideals?

But may we not be required to police Armenia or Esthonia? Does not the league mean we shall Smith-Towner Bill.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your issue of July 29 appeared an article referring to Senator Smith of Georgia as having declared in the Senate that the Smith-Towner educational bill was being opposed by the Roman Catholic clergy and organizations.

He seems to think we should not express our views of a bill which he has introduced and which means a great deal to all the people of this entire nation.

The bill allows the President to appoint one man, who is given the power to control the entire educational system of these United States, it does not matter if it be Catholic, Jewish, Protestant or any private school. No liberty-loving man or woman that believes in justice wants our educational system Hooverized. Centralization of power and one-man control in any line, whether it be education, food, railroads, coal mines, etc., should be opposed. It creates too much power for a certain group. It creates a special-interest class of profiteers and politicians.

It would not be a very hard task for our profiteers to get in touch with this one man, at Washington, and have him create a political machine, with those whom he appoints throughout the country, so the profiteers could get their favored men in power.

Every parent has a right to educate his own child according to his own desire, so long as the child is educated up to the standard of the public schools in the three R's and is taught to stand by the country, as was shown in this last war, 45 per cent of the army and navy being Catholic.

Page 3, lines 4 to 9, of this bill states "all officers, clerks and employes employed in or by any office, bureau, division, board or branch of the Government, transferred in accordance with the provision of this act to the Department of Education at their existing grades and salaries."

Section 4 mentions taking over the buildings and premises.

If this Smith bill refers to public schools only, why doesn't he say so? Why doesn't he say in his bill that private schools are not included?

Catholics are not opposed to public schools in a nation such as ours, where there are so many different denominations. Catholics ask for the same right to have their children instructed in their own parochial schools.

Catholics have free high schools, also universities, which refutes his statement that we believe in ignorance. Our scholars stand the test with any school, in any grade.

The Smith-Towner bill is undemocratic and un-American. It takes away the power from the people to elect their own public School Boards and leaves to one man at Washington, at a salary of $12,000 per annum the power to say who shall direct any school, whether public or private, and make changes according to this one man's ideas.

This bill should be opposed by every true American to show we do not believe in centralized, one-man power. Let us keep our school system out of politics.

AMERICAN-BORN CATHOLIC.

The Shantung Settlement.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Senators Reed and McCormick denounce the Shantung settlement. Do they know that the McKinley administration recognized the agreement whereby Germany acquired that peninsula? Japan won the province by force of arms from Germany. Japan then made an agreement with China, France and England, establishing her right of possession. The Wilson administration had nothing to do with these agreements, as the United States had not yet entered the war. Therefore, if any embarrassment was caused the President, acting in the capacity of umpire, it was caused by the recognition the McKinley administration had given the original German treaty, which forced these privileges from China after the Boxer trouble. What could the President do? Japan won by conquest the provinces from Germany, and by treaty she fixed her right to hold it.

The anti-leaguers say we should attend to our own business. Why then do most of them advocate Ireland's cause?

Give us the league, it stands for justice, and will give force to international law.

LEONARD A. FECHTER.

Licensing Fishermen.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I would like to say a few words in regard to the littleness of some of our laws which are introduced and passed by a few 2x4 lawmakers who should be hoeing cotton instead of legislating. For instance a license is required for a poor little fisherman with a hook and line who perhaps gets an outing twice a year and considers himself lucky if he catches a couple of small fish, while the profiteers are piling up their millions with no restraint whatever. The man that introduced this hook-and-line license bill should be compelled to apologize to the general public. It is one of the most picayunish laws that ever was dished out to a liberty loving people.

L. S. HURST.

THE CRISIS IN RIVER TRAFFIC.

What are the Senators and Congressmen from the Mississippi Valley doing to insure the permanence of the inland water traffic instituted by the Government during the war?

Is there a single one of these men, all of whose constituencies are vitally interested in the revival of river business—without which the whole valley has fallen into an economic disadvantage as compared with territory having both water and rail traffic—who actually knows what is going on or realizes how critical is the condition of the movement at this time, when the railroads are apparently about to be returned to their owners?

Is there one man in Washington who stands out as the informed and fighting champion of this great cause, which means so much to the valley?

Is there anyone in Congress who knows that, despite the friendship of the Director-General of Railroads, who says the rivers are to be given a thorough test, there are as many ways of killing the waterways as there are of killing cats, every one of which is being sedulously employed some place between the top of the railroad organization and that profound depth at which the boats are operated on the river?

Do any of these men at Washington, all of whom ought to be in this fight with every ounce of the great influence they can wield for representing more than half the people of the United States, know how the matter of rate adjustments between the boats and the railroads stands at this minute, when only the assurance of Mr. Hines prevents everyone interested in the river from being panic stricken by the short time in which the rivers are to get most of what they require if they really are to be revived?

Do any of these men know that since last March there have been applications before the Railroad Administration for joint water and rail rates in the hinterland upon both sides of the Lower Mississippi, not one of which has been acted upon and not one of which there is any promise of getting until transfer terminals upon the river are built?

Why should all these rate adjustments wait until transfer terminals are built? Isn't the Director-General's assurance that the Railroad Administration will build them a sufficient assurance to those who make rates that the terminals will be there when they are needed?

It is estimated that the transfer terminals at East St. Louis, Memphis, Vicksburg and New Orleans will cost $3,000,000. Presumably they cannot be built within less than six months?

Will Mr. Hines, the first friend of the rivers, the man to whom they look for everything they must have to revive, be there in six months?

Will Mr. Chambers, who says the rivers are to have all the rates for which they have applied when the terminals are built, be there in six months?

Congressman Esch, chairman of the Railroad Committee in the House, says his committee is not contemplating Government control of the railroads after the first of next January, when the President has said they will be returned to their owners.

In what condition would that leave the rivers? Would they be able to secure rate adjustments beyond that time by appealing to the Interstate Commerce Commission under legislation to be enacted by Congress? The best possible authority for the statement that this will be difficult, if not impossible, is the Director-General of Railroads, Mr. Hines. He told the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate that all these rate adjustments should be made in the period of Government control of railroads, when the Government has arbitrary power to make them. He said he did not believe co-operation forced upon the railroads by law would be satisfactory to the rivers.

This is the situation which from day to day drifts, with the first of January now rushing upon us.

Are we to lose everything we have gained because of our own apathy and the carelessness of our representatives at Washington?

Why doesn't the valley go to Mr. Hines and demand that all these rate adjustments be made while they can be made? Mr. Hines himself says this is the time to get them, so not much argument will have to be wasted on him.

It seems that the great objective in this matter has largely been lost sight of, both here and at Washington. We are more interested in peccadilloes than in things that count. We have plenty of people, even Congressmen, inquiring about salaries on the river and quarreling over personnel in organization, but nobody fighting for the rate adjustments without which the river movement must perish as surely as a tree dies without nourishing roots.

We have plenty of people trying to work up a fight between St. Louis and New Orleans, whose interests are in no wise antipathetic, but nobody paying the last attention to what the traditional enemies of the river, the railroads, are doing, though we may be sure they are both resourceful and vigilant.

This is not the way to revive the inland waterways. It can never be done by a lot of sleeping Senators and Congressmen in Washington, any one of whom could, by throwing himself into the fight, not only force the rate adjustments the rivers ask, but unmask all the conspirators whose system of interference against the boat service would shame a football coach.

This is the critical time for the rivers.

Are we to lose this great fight by default?

FORD AND THE FARMER.

The farmer of the future, Henry Ford says, will work only 20 days a year. The tractor is the instrument that is going to perform this miracle.

Possibly Henry is right. But if it is a fact that he is producing a machine that is going to reduce the farmer's working year to 20 days, the world, the flesh and the farmer should unite in asking for an injunction against the further operation of Henry's genius along this line. No sadder fate could befall the tiller of the soil than to be sentenced to 345 days of idleness per annum. And what would happen to the cosmos generally if the farmers of North Dakota, for example, had nothing to do seventeen-eighteenths of the time except to hatch schemes for enslaving the rest of us? With such a calendar of ignoble ease and concurrent affluence as Henry is plotting for the farmer, Brother Townley and his nonpartisan league would have the rest of us blacking their boots, massaging their scalps and shaving their eyebrows.

Let us be just to the farmer. Let him have the same opportunity as other folks have to toil and sweat and fardels bear. Let us stand stalwartly against the proposition to make the farmer as complete an unearned incrementer as the late crowned heads of Europe or our own Nabobs of Newport.

Henry Ford must not be permitted to make a monkey of the man with the hoe.

THE NEW ST. LOUIS.

From the Indianapolis Times.

OVER on the banks of the Mississippi Indianapolis has a sister city that is surprising the country in her reawakening. This city a few years ago was said even by many of her own citizens to be at the end of her journey. In population and in business growth the town was believed by other cities generally to be through. Their populations boosted by war activities, Cleveland and Detroit were claiming to have passed St. Louis on the census rolls, and modest Boston ventured a similar assertion.

But there is a new spirit in St. Louis today, which should inspire Indianapolis. The younger element of the old Missouri town is in the saddle and this element has decided the town is entitled to a lot more than it has. And the bright young chaps of the place are going out after everything St. Louis is entitled to. They are bringing more factories to town. They are encouraging amusements, needed by working populations, to come. They are not tying everything up with rules and regulations, but are laying down the general rule of a square deal to everybody.

St. Louis has lost its biggest burden in the saloon. The energy and money that once went into booze and made the city sordid is going into streets, parks, river improvements, public buildings, homes and happiness. The traveler entering and leaving St. Louis is handed a beautifully illustrated booklet showing places of beauty and interest in the city. Where to go for pleasure, where to buy anything you may want, where to worship, where to send your children to school, how to ship freight, how the street cars are routed—everything is told in a newsy, interesting way that makes good reading, and in a way that lingers in the reader's memory.

St. Louis policemen have become not only officers of the law but civic agents of the city. It is their duty now not only to arrest, but to advise and direct the stranger, set right the bewildered and be a big brother to women and children. The old gruff manner of yelling at a jay walker and a jay driver is gone. Just as stern as ever, the new policeman in St. Louis is patient and persuasive and not abusive.

The town is cleaning up. Rubbish, old papers and such things are religiously kept from the streets. The word has gone around that things are to be different. The mossbacks are shaking off the moss and bestirring themselves to the duties the new sense of citizenship imposes.

It is a pleasure to praise this spirit—in St. Louis and in Indianapolis.

"LOVE?"

WAS the friendship you offered me but a cloak for that nameless something
Which steals into our lives
As shadowless as mist
And disrupts our calm and peace
And makes us say and do things
Foreign to our way?
What is this fire which burns
And threatens to consume us
Which is mighty
But not stronger
Than we?

Most of us have exercised our sense of humor at the expense of peace, but this joke from the Canton (China) Times appears to have walked off with the prize:

"Commander Sheng Hung-Ying, ex-Defense Commissioner of Yan-Lim, who obtained a loan of $3000 from the Peace Preservation Bureau in Hap-Pao for the support of his troops when fighting against Lung Chi Kuang's forces in Kiungchow, has redeemed his loan by handing over a number of firearms instead of ready cash."

Jackson, Mo., announces the eleventh annual reunion of the Cape Girardeau Homecomers' Association on Aug. 28, 29 and 30, with all sorts of spectacles and "other variegated attractions." There goes another word from our language! Why can't we get together and secure an armistice with the people who are exterminating English? We may be able to save something in that way, whereas the way we are going we can only lose all.

It looks as if the high cost of living were about to go into a tail-spin.

Pretty hard to say what this notice in an East Side newspaper means exactly, but there is no objection to interpretations:

In behalf of the past favors from those who have respected our confused conditions of personal neighborhood attitude I wish to express a gratitude in fullest terms and to those who betrayed my trust in them, and everlasting wish for a discontinuance of notice as a past neighbor. MRS. EVA POTTER.

HOW DOES THIS SQUARE WITH THIS!

(New York Evening World.)

"Who is profiteering?" Mr. John Slater, chairman of Committee on Resolutions, New York State Retail Shoe Dealers' Association, was asked.

"The retail dealers, the wholesalers, the manufacturers and the tanners are positively not profiteering," Mr. Slater answered. "The retailers in normal times figured on 30 to 40 per cent profit. Some, not many, whose risks are greater than others, have been compelled to allow themselves at present a 50 per cent margin for profit. The wholesalers, manufacturers and tanners are figuring on no higher per cent of profit than they earned before the war. The increased cost of hides and increased wages to employes is the rock bottom cause of high shoe prices."

"What will be the cost next fall of a pair of shoes which now costs the public $12?" Mr. Slater was asked.

"Anywhere from $16 to $20, and the same ratio of increase will apply to all grades of footwear," was the answer.

Prosperity in the leather trade is indicated in the quarterly statement of the Central Leather company, just made public.

In the three months ended June 30 the corporation had a net income from operations of $5,798,832, after allowing for the payment of Federal taxes. This was an increase of $2,125,911 over the corresponding quarter last year, or 57 per cent.

Outside income was $243,668, and a balance of $4,239,345 was left after interest had been paid on the funded debt. The part of this available for common stock dividends was equal to $9.21 a share, compared with $3.85 in the June quarter of 1918.

In the six months ended June 30, examination of the quarterly report shows, the net operating income was $9,495,622, a gain of $3,203,098, or 50 per cent over the result in the initial half of last year.

The surplus for the six months was $4,194,277, after paying dividends.

Further Distrust Will Crush New Teuton Spirit, Maximilian Harden Says

Asserts Reforms Are Real and Allies Should Applaud Speeches of Ministers Promising Work to Rebuild Devastation.

By MAXIMILIAN HARDEN.

BERLIN, Aug. 5.—Four days after peace was signed the Minister President of the German republic said in the National Assembly: "From a small group whose ideal is the restoration of an armed empire, proud of the number of its bayonets, comes a cry for revenge. This ideal and this cry we combat with all our force. We must and will work, and we will turn with repulsion from the thought of revenge."

Then the Foreign Minister exclaimed: "We wish to show ourselves to the world as a peaceful nation. The sword cannot and must not longer be the means of German diplomacy. The activity and the eagerness with which we wish to begin and to complete the reconstruction of devastated Western France shall be our revenge."

As once in Athens were received the tidings of the victory at Marathon, so in the lands of the allied and associated Powers ought to be hailed the reports of these speeches, for they not only assure the victory, but they prove the will for peace.

Distrust will undoubtedly still hiss that words are cheap and "how could beaten, disarmed Germany talk otherwise? The boche is tricky, and now, because he cannot do anything else, he seeks to gain the world's confidence by trickery, masking as a pacifist."

Speeches Show Change.

Who thinks this error, and his error may become dangerous for humanity, and therefore for himself. Germany unfortunately spoke differently even after defeat. Otherwise there would have been a better treaty and one better calculated to maintain calm in the work. The fact that now such ministerial speeches are possible and that they gain the applause of the majority in Parliament indicates the beginning of a change in German spirit. To rejoice over this change and to promote it with friendly heart is recommended by duty and interest to everyone who does not wish to annihilate Germany and who would collaborate in winning for it a realization of all the forward-pointing thoughts of humanity.

For five years the militarists yelled into the ears of the German people: "Your annihilation is the aim of the enemy. If you soften for an hour, if you appear tired or hesitant in waging this most cruel of wars, you will be lost to your enemies. To be sure, your enemies talk of right and justice, but behind this cloak of phrases lurks the greed of gain and a burning wish to break the power of a long-envied competitor. It is a struggle to the death, and you have no other choice."

Under pressure of the military censorship such speeches were encouraged and circulated. All the voices of conscience could never be raised loudly enough to contradict them.

Militarists Still Clamor.

Since the peace now arranged is frightfully hard for Germany and gives to other European countries colossal increase of power, the British empire alone acquiring territory equal to the area of the United Kingdom, surviving militarists now assert that their prophecy has proved right, and Germany's annihilation was the goal of the war.

This matter needs public clarification before it shall be too late. I have never believed that high leadership in government could countenance or desire the annihilation of enemies. Such a policy would unfurl the war flag continually, for no nation can be so easily intoxicated by its achievements or so deeply embittered as to regard itself as the measure for all things.

It seems the worst folly or madness to suppose a nation could be annihilated which had prospered through four centuries and to which belong at least 80,000,000 people; which half a century ago laboriously fought for and obtained the union of its people, with the exception of those in German Austria, and which in the late war gave the most terrible proof of its virility.

The nearest approach to annihilation might have come if the army had been shaken to pieces and the citizenry had become bloodless from privation. But then the entente cordiale of humanity and of reason would have triumphed in the camp of our enemies

Germany Forced Treaty.

The peace treaty was drawn in its present terms, after all largely because of the lack of wisdom and the deceitful course of those governing in Germany, who felt themselves under compulsion to act as they did. Yet now those in influence in the league of nations should take grateful note of such speeches as the German Ministers Bauer and Mueller could make in less than four weeks after the treaty was signed.

These speeches sketch the outline of a program which the Government of Social Democrats and Catholics will carry out. If the cement of community of power can hold these parties together they can command a small but sufficient majority which will be broadened as soon as the Bourgeoisie and the Democrats again enter the Government.

The political program has been adapted to this prospect. It rejects reaction, revolution, monarchism and communion with impartial brusqueness and it dares even condemn the dictatorship of the proletariat, which had seemed essential, at least for the transition period, to the church fathers of German Socialism. Herr Bauer's Socialism does not behave itself more wildly than the cause Premier Lloyd George championed in the battle against the owners of municipal estates, or than causes that President Wilson has urged from his university days to the time of his fight against the railroad kings.

Only one blind to the spectrum of our industrial culture can expect that there will be no new ordering of property rights, or that participation in management and share in the profits of industry can be withheld from manual laborers. Wisdom and morality join in the free-will grant of that which otherwise would be enforced, and those who brought it about would thereupon make new demands.

The program of the Socialistic and Catholic labor unions for the present seeks sufficient for the needs of the small, and keeps to the flat country without mountains. To the parties to the treaty, however, it offers everything demanded, even promising the will to try to meet unfillable conditions, in order to obtain quiet for the country and to fit it into the world of peace for which all peoples long.

Will Reform Continue?

The reform announcement of this program is worth noting. It asks whether a new world shall really be created or shall the attempt to create it come to naught, as has every other attempt since the Abbe de St. Pierre 200 years ago invited the monarchs of Europe to a Congress to secure peace and to maintain it through an international court of arbitration?

Every later attempt failed because only to the clearest brains had the necessity of pan-human solidarity become conscious, and because since the peace of Utrecht, Europe had swollen to super-power, and there were always those who were dazzled by victory, and there were always the conquered who were ready to plan requitals and revenge. If this soul status were to remain unchanged after the peace of Versailles, then would President Wilson, who wished to materialize the dreams of St. Pierre, Sully, Grotius and Fousseau, fall in the ruins of his hopes.

No unprejudiced person can today assert that Germany is hindering the community of peoples promised in the ancient prophecies. In June the German Peace Congress, after conscientious examination of the facts, publicly declared that decisive blame for the outbreak of the war lay on Germany. In July the Government, freely chosen by popular majority, announced its decision to do everything in any way possible to raise Germany's moral rate of exchange and to seek revenge only in works of brotherly love, so that what German arms had destroyed might be rebuilt by German hands.

No one in Government place dared speak thus in conquered France in 1871. As long as 30 years after Sedan I heard from Gen. Gallifet the confession that he could never again show himself in France if it was known there that he had credited German victory to the superiority of the German army.

Do not the resignation and the modesty of people plunged from the pinnacle of mad power into a joyless life deserve recognition? One on the outside says recognition will be accorded but only after a thorough tryout. Another points to a Germany that survives in parades through the streets, with the abolished flag of empire carried without shame; that permits the playing and singing of the song about the victors' wreaths of the Kaiser, and to the rank and file of all the parties, who subscribed to Deutschland Uber Alles, and who have lived to see Germany made smaller despite mobilization of all the war machinery of a Ghengis Khan.

Another says: "Be patient. When the new Germany shall have completely overcome the old, we will gladly consider how to help it." But we cannot wait, and the real conquest desired by the Western Powers can be achieved only when the enemies of yesterday co-operate to this end.

As the work of constituting the republic, which was the main work of the National Assembly, has been finished, there will soon be an election for a new Parliament. If from the west no warmer wind blows into our poor country, if the Government's open profession of good will awakens no friendly echo, and if agitation is facilitated for militarists and nationalists by continued demands for the surrender of the Kaiser, the election victories are pretty sure to go to the extremists on the right and left.

Again, it will be said that the will of our enemies to annihilate us will not be bent, and therefore change of our fate can only be had by force of arms and alliances with other dissatisfied ones or by world revolution.

Can the founders of the league of nations desire a German parliamentary majority composed of monarchists and communists? These deadly hostile elements could be held together for a while by their common wish for power and their common hate of the bourgeoisie.

We don't ask or hope for release from any reparation or other duty, but only for soft waftings of warm air calling to use that we all understand one another again and will try to live in brotherly harmony on the firm ground of equal human rights. Not much longer can Germany wait. "Without the sun the noblest instinct perishes."

Events in the Social World...

Another Month Will See St. Louis Summer Tourists and Resort Goers Returning for Gay Autumn Social Season—Resumption of Veiled Prophet's Ball Expected to Bring Out Record Number of Debutantes.

IN another month most of the St. Louisans who have been enjoying the easy-going summer-resort life at the different mountain, lake and seashore resorts will turn their faces homeward to prepare for the social gaieties of the coming fall and winter.

The season this year will no doubt be the gayest since before the war, and there will probably be an exceptionally large number of debutantes to divide honors with the autumn brides.

The Veiled Prophet's Ball will be held this October for the first time since 1916, starting as usual the social activities for the coming winter and the majority of the "debs" will make their bow to society then.

Although August is usually an unpopular month for brides, so far two important weddings have been scheduled. On the twenty-seventh, Miss Julie Goode will become the bride of Maj. William E. Burr at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Julia C. Cabanne of 5365 Cabanne avenue, and on Wednesday of this week the marriage of Miss Ruth Parkhurst, formerly of St. Louis, to Joseph Large of Newark, N. J., will take place at Allenhurst, N. FLINT GARRISON ELECTED PRESIDENT OF CIVIC LEAGUE

Will Announce General Policy of Organization at First Meeting in Fall.

Flint Garrison, 5835 Bartmer avenue, who was Democratic candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen at the last November election, has been elected President of the Civic League to succeed Frank P. Crunden, the executive board and nominating committee of that body announced yesterday. He is president of a printing company.

Crunden, who has been president for two terms, was not up for re-election.

Garrison is the [illegible] of the League platform of 1918, pledging the League to oppose special privilege in local Government, and also of the report of the United Railways committee of that body pointing to the receivership as the only way out of the street railway difficulty and condemning the Mayor's deal. He will announce the general policy of the League for the year at the first meeting of that organization in the early fall.

Vacancies in the executive board, occurring annually, have been filled by the election of the following: Harlan E. Read, publicist; Charles Rippin, transportation commissioner Merchants Exchange; J. D. Johnson, attorney, chairman the United Railways committee; the Rev. Father Russell Wilbur, Catholic priest; and Mrs. H. C. January, secretary Consumers' League.

ST. LOUIS GIRLS TO EXHIBIT CANNING ABILITY AT SEDALIA

Three Will Depart Tomorrow to Take Part in States Fair Competition.

The fame of the St. Louis Boys' and Girls' Canning Clubs will be spread over the State this week by an exhibition team of three St. Louis girl canners, Miss Edith Burr of Soldan High School Club; Miss Ruth Bain of the McKinley Club and Miss Mary Tiernan, Central High pupil, who have been selected to represent the canning clubs of the city at the State fair at Sedalia, Aug. 11-16.

The contestants will depart for Sedalia tomorrow. They will be chaperoned by Miss Mary Mann, leader of the Bryan Mullanphy School Canning Club, and will participate in the State competition for teams of boy and girl canners.

St. Louis boys and girls will have two exhibits at the State fair, one by children of the South Side schools, the other by the classes of North St. Louis. Each exhibit will consist of 125 jars of canned products of various sorts. Thirty varieties of fruits and vegetables will be exhibited.

One of the features of the exhibit will be the name "St. Louis," pricked out artistically with small red peppers in a background of white cut cabbage. Another St. Louis is spelled out in red in jars of chopped pickles. The mascot of the canning crew is a four-leafed clover made of big green peppers canned in cold slaw.

The contestants from the St. Louis Boys' and Girls' Canning Clubs will give demonstrations each day in the Woman's Building.

SOLICITOR LOSES CREDENTIALS

No Longer May Collect for Labor Temple Body.

Credentials and indorsement of H. C. Taylor as a collector for the Tri-City Labor Temple Association have been withdrawn by that association, according to a representative who called on the secretary of the Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Taylor was given credentials by the association some few months ago to solicit money in the Tri-Cities. It was not known at that time that he intended to come to St. Louis. The contract allowed him 50 per cent of all moneys collected. Taylor Taylor still carries these credentials, but the association has asked it be publicly announced that they have been withdrawn and no further donations should be given Taylor on the strength of them.

Action Will Be Taken If Merchants Do Not Remove Bell Phones.

DAUGHTERS SUE TO ANNUL DEEDS

Second Action Follows Attack on Mrs. Mary Halpin's Will.

Suit to set aside conveyances of realty made by the late Mrs. Mary Halpin to her daughters, Katherine and Julia Halpin, was filed yesterday by two other daughters, Mrs. Jennie Boeckmann and Mrs. Mary Canty, who on Friday also filed suit to set aside their mother's will. The property is located at 2201-3-5-7 University street, 2909 North Twenty-second, 1505 Chestnut, which was conveyed to Miss Julia Halpin, and 1517 Chestnut, which was deeded to Miss Katherine Halpin.

The conveyances were executed Nov. 30, 1917. At the same time Mrs. Halpin deeded property at 1513 Chestnut to Mrs. Boeckmann.

In her will Mrs. Halpin left $1 to Mrs. Canty and three parcels of realty to Mrs. Boeckmann, giving the residue of her valuable estate to her other daughters. She died last month. She was the widow of James Halpin, a furnace maker.

PLAN NEGRO COLONY ON MEXICAN BORDER

Free Will M. E. Church to Promote New Free State to Solve Race Problems.

Plans for the colonization of American negroes in a new free state to be set up on the Mexican border, said to have the support of the 200,000 members of the race who comprise the Free Will M. E. Church, will be set in motion at the annual convention and conference of the church, to be held in St. Louis Aug. 12 to 22. The adoption of the colonization program, according to a statement made yesterday by Dr. M. M. Madden of Oklahoma City, a delegate to the convention, will eliminate entirely the race question from the list of problems facing the United States.

"You cannot mix oil and water, nor an inferior race with a superior," Dr. Madden said. "Our movement is nation-wide, and has the support, not only of the 200,000 members of our congregation, but also of hundreds of thousands of independent members of both races throughout the country. Elimination of race trouble would not be the only advantage of the plan. Our state would act as a buffer between the United States and Mexico. Our people would be given rights guaranteed, but not fulfilled, by the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States."

Dr. Madden's plan is that the new state be governed upon a modified territorial principle. Laws shall be made by the negro citizens of the state, but shall be subject to veto by the United States Government. Except for this veto, however, the colony shall be entirely self-governing, and relations with the United States shall be by treaty. The state shall consist of 1000 square miles of territory—500 on nthe American side of the Rio Grande River and 500 on the Mexican side. The United States shall buy the American territory from the individual citizens, and the Mexican territory from the Mexican Government. Negro property in the United States shall be appraised and bought up by the Government, but emigration shall not be compulsory.

Dr. Madden declared yesterday that members of his race will flock into the negro state more rapidly than they can be colonized. "The United States in a few years would be as free of negroes as England and France are," he said. A delegation from the church, Dr. Madden said, will go before Congress and the President, not later than Sept. 12, to suggest the formation of the office of representatives of the negro race to work out details of the plan in conjunction with Government officials.

The campaign at the convention here will be one of agitation and education. Sessions of the conference are to be held at the Free Will M. E. Church at Twenty-third and Adams streets. A tent tabernacle has been erected on the church property to accommodate the delegates and visitors. During the convention Dr. Madden will speak to an audience of both races at the Coliseum.

Tells all good drug and department stores not to take anyone's money unless this delightful new vanishing Cream quickly shows a decided improvement. Try it today at our expense.

The first application of Howard's Buttermilk Cream will astonish you. It creates beauty almost like magic. It actually vanishes from sight and the most heated atmosphere will not produce the least shininess or greasiness of the skin.

No matter whether you are troubled with a poor complexion, wrinkles, puffiness around the eyes, freckles, crows feet or lines around the mouth, ugly finger nails, or just a simple roughness of the face, hands or arms caused by wind or sun, you will find that any or all of these troubles will quickly disappear with the use of Howard's Buttermilk Cream.

To prove this to your complete satisfaction, get a small quantity today at your druggist, with the understanding that they will freely return the purchase money to any dissatisfied user.

BUYERS FROM EAST HERE FOR STYLE SHOW

Pageant of Fashion Brings Merchants in to See Latest Creations at Revue.

Merchants and manufacturers of women's wearing apparel from the Eastern market are coming to St. Louis in large numbers to attend the St. Louis fashion pageant, which is being given in the municipal open-air theater at Forest Park, Aug 12, 13, 19 and 20. Hundreds of buyers and merchants from the Northwest, West, Southwest, South and the near East territory also are coming here. The pageant already has been put on twice this year, Aug. 5 and 6. The number of buyers in the St. Louis market this season is far in excess of any previous season. Merchants and manufacturers say that their house registers show that the visitors are coming from a wider range of territory than heretofore, also that more merchants in the trade territory contiguous to St. Louis is producing a greater number of buyers for the St. Louis market.

This expanse of territory and increase in the already developed territory is attributed in part to the style show, which has not only established St. Louis' claim as a style center, but has developed the garment industry.

There is nothing that has the universal appeal, nor which holds the interest of all mankind as does wearing apparel for women; and the market that can produce style, in its fullest measure, will be the leading market of the world. In millinery and footwear St. Louis is acknowledged by the East to be the leader in styles; while the styles in suits, coats, dresses and skirts are equal that of the East.

"This is the best season in the history of the St. Louis market," said F. B. Eiseman, vice president of Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co."

While there are but few of the garments of the modish Paris length—14 inches from the ground—displayed at the St. Louis pageant of fashion, the few that are shown meet with popular favor, as does the extreme short coat of the suits. Garment manufacturers predict the vogue of the short skirt and short coat, rather from necessity than from choice, because of the scarcity of materials and the high prices, duvetyn and the new cloth—peach blow—are from $10 to $15 per yard, net, wholesale, while the old-fashioned pressed flannels and serges take on a new luster at $5 and $7 per yard.

Furs of all kinds will be worn more than ever this season. A coat of mink with Russian sable collar and cuffs is being shown at the fashion pageant, which is worn with self-tone duveyn tan trimmed in gold hand embroidery.

Ostrict plumes are used in millinery this season more than during the past five or six years. They are full and long, lending grace and softness to hats of all sizes and shapes.

A BRIEF FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS BY FREDERICK PALMER

be drawn into another European war? The old system, not the new, prevailed when we were drawn in in 1917. The object of the new system is to avoid the repetition of this event. The world has grown smaller, the relations of its nations are commercially and socially more intimate and interdependent than those of our States a hundred years ago. Any great war must now be our concern. No more than in face of our pioneer movement westward the Mississippi Valley could escape inclusion in our nation can we now escape inclusion in the world state.

Good Pocketbook Investment.

I am not one of these who pretend that I know what Lincoln would say about the league of nations if he were on earth today. His "with malice toward none and with charity for all," and every line of his Gettysburg speech breathe anything but adherence to the old system. Nor do I know what Washington would say, though of course many Senators do. His warning against entangling alliances was spoken while we had three million colonists, when the nations of Europe, each stronger than we were, were engaged in a struggle for a mastery which would leave the victors prepared to punish any outside interference. Washington's object of the moment was not our security. That is precisely the object of the league of nations today.

If for no other reason, I am for it in the interest of my pocketbook. Every American should be for it if he wishes to prosper. We have become the great creditor nation of the world. Instead of borrowing from Europe, we are using the interest money which Europe, with its developed resources, used to receive, to develop our own unlimited resources. There is nothing for us to gain, and all to lose, in war. Any system which secures us in our possessions without extra expense for armament is good business for us. As a nation we have not forgot to remind the other nations that we stand for peace and good will, and for all the principles that will give people the free enjoyment of self-rule. Shall we, who have preached loudly, show little faith in practice? For us to stand out from the only league of nations now to be had is to say to Europe that we are strong enough to go alone. It is striking an attitude of defiance. It is making us a partisan of the old system. Such action will confirm all the defenders of the old system in Europe in their espousal of force as the guiding factor of nations, and will discredit all the elements that are working for progress.

The advocates of the old system, given the opportunity, will be prompt to excite fresh enmities and new selfish alliances among the nations. Do not forget that Prussia and France once had an alliance. Italy was the ally of Germany before this war began. France and Great Britain were at swords' points over Fahsoda only 20 years ago. It is only a short time since the pens of British jingoes—later to acclaim the Czar's victories over the Germans as blows for freedom—were spilling their bile over that monstrous autocracy threatening India, Persia and Constantinople. Political combinations will change rapidly in Europe if we revert to the old system. Europe is hungry and poor, with opinions singularly subject to the emotions which are the legacy of the war. Nations thinking of their dead, and seeing us rich from war with losses slight, will hardly favor the new system when we turn against it.

If We Should Reject the League.

Do we want to excite the predatoriness of all the world against us when we have a land capable of supporting five times our population? This is not an idle question, as anyone who has recently been in Europe well knows. It is a burning question which we must answer now in face of future results. If we are to say, "yet, after all we are for the system," then we must stint our appropriations for roads, schools and public health and better conditions for our workers, increase our taxes, immediately establish universal service and build vast fleets for the protection of our exposed coasts against assaults.

As for American mandatories for Armenia—does that really sound sensible? Once Europe's equilibrium is restored, does anyone think that European pride would welcome American soldiers policing a region which naturally belongs in the domain of European interests? This talk of our having to police Europe under the league of nations is a catch phrase, developed from the shiping on the side lines at the peace conference by army staffs and propagandists of selfish national interests under the influence of the old system in order to win American adherence to certain European annexations.

Our mandatories will be on our own continent. This stand to reason, and we must leave something to reason and good will or we can never carry out the league of nations. Mexico is in turmoil. Hitherto any suggestion that we put her on her feet has met with the outcry from the great progressive nations of South America that our action was the opening wedge for the conquest of the continent. Under the league of nations any measures that we may take for the betterment of conditions in any backward American State which needs a helping hand to start it on the right path will be under the guarantee of the supreme court of the United States of the World. Our good faith will be vouched for by our fellow nations. The diplomatic intrigues between European and Latin-American nations which each has considered necessary to protect its own interests under the old system will cease to exist, because they will be as superfluous as preparing dugouts against the bombardments from Mars. Our intervention will be in the same category as relief measures for a disaster by flood or fire within their own territorial domain.

Undoubtedly there are flaws in the league. The Shantung provision is odious. I have head and reread Article 10 without seeing in it the dangers which others have found. If reservations must be made, then make them, without weakening the great principle which is the guiding force of the league.

But why should not the Senate divide on the issue itself rather than as the Republicans and Democrats? Some Republicans who think that they have foresight, are asking why the Republican leaders in the Senate should allow Woodrow Wilson to make the league his political of highest grade white Sea Island canvas or Eve cloth—choose from slender covered full Louis or covered military heels with hand-turned soles, or from white ivory leather military heels with welt-sewed soles.

White Canvas Low Shoes

OXFORDS

of highest grade white Sea Island canvas or Eve cloth—smart Colonial effects trimmed with newest of buckles, full Louis covered heels, or plain opera styles with covered full Louis or military heels. All have hand-turned soles.

Were it not our fixed policy not to carry goods over from one season to the next, we would never consent to such a price sacrifice. Spring, 1920, will see big advances on these shoes. It will pay you to buy for THEN as well as NOW. All sizes 2½ to 8, widths AA to D in the lot as a whole. Not a pair of White Canvas Oxfords or Pumps will be withheld.

DON'T WEAR BUST PADS IN HOT WEATHER

—unless you wish to permanently reduce the size of your busts. Hot, sweaty pads or ruffles break down the delicate tissues and should never be worn. STOP wearing them if you value your figure.

USE THE NATIONAL

to enlarge your busts to their natural size and beauty. EXPANDS BUST INSTANTLY, bringing quick results where all other methods have failed. No matter what the cause of retarded development, THE NATIONAL is the only rational method that will ever restore the size and beauty of the busts.

DEVELOPS "ONE" TO "FIVE" INCHES

This remarkable woman's invention WILL EXPAND ANY BUST to its fullest proportions in a remarkably short time. Even five minutes' use will surprise and delight you. Use the NATIONAL a few minutes daily until your bust measurement is what you desire. That's all. If you want greater development any time, use it a little longer. It expands the bust as long as used, and results are natural and permanent.

REPORTS AFTER USING THE NATIONAL

Five Inches—
"Your National in my case has not merely developed a bust that disappeared from some sort of illness, but has actually developed a bust which has never been larger than a child's. Five inches' development seems almost untrue in such a short time, but nevertheless it is absolutely true in my case, which the photo shall prove to you."—Mrs. Allendorf.

Three Inches—
"In the three weeks use of the National I have increased THREE INCHES in size and am delighted."—Mrs. T. A.

Three and One-Half Inches—
Dr. Swarthout says: "The first three weeks bust developed 3½ inches."

No Pads and Ruffles Now—
"No amount of money could buy my National. I have laid aside the pads and ruffles I have worn ever since I can remember."—Mrs. D. R.

The National is the special developer Dr. C. S. Carr formerly recommended in the "Physical Culture Magazine" as the only safe, reliable method known for enlarging the bust in a natural way. Of this method, Dr. Carr said: "Indeed, it will bring about a development of the busts quite astonishing."

property. If William Smith, Republican, had been President when the world demanded a league, would the Democrats have been against it? No doubt.

Political partisanship has been destroying our perspective. In 1916 I heard a Republican Senator say: "A spineless President is keeping us out of the war. We ought to be in France, fighting for France with our last man and dollar." Now he is not only against the league of nations, but particularly bitter at the thought of entering into an agreement to protect France from German aggression. It was in 1916, too, that I heard a Democratic Senator say: "I am for keeping out to the end. We've no business over there. We'll attend to our business and let them attend to theirs. Let them go on murdering one another until they are ready to stop." He is now a leading supporter of the league which his Republican colleague just quoted says will draw us into entangling alliances.

Again, in 1916, I heard another Republican Senator, now most vigorously opposed to the league, say: "Keep down our army! Don't excite suspicion by preparing for war. It's time for the thinking men of the world to get together to prevent such a war as this happening again." His present attitude should warrant him in subscribing to the view of an able army officer, who said: "There can be no Utopia. Men will always fight. We'll make the strongest army and navy in the world—so strong that we could stand against the world and prevent another world war by the very threat of our power." The officer spoke in professional zeal in behalf of the old system, in which he honestly believes. It is not criticising his profession to say that I should like to see the world able to get on with fewer army officers. We should all like to see the world with less disease, which would enable it to get on with fewer doctors.

The officer stated the issue. It is between war and peace. If we are against the league then let us arm. We cannot be the kind of partner in the league who suspects all his other partners of trying to take advantage of him. If we are for the league then we cannot expect the first draft to be perfect. To start making reservations is to undermine world confidence in the league. We must rely on human nature, as we do in our relations with our neighbors, to meet fair play in kind. Build a wall of suspician between two partners in any business concern and the business will not flourish. Build one between two nations and either will soon imagine that something inimical to its interests is progressing on the other side of the wall. This leads to armaments and eventually to war.

Break a highway of mutual good feeling through the wall and the two will trade and prosper, each retaining its own customs and habits. The league is a framework on which to build. It sets the world to thinking of peace and planning how to maintain peace, rather than thinking of war and planning war. It may not prevent the buying of mines, but it is at least a mine sweeper. It will be as strong as the faith of public opinion is able to make it. Whoever has seen the ruins in France and the streams of wounded from the field of battle and the dead lying on the field feels too deeply about the most ambitious and practical way to stop war that ever has been devised not to speak his word in its favor. I believe in the human race and human progress.

STAMP COLLECTORS WILL MEET IN ST. LOUIS NEXT WEEK

American Philatelic Society's Convention to Be Held at Planters' Hotel Aug. 18-22.

The American Philatelic Society, an organization of stamp collectors having more than 2000 members, will hold its annual convention in St. Louis at the Planters Hotel Aug. 18-22. The visiting delegates who will come from all parts of the United States will be entertained by the St. Louis Stamp Collectors' Society.

A lecture entitled "The Charm of Stamp Collecting," will be delivered at the Planters Wednesday night, Aug. 20. The convention will close with a stamp bourse, during which there will be trading and selling of stamps.

The convention last year was held at Cleveland, and was obtained for St. Louis this year through the efforts of the St. Louis Conventions and Publicity Bureau and the local society. The officers of the St. Louis society are: Henry A. Diamant, president of the St. Louis Commission Co., president; Dr. Lister Tuholske of 4515 Pershing av., vice president, and Ralph H. Eilers of 1627 North Euclid avenue, secretary and treasurer. The first convention of the national society was held in St. Louis in 1889.

Rear Admiral Fiske Gets Medal.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The gold medal of the Aero Club of America has been awarded to Rear Admiral Fiske, U. S. N., retired, according to an announcement made by the Board of Governors today. The announcement said that the award was made for the Admiral's invention of the torpedo plane, which was used effectively during the war.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."—ADV.

Why Gray Hair

Is No Longer Necessary

New, Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment—First Bottle Gives SATISFACTION

After having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers, leading stores are recommending "Canute Water for Gray Hair," to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Famous & Barr sell it, and all questions one naturally asks are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use Canute Water for Gray Hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. Canute Water for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy, it restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A CRUDE DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. Canute Water is a simple method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that Canute Water is not a crude dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair, while, as the reader knows, the crude dyes are numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily, and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way, and simply require a retouching once every week or two as the hair grows.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become. Remember, it will only be necessary to use Canute Water for Gray Hair afterward once every week or two on the new hair that grows.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores for $1.10 a bottle, or by mail direct. Friedman Canute Co., 18 East 17 st., New York City.

An Unfailing Way to Banish Hairs

(Beauty Notes)

Ugly hairy growths can be removed in the privacy of your own home if you get a small original package of delatone and mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the hairy surface. This should be left on the skin about 2 minutes, then removed and the skin washed and every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm or inconvenience can result from this treatment, but be sure you buy real delatone.—ADV.

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT RAMBLES AROUND IN ST. LOUIS AWHILE

he wanted to give me the benefit of his research. He had discovered, he told me, that what cows needed was exercise. To this end he had perfected a treadmill arrangement with an endless belt, where they could do their calisthenics.

"'Fine!' I told him. 'We'll buy automatic milking machines, hitch them up to the treadmill and let one-half of the herd milk the other half. That will solve the problem of both labor and the cow's health. You work out the details.'

"He went away to work them out, and I suppose he is still at it."

And, while he was at it, Wright gave his opinion on what the effect of a social upheaval would be on the churches.

"You can't have a social and economic reconstruction without a religious reconstruction," he said. "No, the churches will go along with other old establishments. That was true of the French revolution, and it has been true in Russia. It is surprising, the ease with which religious institutions that have stood for centuries, are overthrown.

"Not so surprising, either, perhaps, when you think of the attitude of the average man toward religion. It is about like that of a man I knew, who joined a certain Protestant denomination. He chose it, he explained to me, because it 'didn't mix in politics or business, and d—— little in religion.'"

It so happened that Wright and the writer were passing Washington boulevard and King's highway at about that time, and Wright got out to take a look at what is said to be the finest corner, architecturally, in St. Louis. He gazed around at the Second Baptist Church, Temple Israel, St. John's Methodist, Tuscan Temple and the First Christian Science Church.

"Say, a man could take off from almost any place around here and land in heaven," remarked Wright, who was a preacher before he became a writer.

His Opinion of the City.

At the conclusion of his trip over the city, he was asked to express an opinion on it, but said he "wanted to think it over first."

"However, I do want to say that I like your Forest Park," he said. "I like it because it is built for use, instead of just for looks. And it is very beautiful, too. I like your Art Hill and your Municipal Theater, and I like the number of trees in your residence districts. The only thing I would wish for is that your people build themselves some homes, instead of putting themselves away in apartment houses like cards in a filing cabinet."

When Mr. Wright surveyed the city from Art Hill, his view encompassed some of the finest residence streets in America. However, he saw only the apartment houses.

PEACEABLE SOLUTION OF NEGRO QUESTION CAN CERTAINLY BE FOUND

The situation is serious, but not desperate. A healthy sentiment in favor of fair play is growing up on many sides. Wise and courageous leaders of both races are now contending that the first and biggest task of Democracy is to keep her own house in order. It is vain to talk ideals unless we practice justice. And in the final triumph of justice I never lost faith."

Dr. Scott stood silently at the window for a moment, then turned with his face full in the morning light, and summed up his hope and convictions.

"To all your questions there is a cheerful answer. If there is a crisis in the race problem it is because the nation has ignored, neglected and pushed the problem aside. To solve it we must face it—and who shall say we are afraid to face it?

"Social Equality" a Misnomer.

"Too often the whole question is complicated and well meaning efforts negatived by many persons North and South, who conjure up the spectre of 'social equality,' a term which, as often used, is a misnomer. Every self-respecting colored man and woman concedes the right of every other individual to decide whom his associates and companions shall be. Nor is the negro—and I think I am rather well acquainted with the main hopes and aspirations of my race—desirous of imposing himself upon anyone or any purely social group in which he is not welcomed. But that has nothing to do with the civic fights and privileges to which every decent man is entitled. Certainly it has no place in the minds of these nearly 200,000 black soldiers who have returned from France, where in the eyes of native man and women they were not regarded as pariahs, but simply as good fighting men who knew how to do the job they were sent to do.

"Nor do our people dream of using force to overcome those who spitefully threat them, save within the bounds of strict and instinctive self-defense. What the negro wants with all his heart, and what America will proudly concede him, I do believe, can be stated very easily.

"In substitution for lynchings, he wants justice in the courts; he wants the privilege of serving on juries; the right to vote; the right to hold office, like other citizens. He wants better educational facilities; abolition of the 'Jim Crow' car and of discrimination and segregation in the Government service; the same military training and chance for promotion in the army that white men enjoy; destruction of the peonage system, an equal wage, better housing, better sanitary conditions and reforms in Southern penal institutions.

"That is the negro problem. Does it impose too much upon the greatest democracy in the world? I cannot believe that it does."

Whatever You Do Don't Neglect Your Eyes, Says Dr. Lewis, Who Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances.

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. He says neglect causes more eye troubles and poor sight than any other one thing. Many whose eyes were failing say they had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two or four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in this city by the Enderle, the Johnson Bros., the Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson Stores.—ADV.

A MILLION BEDBUGS. Just think, a 35c package of the new golden chemical P. D. Q. CUT THIS OUT. This new chemical can be had at any first-class drug store. A 35-cent package makes a quart of P. D. Q. and will go farther than a barrel of old-fashioned bug killer. MOUNT ST. ROSE BAZAR SEPT. 1

All Sodalities of City Will Have Booths.

The annual bazar of Mount St. Rose Hospital will be held on Labor day, Sept. 1, on the grounds, 9109 South Broadway, for the benefit of the charity wards cared for by the Sisters of St. Mary.

Booths will be built on the lawn and conducted by the various Sodalities of the city. The Sodalities are now making articles to sell. There is a spirited but friendly rivalry between the various organizations in producing the largest patronage and funds for the hospital. The booths will be decorated in the colors of the sodalities.

Mount St. Rose was the first hospital organized exclusively for the treatment of tuberculosis. It was established 14 years ago by the Sisters of St. Mary in a cottage on the present grounds. Two years later the Sisters had to enlarge their quarters.

WOMEN FORM SOCIETY TO FIGHT PROHIBITION

Council of Justice Asks United Efforts in "Vindication of National Wrong."

Literature scattered broadcast over St. Louis opposing the enforcement of prohibition and asking "the united efforts of every true American citizen in the vindication of this national wrong" has revealed the existence in the city of a newly formed women's organization known as the American Women's Council of Justice.

Headquarters of the organization are at 1128 Chemical Building. Names of officers or persons connected with the council do not appear on the stationery or literature distributed. Mrs. Thomas Swinney is president of the council, Mrs. Margaret Sennett Hardin, vice president, and Miss Emilie M. Sweeney, secretary and treasurer. They decline to give their addresses.

At headquarters officials refused to say what prompted the formation of the council or by what interests it is fostered, except to state that it "has been formed for the purpose of uniting the thinking women of the country in the work of arresting the subtle and dangerous encroachments of late being imposed on a free people."

One of the objects as set forth in some of the literature is "to oppose all attempts at the control or regulation of the human conscience by civil government. One of the officers said the organization's board of directors would be composed of both men and women. Men are enrolled as associate members. The membership is stated to be 600. The names of 100,000 Missouri citizens will be taken to Washington on petitions, she said, to ask the repeal of prohibition.

Suffrage leaders in the city said they had not heard of the organization and did not know the officers named. A woman prominent in suffrage circles said she recalled the name of Miss Sweeney as being conspicuous in a movement a few years ago in St. Louis opposed to equal suffrage.

One of the slogans adopted by the council is a quotation from the Apostle Paul, "Let no man judge what ye shall eat nor what ye shall drink."

MEN FROM MISSOURI RANGERS TROOP IN POLO GAME TODAY

Picked Teams of Horsemen Will Participate in Afternoon Contest at Forest Park.

There will be a polo game at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon on the drill grounds, south of the tennis courts, in Forest Park, in which picked teams of horsemen of A Troop, Missouri Rangers, will participate. The organization has adopted this means of attractive attention to its drive for increased membership.

A Troop is the cavalry branch of the Missouri National Guard and lacks about 15 of the necessary quota of 68 to become federalized as part of the National Army now in process of formation. Membership in the organization presents an exceptional oportunity to master horsemanship. There are two drill nights a week at the Armory, 5248 Oakland avenue, and inexperienced recruits are put through a special course of training by instructors.

Included in the features of membership in the Rangers are Sunday rides through St. Louis County and a two-weeks camping trip each summer. Those wishing to join should communicate with Lieut. C. Belknap, acting commander, at the Armory. The age limit is between 18 and 45.

If Heat Causes Wrinkles to Form, Try This

If the heat tends to loosen and wrinkle your skin, there's an effective and harmless remedy you can readily make at home. Just let an ounce of pure powdered saxolite dissolve in a half-pint of witch hazel and bathe your face in the liquid. This at once tightens the skin and smooths out the lines, making the cuticle and underlying tissues much firmer. The ingredients of course can be obtained from any druggist.

The saxolite lotion is splendid for flabby cheeks or chin, as well as for enlarged pores. It makes a tired, wilted face more refreshed and youthful looking.—ADV.

Poor Woman Makes Sacrifice

"For years I have doctored for indigestion and severe bloating with gas, and all my money had gone for doctors and medicine which did me no good. I had lost all faith in medicines and as I have to work hard for the few dollars I earn, was afraid to risk any more money. A year ago my neighbor told me to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I have found it to be the best medicine in the world and am glad I made the sacrifice." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. How to Judge a Woman by Her Hair

There is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge of a woman's neatness, or good taste. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good shampoo. You can enjoy the very best by getting some canthrox from your druggist, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its luster and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth.—ADV.

BOOKLET WILL DEPICT ART EXPOSITION PLANS

Other Cities Will Join in Industrial Display to Be Held Next Fall.

A 24-page booklet on the St. Louis Exposition of Industrial Arts and Crafts, compiled by Exposition Director Charles D. Platt, will be issued to 5000 persons during the coming week. The exposition will open Oct. 15 for four weeks at the Southern Hotel Building.

The new Exposition Bulletin quotes from the St. Louis newspapers to present different aspects of the enterprise. Organizations and individuals in this and other cities are cited to make a strong endorsement o' the movement, which is becoming nation-wide, to hold such educational, art-in-industry expositions in the logical centers, and in support of the St. Louis enterprise in particular.

Gov. Gardner is quoted in a letter of endorsement. Mayor Henry W. Kiel also has pledged his support. The list of subscribing patrons in addition to names previous published, comprises Col. Moses Shoenberg, Aaron Waldheim, Charles Heiss, Walter B. Woodward, A. B. Elias, Hon. Joseph W. Folk, Con P. Curran, William Sacks, J. M. Herbert, J. P. Thomy, L. E. Waltke, W. A. Layman, Joseph B. Thomas, Hon. Henry W. Kiel, E. F. Goltra, W. J. Kinsella Jr., Gov. F. D. Gardner, W. K. Stanard, Seymour Stewart, J. F. Hunt, Henry W. Peters, B. E. Bradley, J. C. Roberts, M. E. Singleton, Maj. Harry B. Hawes, H. D. Condie, Colin M. Selph, Edmond Koeln, George T. Priest, Henry Nicolaus, Hans Hackel, Flint Garrison, August A. Busch, N. C. McLean, George W. Clarkson, Lawrence McDaniel, W. A. Moody, Edwin B. Meissner, J. B. Henderson, Joseph Griesedieck, Warren C. Flynn, C. M. Skinner.

Join in Presentation.

The indorsing and participating organizations include the Chamber of Commerce, Washington University, the Ben Franklin Club (the master printers' association), the Furniture Board of Trade, the Convention and Publicity Bureau, the Civic League, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Advertising Club of St. Louis, the National Women's Association of Commerce, the Master Painters' and Decorators' Association, the United Glass Manufacturers' Association, the Missouri Historical Society, the St. Louis Symphony Society, the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, the Des Moines Manufacturers' Association, the Cleveland, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Madison, Milwaukee, Baltimore, Wilmington (Del.), Elizabeth (N. J.) and Springfield (Mass.) Chambers of Commerce.

The St. Louis Exposition of Industrial Arts and Crafts, though stressing local interest, reaches out toward a national character, and in this field is meeting with a response reported as gratifying. Several cities are not only going to join in making the enterprise a success, but also consider having similar expositions themselves; and the general interest indicates that a wide co-operation will join with St. Louis in having a great national exposition here with official participation by many cities, states and the national Government after the present show, as soon as it can be organized.

Des Moines, Ia., and Paterson, N. J., the seat of a highly advanced silk fabric industry, may have exhibits, while artistic furniture made in New York and Michigan is likely to make a strong appeal.

Tentative floor plans are printed, showing the projected installation on two floors of the Southern Hotel building, which comprises the block between Broadway and Walnut, Fourth and Elm streets, with a ground area of about 50,000 square feet. On the two floors are 60,000 square feet of exhibit space.

The first floor, besides the main entrance to the exposition, and general halls devoted to special educational and entertainment features, and rooms set aside for exhibit receiving and shipping departments, and for installation workshops, will afford installation for some of the most important exhibits of industrial products, plans and processes. These will include the heavier exhibits, such as art design automobiles and vehicle bodies. The printing art exhibit has a gallery on this floor. Clay and plastic products, glass, wood, leather, toys, music and other departments also have rooms.

On the second floor decorative art in some of its more important forms, entertainment features contributed by the Art League and affiliated organizations, will strike a note for the installation. Here will be many "live" exhibits, with illustrations of art industrial processes. Textile products will occupy liberal space, and household furnishings, including furniture and model home installations, will be no less impressive in scale, and with displays of costumery, styles and fashions will take several galleries. The theater arts will be shown in connection with a "Little Theater" installation. Architecture will be represented, with building accessories and further process exhibits, and the public schools and School of Fine Arts, the School of Occupational Therapy will have space assigned to them and the St. Louis Art League will have technical education classes to work in the influence of the exposition.

CITY-OWNED AUTO BREAKS LAW

John E. Klose of 5224A North Broadway, Third Assistant Commissioner of Weights and Measures and an active politician in the First Ward, was fined $25 and costs in Judge Mix's court yesterday for driving a city-owned automobile which was not equipped with headlights meeting the requirement of the city's ordinances. Klose was arrested Thursday night.

He offered no defense, and after the fine was assessed, said he did not intend to pay it personally, as the car was furnished by the city for his use. He told the court officers he had no idea where they should go to collect the fine.

ANISFELD'S WORKS ON VIEW LAST TIME TODAY

Paintings With Exuberance of Color Create Different Criticisms.

Today is the last opportunity the St. Louis public will have to view the collection of paintings by the revolutionary Russian artist, Boris Anisfeld, on exhibition at the City Art Museum in Forest Park. Anisfeld has turned the established convention of art topsy turvy in much the same manner that the Bolsheviki have overturned the political and social conventions of Russia, and canvases have aroused a storm of comment among local art lovers, varying from intense admiration to open ridicule.

Anisfeld has decided that there is something amiss in modern art, and has straightaway proceeded to tear down the whole structure and erect it anew—after the canons of Boris Anisfeld, but with all his dramatic innovations, planks and beams of the old structure are recognizable here and there in bits of atmospheric landscape, clever drawing and harmonious color. His "Clouds Over the Black Sea," for instance, is masterly from a technical standpoint, with a development of vaporous clouds over deep blue water which is reminescent of the seascapes of Emil Carlsen. A charming landscape, in soft gray, enlivened with flashing spots of color, is his "Children's Park, Petrograd," which has been purchased by the Albright Art Gallery of Buffalo, N. Y. There is the same attractive atmosphere in "The Bathers, Evening; River Dvina."

Attest Powers of Draftmanship.

Numerous drawings in charcoal and wash attest his powers of draftsmanship and his imaginative resources. But these understandable pictures are without exception earlier works or relatively unimportant sketches. They do not represent the true and mature art of Anisfeld.

His later works—the ones upon which the artist bases his claim for fame—are well represented in the present collection at the Museum. They are characterized by such exuberance of color and such freedom of drawing and arrangement that any attempt to criticise or evaluate is fraught with every manner of pitfall for the would-be judge. Everything seems to have been made subservient to color, little attention being paid to the significance of the composition or the reality of the drawing. The large and striking canvases, "The Blue Statue," "Garden of the Hesperides" and "Rebecca," are typical examples of his disregard for realism. But they have color of almost unbelievable intensity, secured by every artifice of contrast and emphasis. Obtrusive crudities of drawing and disdainful disregard for realities show that the artist has staked his all on color. There was never a blazing landscape like that presented in "Rebecca." Yet it cannot be denied that the very intensity and warmth of the brilliant red and orange tones gives in certain ways a vivid impression of the sun-scorched deserts of Palestine.

Color Only Reason for Being.

The same may be said of other representative canvases on view, notably the "Golden. God," "The Garden of Eden" and "The Preludes." Color is their only reason for being, so far as the academically trained visitor to the galleries can ascertain. Beauty of draftsmanship they certainly do not possess, at least according to accepted standards, nor do they attempt a story or a moral lesson.

As to the aesthetic value of this exuberance of color, there is a variety of opinion. Is the scintillating yellow, for instance, in the tail of the peacock depicted in the "Garden of the Hesperides," together with the glowing blues, greens and reds shown elsewhere in the composition, a sufficient excuse for the general meaninglessness of the picture, and its lack of good drawing? After all, these are questions upon which argument would seem rather futile. The discreet critic will remember the howls of ridicule with which innovators like Momet and Rodin were first greeted. Those who would keep abreast of modern art tendencies cannot afford to miss seeing the collection.

Beautifully Curly, Fluffy Hair—In Three Hours!

Girls, have you tried the silmerine method of curling your hair? It's simply grand! Gives you the most beautiful, natural-looking curls and waves—makes the hair soft, fluffy and glossy—and nothing harmful or bothersome about it. The curls will last the longest time—in spite of heat, wind or dampness. You won't have to be continually fixing and fussing with your hair. It's foolish to singe and blister and deaden your tresses with a hot curling iron—and altogether unnecessary now.

Liquid silmerine is pleasant to use, being neither sticky nor greasy. Get a bottle from your druggist today, follow the simple directions—the first trial will make it your steadfast friend. The wavy effect appears within three hours after the application, though many prefer applying the liquid just before retiring. You will appreciate silmerine equally as a dressing and hair preservative.—Adv.

REED FOLLOWERS RELY ON IRISH TO BLOCK REPUDIATION

Hope Threat to Leave Party Will Prevent Indorsement of League by Democratic State Committee Tomorrow.

Followers of United States Senator Reed, compelled by the action of the Democratic City Committee Friday in indorsing the league of nations to abandon their expectations that the six St. Louis members of the State organization would join with them in attempting to prevent repudiation of Reed through the adoption of a league of nations indorsement at the State Committee meeting at the Planters Hotel tomorrow, are resting their whole fight on the threat of members of Irish societies that Irish voters will leave the Democratic party if the league is indorsed.

Three of the six St. Louis members also are members of the City Committee and voted for the resolution indorsing the league. They are John F. Byrne, Thomas J. Butler and J. J. Mestres. Judge Davis Biggs of Kirkwood a week ago publicly announced that he favored the league. Senator Michael Kinney, another member, once voted for such an indorsement, and while he has refused to commit himself in advance of the meeting as to how he will vote. William Egan, whose political views almost always are in accord with those of Kinney, voted in the City Committee for the indorsement. The other, A. C. Stuever, has not been reached for a statement.

Try to Line Up Irish.

After the visit of Senator Reed and R. Emmet O'Malley, a Kansas City Election Commissioner and Reed follower, to St. Louis early this week, the movement to induce Irish societies to pass resolutions pledging that Irish Democrats would quit the party if the indorsement carried, was undertaken.

Several societies, including the central branch of the Friends of Irish Freedom, met Friday and adopted the resolutions to aid Reed in his fight before the committee tomorrow. The St. Louis branch of the League for the Preservation of American Independence, which includes some Democrats and Republicans, adopted similar resolutions. Delegations from the societies will wait on the committee.

It also was reported yesterday that an attempt would be made today to organize a parade of Irish voters to march to the Planters tomorrow in an attempt to influence the committee.

Reed will be represented by O'Malley, who also will have the support of Joseph B. Shannon of Kansas City, if Shannon comes to St. Louis. It has not developed so far that he will have any additional support within the committee, though it is possible from over the State there will be a few committeemen who will stand by him.

Look to State Meeting.

It was talked among anti-Reed Democrats yesterday that they expect O'Malley to concentrate his effort to induce the committee to avoid a vote on a resolution and instead to call a State convention of Democrats to pass on the resolutions, believing that Reed with his well known oratory could sway a convention as he would. The convention plan first was suggested by Chairman Neale in an interview in the Post-Dispatch last Sunday. Neale, who has assumed leadership of the anti-Reed forces, saying that it would be difficult to prevent a gathering of Democrats from the country from directly repudiating the Senator, and that there would be no doubt that a league of nations endorsement would be given by a convention by an overwhelming vote.

There is no question, considered from the angle from which the politician usually views a situation, that of fear of loss of a few votes, that the meeting tomorrow is full of possibilities. It was called by the chairman for the specific purpose of indorsing the league of nations. O'Malley, speaking for Reed, has said that such an indorsement will be humiliating to Reed. Irish societies have declared that an indorsement will mean the loss of the Irish vote to the party.

The situation facing the committee is that a failure to indorse the league can only be considered, in view of the chairman's call, a repudiation of the national administration and President Wilson. In view of O'Malley's statement, adoption of an indorsement resolution will be taken by political observers as a repudiation of Reed.

Irish to Be Factor.

While the proportion of Irish votters in the Democratic party is not nearly as great out in the rural districts, from which most of the committeemen come, there is little question that a strong showing by the Irish will have an effect on the committee, even though the effect may be no more than to frighten them.

From some committeemen who have passed through St. Louis during the past few days there has appeared evidence of a feeling that the situation must be faced squarely and that even threats of loss of Irish votes will not prevent the committee from taking a standpoint of Americanism.

Chairman Neale, in his recent interview in the Post-Dispatch, expressed the opinion that no great number of Irish would leave the party. He added, however, that if votes were lost they would be overcome by the voters attracted by a courageous party action on this question. Neale is on record as saying that a failure to indorse the league would brand the committee as cowardly and not entitled to the respect of Democratic voters or the public generally.

A week ago telegrams were sent by the Post-Dispatch to the 34 committeemen asking whether they favored the league of nations. Fifteen replied that they favored it. Two, J. E. Boggs of Columbia and M. G. Gresham of Sikeston, said they favored it, but saw no reason for a committee meeting to indorse it. Five, C. H. Burdette of Ava, Thomas H. Fisher of Marshall and Thomas J. Butler, John F. Byrne and Michael Kinney of St. Louis, said they would attend the meeting, but refused to state their views on the league. Butler and Byrne voted in favor of it in the city committee. Twelve committeemen did not answer.

Those who declared themselves in favor of the league were: Chairman Neale of Greenfield, F. T. Crowley of Lawson, W. G. Warner of Lamar, Ben F. Morgan of Bolivar, Frank H. Lee of Joplin, H. E. Mitchell of Lancaster, Adolph Musser of Holden, H. C. Bell of Potosi, J. E. Cox of St. Joseph, W. R. Taylor of Fulton, Elmer O. Jones of La Plata, Davis Biggs of Kirkwood, E. C. Orr of Chillicothe, George R. Ellison of Maryville and Frank H. Farris of Rolla.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Discoverer Tells Druggists Not to Take a Cent of Anyone's Money Unless Allenrhu Completely Banishes All Rheumatic Pains and Twinges.

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. Your druggist has been appointed agent for Allenrhu in this vicinity with the understanding that he will freely return the purchase money to all who state they received no benefit.—ADV.

MAIL CLERKS WANT PAY RAISED 75 PER CENT

Railway Association Says Increase Is Necessary Owing to High Prices.

A resolution asking for an increase in wages of 75 per cent was passed by the St. Louis branch of the Railway Mail Clerks yesterday afternoon at a special meeting at Anchor Hall, 1508 South Jefferson avenue. Another resolution was passed supporting E. J. Ryan, president of the National Railway Mail Clerks' Association, in his request for an immediate increase in wages of 50 per cent as a temporary relief from the high cost of living. Copies of both resolutions will be sent to the Congressional Committee on Postal Salaries, congressmen from Missouri, and President Wilson.

Lieght McLaughlin, a mail clerk on the Iron Mountain road, objected to the resolution calling for a 75 per cent increase on the grounds that present conditions do not warrant so great a raise. He said that he could buy a meal that used to cost 25 cents for 40 cents, and a shirt that used to cost $1 for $1.05, and that raises have been granted to offset this increase. He said that he saved $80 per month. He also stated that he had an additional income from other sources.

Everyone else at the meeting disagreed with McLaughlin's figures on the increased cost of living. One of the men said that in the last 10 years his cost of living had increased 107 per cent while his wages had increased less than 60 per cent. Many of the clerks expressed a desire to learn where McLaughlin bought his meals and clothes.

According to William Davenport, president of the St. Louis branch of the Railway Mail Clerks' Association, the minimum salary received by a railway mail clerk is $1100 per year, while the maximum is $2000. He said that the average wage is $1500, and that only about 5 per cent of the men receive the maximum and then only after having been in the service over 25 years. An increase of $100 per year went into effect on July 1, he said, but owing to delayed action on the part of Second Assistant Postmaster-General Otto Prager, many of the men have not received their raise. Feeling was strong against Prager throughout the meeting, and his name was boohed several times.

"The training and work of a railway mail clerk," said Davenport, "is of such a nature that it is useless in any other field. The department realizes that it would be almost impossible for us to use our knowledge gained in the postal service for any other work, and it seems to be taking advantage of that fact."

TWELFTH BALLOON COMPANY WILL GIVE EXHIBIT IN ST. LOUIS

Outfit Was Cited Twice for Bravery and Efficiency Under Fire.

The Twelfth Balloon Company Motor Convoy, from the American Expeditionary Forces, France, will arrive in St. Louis with a war balloon exhibit on Aug. 23 and leave on Aug. 28.

This company is making a two months' tour of Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska under actual field conditions and with the same equipment it used while part of the American Expeditionary Forces in France. It is the most distinguished company in the balloon service, having been cited three times for bravery and efficiency under fire and having participated in all of the American drives with distinction.

The exhibition includes, among other things, an American observation balloon, balloon instruments, parachutes, balloon windlass, field radio and telephone sets, balloon telephone set, machine guns, truck train and various other equipment used by a balloon company in the field of operations. In addition a set of films containing scenes of an American balloon in action, its destruction by a German airplane, the escape of the observers in parachutes, the destruction of the German airplane by an American plane, and the capture of the German pilot by American troops will be shown. These pictures were taken on the front under fire. A short talk by one of the officers will be given in conjunction with the films which will be shown at theaters. The company will pitch its own camp, prepare its own food and conduct its maneuvers under actual field conditions.

DISCOVERED CURE FOR ASTHMA & HAY FEVER

Mr. D. J. Lane, a chemist located at 375 Lane Bldg., St. Mary's, Kan., has discovered a simple home remedy for asthma and hay fever. To test it he sent some to people who had been suffering from asthma or hay fever for years, and to their delight they state they were easily cured. Mr. Lane is so proud of his discovery and has so much confidence in its ability to cure that he will send a $1.25 bottle postpaid to anyone who will write for it. His offer is that he is to be paid for it if it cures. The one taking it is to be the judge and report its effect within 10 days after using the remedy. NEW CONVALESCENT HOUSE AT JEFFERSON BARRACKS

St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross Opens Another Place for Soldiers.

A new convalescent house has been opened at Jefferson Barracks by the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross for sick and wounded soldiers in the hospital there. The new "house" is situated in Pavilion Ward 10, which has been redecorated and refurnished with a piano, pool table and other furniture. The house was established adjacent to the hospital on account of the fact that many wounded soldiers were not able to make the long walk to the main Red Cross Building.

Volley ball courts also have been provided for those unable to take up baseball. Quoits and pool table tournaments have become very popular. Basket weaving and bead work has been taken up with much interest and striking designs have been worked out by the soldiers.

COCOANUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—ADV.

HERO HUNTED GERMANS AS HE FORMERLY DID WILD ANIMALS

Indiana Captain Who Won Four Decorations for Valor Explains His Methods.

MADISON, Ind., Aug. 9.—Wearing four decorations for valor, Capt. Samuel Woodfill, one of Indiana's greatest heroes in the world war, now is visiting his aged mother at Bryantsburg, in this (Jefferson) county. The medals bestowed on Capt. Woodfill are the Croix de Guerre, the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Chevalier de Legion, and the Distinguished Service Medal. The Montenegrin Government also has indicated that it intends to add still another decoration to the Captain's list.

Capt. Woodfill won the Congressional Medal for displaying exceptional courage in capturing three machine guns, which held up his company, M, of the Sixtieth Infantry, at Cunel, France, on Oct. 12, 1918. During the fighting, according to the citation printed in the Stars and Stripes, Capt. Woodfill killed four men on one machine gun, seven on another and some on the third, and captured three.

The Captain's father also was a Hoosier and a fighter, having served in the Mexican War and in the Union army in the Civil War, rising to the rank of Captain. Capt. Woodfill attributes much of his success in the world war to the fact that he is an expert rifle and pistol shot and to his knowledge of woodcraft, which he attained in hunting here and in Alaska. He recently remarked that he used the same tactics in hunting Germans that he used in hunting wild animals.

Besides his mother, Capt. Woodfill has a brother and sister residing in this county and a sister in Indianapolis. He is 36 years old and married, his wife having lived at Fort Thomas, Ky., while the Captain was overseas.

EVENING CLASSES TO BE LARGE

The volume of inquiries concerning evening courses received by Prof. F. W. Shipley, director of extension courses at Washington University, during July was greater than in any former year up to Oct. 1, it was stated yesterday by the director. From the interest thus manifested the estimate is for an attendance at the evening and Saturday courses the coming school year far ahead of previous years, or close to 1000.

Several of the larger industries of St. Louis and East St. Louis will encourage their employes to educational advancement, and Prof Shipley has planned to devote most of September to visits to industrial plants to aid employers and employes in reaching thorough understanding of the plan. The evening classes will open Oct. 6.

Hasn't Heard From Sister in Fifteen Years.

She was married 20 years ago, and since then he has received only one letter. At the time of her marriage he lived in Kansas, but does not know her married name. Her maiden name was Virginia Dantin.

INCREASE IN THRIFT STAMP SALE REPORTED LAST WEEK

Systematic Purchases of Letter Carriers on Tuesday Urged on People.

A big increase in sales of Thrift and War Savings Stamps was reported last week by R. R. Smith, assistant to L. A. Wilson, director of the War Savings organization for the Eighth Federal Reserve District. Much of this was due to the sales on Tuesday through the letter carriers of the city. Tuesday has been set as "Stamp Day," and people are urged to make regular, systematic purchases of stamps through the carriers every week on this day.

Twenty of the Thrift Stamps may be exchanged for a "baby bond," as the $5 War Savings Stamps are called, on payment of 19 cents additional this month. Baby bonds mature in 1924.

The new $100 treasury certificates may be bought this month at $83.80, and will be raised 20 cents next month. The $1000 certificates cost $838 this month, and will be $2 more in September. The $100 certificates may be bought at Postoffices and the $1000 certificates at banks and trust companies, which are authorized selling agents for the War Savings organization. They mature in 1924 and bear 4 per cent interest compounded quarterly. The new certificates will appeal to many because of the convenient form and denomination, and short period of investment.

GERMAN CIVILIANS EAGERLY BUY AMERICAN ARMY GOODS

Old Material Being Disposed of in Hurry, Purchasers Coming Far to Make Bids.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN GERMANY, July 12.—Old material used by the Third Army on the Rhine is being disposed of in a hurry. German civilians alone recently have been buying from 25 to 40 carloads of salvaged material each day. Germans assemble by the hundreds in Coblenz, or the other towns where the auctions are held, some coming from Cologne, from Mayence, and others as far as Frankfort-on-Main, Cassel and other parts of unoccupied Germany.

At a recent sale in Coblenz with a German-speaking doughboy as auctioneer 125,000 leather jerkins were sold to the Germans for 2,000,000 marks. (The recent army exchange on marks is 2.50 marks for one franc.) The same day 30,000 raincoats, many of them having been used by American soldiers during the war, were sold for 250,000 marks.

The Germans eagerly buy anything offered by the Americans, particularly any articles containing leather or rubber. Ten thousand American-made gas masks were sold a few days ago to civilians who planned to make use of the rubber for commercial purposes.

Forty thousand pairs of American field shoes, many of which had been worn and torn in the march of the doughboys from Luxembourg to the Rhine in December, were sold in lots at a special sale.

PROF. ERNST HAECKEL, EVOLUTIONIST, DEAD

Noted German Had Given Long Life to Remarkable Research Supporting Theory.

By the Associated Press.

JENA, Germany, Aug. 9.—Prof. Ernst Heinrichc Haeckel, professor of zoology at the University of Jena, and famous throughout the world for his research work supporting the theory of evolution, died here today.

Present-day knowledge and theories of evolution along biological lines are largely indebted to scientific researches made by the venerable Prof. Haeckel. Next, in fact, to Darwin and Wallace, it was said no one had done more to sustain, explain and defend the doctrine of evolution than Haeckel, who, for nearly 50 years, was professor of zoology at the little University of Jena, Germany.

He was the leading exponent of evolution upon the continent of Europe, and he carried his researches far beyond those begun by either Darwin or Wallace. Some index to the influence which he had on the scientific world is furnished by the fact that his literary output amounted to some 50 scientific works, including nearly 20,000 printed pages and that the principal editions have been translated from the original German into 15 different languages.

Was Born at Potsdam in 1834.

When a boy of 12, descended from a family in which law had been the dominant predilection, Haeckel indicated his choice of science as his life work by making an extensive collection and classification of flowers. He was born in Potsdam Feb. 6, 1834. During his high school years he prepared a botanical work for publication. But at his father's wish he undertook medicine, and after study under some of the most distinguished professors of the time at the University of Berlin and elsewhere, he started to practice in Berlin. Continually tempted from his practice by the lure of scientific research, he finally found the path clear for him at the University of Jena, where a special chair of zoology and a museum was created for him. This chair he clung to with tenacious affection from the early '60s until his retirement in 1909, notwithstanding that he had repeated invitations to move to more important centers of learning, both in Germany and abroad.

He spent all his life at Jena with the exception of numerous times that he left to seek a zoological harvest abroad. As a knight-errant of science, Prof. Haeckel wandered over practically all of Europe, Asia and Africa, and aside from his purely scientific work, wrote engaging books of his travels. As one instance of the courageous way in which he pursued his hunt for forms of life, then unknown, he tells of his swimming at considerable depths in the sea to study marine life, and of receiving stings and bites from various aquatic enemies that laid him up for some time with wounds.

Darwin Paid Tribute to Him.

A number of Prof. Haeckel's books have been declared epoch-making, including one of his first works, "General Morophology," written when he was 32 years old and which he later enlarged upon in a work called "The Natural History of Creation." Darwin's theories on the origin of the species had been given to the world in 1859, almost coincident with the beginning of Haeckel's scientific career, and these had such an influence over him that he became the chief apostle of Darwinism in Germany. For many years he stood almost alone among German scientists in upholding the Darminian theories, and was called upon to fight what amounted to a scientific duel with Rudolff Virchow, another notable German scientist, who led the opponents of Darwinism. Darwin himself paid tribute to Haeckel's work by declaring, in his preface to the "Descent of Man," that Haeckel possessed on many points fuller knowledge of the doctrine of evolution than he.

Haeckel held that there was no creation other than casual, efficient, inevitable correlation. Psychology he regarded as merely a branch of Physiology, and held that every living cell had psychic properties, with the psychic life of multicellular organisms representing the sum total of the psychic function of the cells of which they are composed. Moreover, just as the highest animals had been evolved from the simplest forms of life, so the highest faculty of the human mind had been evolved from the soul of the brute beast. As a consequence of these views, Haeckel was led to deny the immortality of the soul, the freedom of the will, and the existence of a personal God. His religion was "Monism," a term he invented to cover his belief in the essential unity of organic and inorganic matter. Some of his views along this line he expounded in "The Riddle of the Universe." He found that the simpler organisms or microbes represented a primitive condition of life not only below the distinction of sex, but also below the distinction of animal and vegetable life, and were really such simple forms of protoplasm that they constituted a kingdom by themselves, which he called the Protista, and regarded this as the common foundation and source of both animals and plants.

Interesting Carbon Theory.

Another of his theories that is interesting, although one that has not been generally accepted, is "the carbon theory." He held that the chemico-Physical properties of carbon in its complex albuminoid compounds are the sole and mechanical cause of the specific phenomena of movement which distinguish organic from inorganic substances, and that the first development of living protoplasm arises from such nitrogenous carbon-compounds by a process of spontaneous generation.

Prof. Haeckel was the first to draw a genealogical tree exhibiting the relationship between the various orders of animals with regard both to one another and their common origin. In a notable paper before the International Zoological Congress, in 1898, he traced the human race back to simple structureless masses of protoplasm.

Skillful with oils and water colors, Prof. Haeckel produced a great number of original plates with which his works were illustrated in color. In his studies of "radiolaria" his initiative in nomenclature is seen where he described and gave names to more than 3500 new species. His two large volumes on Calcareous Sponges, published in 1872, constituted one of his greatest scientific works. Among others that were of such importance as to find their way into foreign languages were his "Pedigree of Man," "Freedom in Science and Teaching," "Life in the Deep Seas," "The Origin and Development of Tissues of Animals," "The Confession of Faith of a Man of Science," "The Wonders of Life" and "Last Words on Evolution," the last named appearing as recently as 1906.

Little was heard of Prof. Haeckel during the war. The publication of his work on God and the immortality of the soul in 1915 brought a recurrence of that vigorous criticism by opponents of his theories that punctuated his long scientific career. Prof. Haeckel was one of those who signed the circular demanding the retirement of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg in the fall of 1916. The circular arraigned the Chancellor for his conduct of affairs and attacked particularly his attemps to reach an agreement with England at the beginning of the war, his early attitude on Belgium neutrality and his submarine warfare policy.

COMMUNITY KITCHEN FOR NEGROES OPENED

Cafeteria Will Seat 50 Persons and Kitchen Will Accommodate Large Trade.

A new community kitchen for the exclusive use of negroes was opened last Monday at 400 South Jefferson avenue by the Community Kitchen Association. This is the third such kitchen established in St. Louis. The others which are for the use of white persons are at Seventh street and Lafayette avenue and Eighth and Biddle streets.

Funds for the new kitchen were raised at the association's second food show held at the Coliseum last spring. It will serve a district extending from Union Station to Compton avenue and Pine street to the railroad yards. In this area are several thousands of negroes, a majority of whom, it is believed, will appreciate the advantage of obtaining wholesome and well-cooked food at moderate prices. Arrangements were under the direction of Mrs. E. T. Senseney, director of the association.

The kitchen is in the building formerly occupied as The Childrens' Hospital. Its cafeteria will seat 50 persons and the kitchen proper has facilities for accommodating the large cash and carry trade which is expected to develop.

Miss M. Perry, graduate of one of the leading training schools for negroes, will be in charge of the kitchen.

The funds of the second food show have also made it possible for the association to purchase an automobile truck which is in daily use in connection with the factory canteen service of the kitchens and with carrying of food to the Red Cross "vacation city" in Forest Park.

"TRUE HEART SUSIE"
The story of a plain girl
An ARTCRAFT Picture PRESENTED BY
D.W.GRIFFITH
ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Directed by D. W. Griffith. Story by Marian Fremont. Photographed by G. W. Bitzer

HERE is the latest of those wonderful dramas woven around the lives of plain people with which D.W. Griffith has thrilled all America.

It's a Griffith Production with a Griffith cast, full of that creative genius which absorbed you in "Birth of a Nation," "Hearts of the World," "The Great Love," and "The Girl Who Stayed at Home."

True Heart Susie (Lillian Gish) is the photoplay of a girl who gave everything she had but life to make the boy she loved into a man she could respect.

But gratitude is a mighty uncommon virtue and Robert Harron, as the boy, chooses the rouged trail of a jazz artist (Clarine Seymour) rather than Susie's heart of gold.

It takes a Griffith to make a plain girl triumph over a pretty girl. Come and see how he does it!

A group of South Side juveniles gave an interesting show at Monroe theater, Chippewa street and California avenue, on the evening of July 23, and earned $20 for the Milk and Ice Fund. The affair was arranged by Mildred Scarborough, and the following children participated in the miscellaneous program: Marjorie and Mildred Stoddard, Baby Bergt, Helen Kress, Ruth Werner, Ivena Baker, Helen Steffan, Agnes and Harry McCauley, Virginia and Martha Stoffer, Lillian Davidson, Lorretta Cizek, Florence Demper, Weldon Pavitt, Elvera Graul, Helen Holtse, Viola Detter, William Irby, Verna Forrizke, Nauma and Baby Edward, Augusta Brikman and Pearl Hardgrove.

The following girls earned $8 by giving an entertainment at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Aye, 4157 Botanical avenue last Wednesday evening: Miriam Lucile Aye, Marion Coakley, Thelma Witzig, Wilhelmina Arlemann, Edith Jones, Arminta McKinney, Sunshine Laney, Gladys Hughes, Gladys Williams and Frances Sewing. Mr. Cyril Aye, assisted by Master George Johnson, earned $5 from their lemonade and soda stand conducted on the porch during the entertainment and this made a total of $13 for the babies.

Show on Humphrey Street.

A show at 3850 Humphrey street netted $12 for the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund. The workers were: Lucille Meidroth and Augusta Trauernich, who managed the affair, assisted by Emma and Nettie Davis, Winifred Trauernich, Virginia Allgeyer, Elizabeth Clucas, Betty Dewar and Helen Holste.

Eight children gave a show at 4221 Labadie avenue, and made $7 for the babies. They were: Mary and Josephine Salia, Miron and Robert Toeoll, Bernice O'Neill, Louise Gilmore and Evelyn and Audrey Capps.

Ten children gave a show followed by a sale of lemonade at 2614 North Tenth street, under the management of Miss Loss, and earned $6 for the fund. They were: Rosie Endraske, Margaret and Elizabeth O'Brien, Harold Loss, George and Lucille Anderson, Sylvester Lukowky, Irene Grafe, Oliver Brady and William Peckham.

Violin Solos on Program.

A show was given at 3863 Rutger street by Mabel Woodling, Margaret Apple, Florence Scott, Florence and Margaret McCoy and Margaret Probasco. Several violin solos were rendered by Florence Scott, whose home is in Kalama, Washington, and who has been visiting her aunt since May. Lemonade and cake were served after the show, and $5.30 was realized from the evening's entertainment for the babies.

Six children from the neighborhood of 3600 Shenandoah avenue gave a show at 3643A Shenandoah, and made $4. The children were: Genevieve Bruer, Gema and Nicholas Regna, Martha Cotner, Joe Kilkaulm and Dorothy Cox.

One of the best juvenile shows of the season, according to those who attended, was presented at 4265 Cleveland avenue by Dorothy Marie Hogan, May Belle Burton and Bessie and Esther Evans. It netted $2.92.

Checks Sent by Mail.

Six friends of the babies who live in the 2000 block on Russell avenue gave a show at 2029 Russell and made $1.70. The names of the workers and their respective residence numbers follow: Robert Moon, 2029; Ethel Connor, 2036; Anita Lewitz, 2052; Dora Aronis, 2035A; Nell Murray, 2031, and Ben Freeman, 2037.

Paul F. Kistner, 5658 Cabanne avenue, forwarded a check for $5 to be added to the Milk and Ice Fund and $1 was received from Mrs. S. D. Wilson, 411 North Newstead. Five dollars was received "in loving memory of Max Russack, who died in St. Louis, Aug. 7, 1913."

APPLICATION FOR BAIL FOR DR. REDDISH DENIED BY COURT

An application for bail for Dr. Horace Augustus Reddish, charged with the murder of his father, Stephen M. Reddish, April 26, was denied yesterday by Circuit Judge Jones at Jerseyville, Ill.

In passing on the application the Judge said the presumption of Dr. Reddish's guilt was so strong as to render the acceptance of bond inadvisable.

It is expected that Dr. Reddish will be placed on trial at the September term of court.

Make This Test For Acid-Stomach

There are millions of people who suffer almost daily from the horrors of an acid-stomach—indigestion; sour, gassy, stomach; distressing heartburn; sickening food-repeating; painful bloat and that miserable, puffed up, lumpy feeling after eating. Many of these people have tried treatment after treatment; medicine after medicine; others have gone to doctors and stomach specialists and some to hospitals but in spite of all of their efforts they have obtained no lasting relief or a permanent cure.

These symptoms simply mean acid-stomach. If allowed to run on, they are very likely to cause a lot of serious trouble. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, gout, lumbago, sciatica, splitting headache, dizzy spells, nervousness, sleeplessness, mental depression, melancholia, a feeling of listlessness and all-goneness—these are just a few of the disorders which can be traced to acid-stomach. As a matter of fact, acid-stomach is often the direct cause of those almost incurable conditions known as catarrh of the stomach, intestinal ulcer, and cancer of the stomach. The lives of those who suffer from these serious troubles are nothing short of daily agony. Surely, then, you must see how important it is to go at once to the seat of the trouble—acid-stomach. You know what acid-mouth does to the teeth—how it eats right through the hard enamel and causes them to decay. Think then of the havoc that must be caused by excess acid in the stomach!

Even if you are not suffering any immediate stomach pains, but are not feeling just as fit and fine as you should, you should by all means make this test: go to your drug store at once and get a big box of EATONIC. It is in the form of pleasant-tasting tablets—you eat them like a bit of candy. EATONIC is prepared for just one purpose—correcting acid-stomach by driving out the excess acid. EATONIC literally absorbs the excess acid. It brings instant relief from the pains of indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour, gassy stomach, bloat, etc. It makes the stomach pure, sweet, cool and comfortable, puts it in a normal, healthy condition, so that your food is properly digested. You need every bit of strength you can possibly get out of the food you eat—and EATONIC helps you get it.

Don't put this test off if you value your future good health and happiness. You run no chance at all because EATONIC is absolutely guaranteed to give you relief or your druggist will refund your money. The cost is a mere trifle.

MAN WHO WANTED TO SPREAD RICHES HELD BY POLICE

SUSPICION AROUSED BY ADVERTISEMENT

Announced He Had Nothing to Sell and Only Wanted to Make People Rich—Owes $20,000 to Relatives.

Chief of Detectives Hannegan's office had the appearance of a wholesale oil stock salesroom yesterday, after detectives finished laying out enough promotion literature to fill several trunks. They had seized it the night before after arresting William C. Uphoff, 34 years old, of 3523 North Grand avenue.

Uphoff's arrest was brought about through boasting that he was a friend of Hannegan, who didn't know him, and by advertising that he had nothing to sell and that he only wanted to make a lot of people rich.

From the contents of Uphoff's home the detectives found that the seeker of the great wealth Uphoff offered would have his choice between the stock of six old companies and one toy company. Uphoff admitted at police headquarters that none of his companies had been very successful, though he said he had sold $3000 of stock in three of them within the last eight months.

Uphoff's advertisement, which attracted police attention, was:

Ad Arouses Suspicion.

"If you are able to think for yourself and are true to God and man, you may answer this ad and get in with the best proposition ever offered to any man or woman. I have nothing to sell, but have the power to make several thousand people a fortune if they will listen to reason. Write or call. William C. Uphoff, 3523 North Grand avenue."

Some of his literature, however, admitted that he had something to sell. He frankly stated it was not "100 per cent safe," but said it was "100 per cent honest." He called attention to great wealth obtained by taking a chance, in this verse:

"A man may work and sweat and sweat
His future to advance;
But he never yet got rich, you bet,
Unless he took a chance."

Uphoff had cards in his pocket describing himself as general field manager of the Illinois-Kentucky Oil & Refining Co., and stock literature of the Sunshine Oil & Refining Co., the American Securities Co., the Prudential Oil & Refining Co., the Universal Oil & Refining Co., the Money-Back Oil & Refining Co., and the Liberty Toy Co.

He told the detectives that he owned no land, but had several leases on land in Kentucky. He would have had more leases, he said, except that the Standard Oil Co., which he described as his only enemy in the world, would "beat him to them."

His attention was called to his pledge of wealth for others, and he was asked how wealthy he was.

Owes $20,000 to Relatives.

"I owe all my relatives," he replied. "I owe my brother-in-law $3000, and owe my mother-in-law, my sisters and my brothers. I owe just $20,000.

As the market for oil stock was a little slow during the war, Uphoff began selling stock in the Liberty Toy Co., which he represented would make warlike toys. This stock did not sell very well, but Uphoff attempted to use it as a feeder for his oil stock schemes, sending to prospective toy stock salesmen questions as to whether they had any connection with the Standard Oil Co., and as to whether they had relatives who might become interested in the oil business.

Among his effects was found a newspaper clipping showing that he was arrested in January, 1917, on a charge of selling the same Florida land twice. He said he gave some oil stock to a lawyer, who "fixed it up" so that he never heard of the case again.

Uphoff was held for investigation by Federal authorities.

WOMAN'S SCARF FOUND AFTER ROBBERY OF GARDNER SUITE

Only Clew in Theft From Governor's Apartment at Long Beach, Cal.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 9.—A woman's scarf found on the floor near Mrs. Gardner's dresser is thus far the only clew in the robbery of the apartment of Gov. Frederick D. Gardner of Missouri, at Long Beach, Friday night. Jewels valued at $2500 were stolen.

Mrs. Gardner says the scarf belongs to no member of her family and the police are working on the theory that a woman committed the robbery.

The thief is believed to have entered the Gardner apartments with a pass key. A number of similar robberies have occurred at Long Beach in the last few months.

FRENZY AND EXCITEMENT LACKING IN U. S. SENATE AT DEBATE ON LEAGUE

Only a Handful of Senators and Few Spectators Are Present at Ordinary Session.

From the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Scene, the chamber of the Senate of the United States; time, any afternoon during a league of nations speech. The galleries are packed; in the rear can be seen doorkeepers resisting the pressure of crowds on the outside struggling to get in. In the space reserved for members of the diplomatic corps, directly in front of the rostrum, are the emissaries of many nations. Above and behind the rostrum sit the reporters, writing frenziedly. Some lean perilously over the railing, fearful of missing some movement or word on the floor of the chamber. Surrounding the reporters are messenger boys, who seize the written sheets and dash with them, in frantic but noiseless haste, to the invisible telegraph room in the rear of the gallery.

At their desks sit 95 Senators of the United States, each in an attitude of strained attention. Vice-President Marshall, an eager listener, presides. No sound permeates the chamber save only the rolling periods of the orator of the hour (or two or three hours), the ninety-sixth Senator, who is delivering a philippic against or a eulogy of the league of nations.

This Senator has given notice the day before that on this day he would address the Senate, hence the crowds, the atmosphere of tension. Will he support the league or denounce it? His colleagues and the foreign diplomats anxiously await the disclosure of his views. The reporters are there in swarms to flash the intelligence to a waiting world.

All Eyes on Speaker.

All eyes are centered upon the speaker; all ears are strained to hear him. A new Demosthenes! Statesmanlike (whatever that is) is his bearing; his eyes flash; words of burning eloquence fall from his lips. With voice and with gesture he tears the league to tatters or enshrines it among the stars, according to his personal preference.

(Insert at appropriate point the sub-title, "The Applause of Listening Senates to Command," and end scene with fade-out.)

In some such way the movie scenario writer probably would depict the scene in the Senate. And judging from the remarks that one overhears from tourists intent on "doing the Senate," in their round of the capitol, the scene approximates the mental picture that they and many other good Americans have formed. You read in your newspaper that Senator So-and-So has delivered an address on the league of nations, and you visualize—do you not?—an orator speaking extemporaneously, attentively heard by crowds in the galleries, and at least a majority of his colleagues.

Come to the Senate chamber and see what really happens. It is the Chamber of Disenchantment.

Plenty of Room.

The galleries are not packed. They may be fairly well filled, or may contain only a sprinkling of people, the number depending on the fame of the speaker, the amount of advance advertising his speech has received, and the number of sightseers who happen to be visiting the capitol on that particular day. If, for instance, it is known that Senator Borah is going to launch a new attack, the crowd will be larger than usual. An advertised speech by Reed, Knox, Hitchcock or any other leader on either side of the league fight will likewise swell the normal attendance. But, except on rare occasions, as when the President addresses Congress, nobody need be afraid that he can't get a seat.

The crowd ordinarily is composed of two classes: Sightseers and that section of the Washington public which apparently has no other occupation than that of attending the sessions of Congress and committee hearings. Day after day, one can see in the congressional galleries the familiar faces of these regular attendants. Mostly they are women.

The sightseers compose the bulk of the gallery audience. They come in with expectant faces, sit half an hour or so, and then resume their tour of the building. Throughout the afternoon the tourists come and go. Some of them, apparently, deem it proper to conceal their disillusionment by nodding assent to whatever proposition the speaker may advance. Hitchcock gets as many nods for a defense of the league as Borah for the contrary, and likely as not the nods are from the same persons.

Nodding Senators Retire.

There are nods and nods. Those by Senators on the floor are of the other kind. The number of such nods is limited by the fact that when a Senator feels that one is imminent he can escape to a cloakroom and lie down. Or he may even stretch himself on the lounge at the rear of the chamber itself. Senator Reed has been observed to do this, though others prefer the seclusion of the cloakrooms.

During the average speech on the league of nations there can't possibly be more than a very few senatorial nods observable from the galleries, for the sufficient reason that only a very few Senators are on the floor. Sometimes six Senators may be seen listening to a speech, sometimes as many as 20. The average is about 15—three on the Democratic side and a dozen on the Republican if a Republican is speaking, with the figures reversed if a Democrat has the floor. A Senator can generally count on his colleagues from the same state.

Like the sightseers in the galleries, the Senators come and go. Lodge may stroll in for a few minutes, exit toward left center and stand in the doorway of the Republican cloakroom to light and puff for a moment at a cigarette before completing his retirement. Curtis of Kansas, the Republican whip, as swarthy and stocky as Lodge is gray and fragile, may beckon to a conference outside. Others may, and do, pass back and forth between the cloakrooms and the chamber. It is never a stationary audience. More are present at the beginning of a speech than in the middle of it, and more at the end of it than in the middle; for when the signal is flashed to the corridors and cloakrooms that a speaker is about to reach his peroration, some members who hope to get the floor come in and take their seats.

Half of Them Listen.

If the count of the members on the floor at any given stage of a speech is, say, 15, the chances are that about eight are listening. The others are reading newspapers or writing. If Vice President Marshall is in the chair he probably looks very tired and bored, but probably he is not in the chair. The Vice President is a canny person and knows when to summon a Senator to take the presiding officer's chair.

The orator of the day probably is not speaking extemporaneously and with burning eloquence. If the occasion is typical he is reading his speech. He may even be reading it very badly. He gives the impression that he will be extremely glad to get the job done. Reporters are not writing frenziedly: the two or three in the gallery are probably not writing at all, but are merely watching to see if the Senator departs from his prepared text. The other reporters are in writing and lounging rooms in the rear of the gallery, or talking to Senators in the corridors.

The text of the speech has been given out in advance and articles covering the main points have been prepared by the press associations and put on the wires.

Diplomats Among Missing.

Diplomats do not throng the gallery reserved for their use. A yawning empty space in front of the Vice President's chair is the rule rather than the exception. Why should the diplomats attend except it be a gala occasion? From the newspapers they know the Senator's views al-

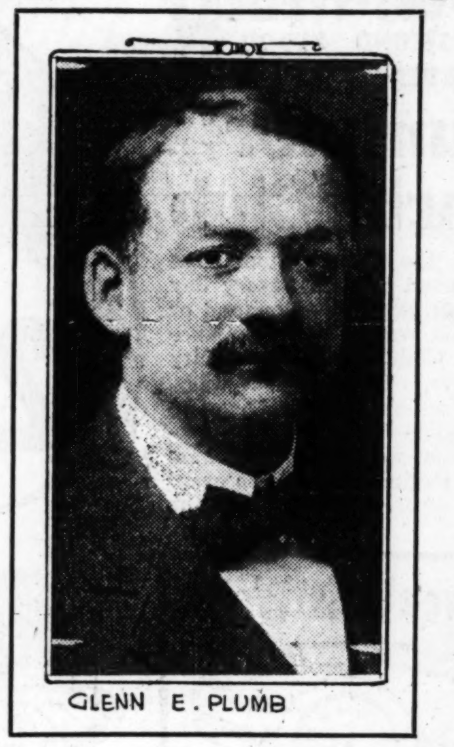
The A, B, C of the Plumb Plan League

As Told in League's Own Primer

For Government Ownership of Railroads

WHAT is the Plumb plan? Much has appeared in the news in the last few days of this scheme, which advocates the public ownership of the railways. As a matter of fact the Plumb Plan League is the only organization advocating public ownership having the indorsement of the organized railway employes. The league has issued a primer which explains fully the plans and purposes of the organization and tells how it would secure, not only public ownership, but democracy in the operation of the railroads.

In order to elucidate the idea the Post-Dispatch reprints in full this primer, which has as its title, "The A, B, C of the Plumb Plan." The reader will bear in mind that what follows is the language and conclusion of the advocates of the plan and is ex-parte in all respects, and, it is hardly necessary to add, the summary which follows the presentation by question and answer in no sense represents the views and opinion of the Post-Dispatch. The primer follows:



GLENN E. PLUMB

What is the Plumb plan? It is a plan for the public ownership and the democracy in the control of the railroads.

Who has indorsed it? The 2,000,000 organized railroad employes of America; and the American Federation of Labor, approving the principle of Government ownership, has instructed its Executive Committee to co-operate with the officers of the railroad internationals in their effort. It also has been indorsed by several farmers' organizations.

How does it propose to buy the roads? By issuing Government bonds with which to pay for the legitimate private interests in the railroad industry.

How does it propose to operate the roads? By a board of 15 directors, five named by the President, to represent the public; five elected by the operating officers, five elected by the classified employes.

Does this mean Government operation? No; it is operation by a board in which those having the responsibility have also the authority. It is superior to Government operation because it prevents control by an inefficient bureaucracy; and is true democracy, since it gives the men engaged in the industry a voice in its management.

What becomes of the surplus? After operating expenses are paid, and fixed charges are met, including the interest on outstanding Government securities, the surplus is divided equally between the Government, and the men. The employe's portion is to be divided between the managerial and classified employes, the former receiving double the rate received by the latter class. This is not a profit, since the corporation has no capital. What the men receive is a dividend on efficiency.

Is this a bonus system? No, it is giving those who increase production a share of the results their increased effort has produced; and this share is theirs for as long as they are actually in the service, and is not forfeitable.

The Plan of Operation.

Why do the operating officials receive the larger rate of dividend? Because it serves as a greater stimulus to the group with the most responsibility. And since the operating officials would lose dividends if wages were increased it acts automatically to prevent collusion between labor directors and the operating directors to outvote the public's directors in raising wages beyond a reasonable level. The chief argument against the plan is that the public loses control of its own property, and that the men in charge cannot be prevented from combining to pay themselves extortionate wages. This method of sharing dividends sets up a natural barrier against collusion.

Is this the only protection for the public? No; the rate-making power remains with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and if wages were raised so high that rates had to be increased, the commission could refuse to change them and shippers might appeal to the courts for redress. If the operation by the directors results in a deficit, Congress can revoke their charter.

Does this difference in dividends create hostility between officials and men? No, because without harmony between them neither group can earn dividends. An official in working for his own dividend is working for the dividend of his subordinates, for one cannot gain unless all gain.

Does the plan assure a decrease in rates? It provides that when the Government's share of the surplus is 5 per cent or more of the gross operating revenue, rates shall be reduced accordingly to absorb the amount the Government receives. For instance: If the entire surplus one year is $500,000,000, and this is 10 per cent of the gross operating revenue, the Government receives $250,000,000. And because this is 5 per cent, rates are decreased 5 per cent. See what follows. Without new economies or new business profits the next year would be only $250,000,000, and the employes and the Government would receive only half the amount of the year before. But decreased rates mean more business; and also, the reduction in dividends would stimulate the employes to improve their operation by applying better methods. So the tendency is to assure constantly decreasing rates, to add to the volume of business, and to give the most efficient service human ingenuity and devotion can provide. Decreased rates mean cheaper commodities; and so, through effectiveness of the railroads, the purchasing power of money is increased, not only for the railroad man, but for every wage earner and every purchaser.

What does the Government do with its share of the surplus? It invests it in improvements and extensions, thus adding to the value of the railroads without adding to the fixed charges. It retires the outstanding bonds, thus reducing the fixed charges. Ultimately the public has its railroad service at cost.

Does the Government pay for all extensions? No; the community benefited must pay if it can; if it is able to pay all, the building of the extension is obligatory. If it only pays part, the Government pays the remainder, but only makes the extension as it deems wise. And where the general public and not a local community would be benefited, the Government pays the whole bill.

How are disputes between officials and men adjusted? By boards, to which the operating officials elect five members and the men five members. In case of failure to reach an adjustment, the case is appealed to the directors.

Who determines the rate of wages? The board of directors.

Who supervises the purchase of the roads? A purchasing board, composed of the Interstate Commerce Commission and three directors of the new Government corporation, one director from each group.

Who decides the value of the private interest in the railroads? The courts. It is a judicial question, and is to be answered only after an examination of the charters of the existing companies, the laws under which they are created and the manner in which the company has lived up to its charter and these laws.

Will the public have to pay for watered stock? No. The public will probably pay less than two-thirds of what the railroads claim as their value.

Are there other savings? Yes, the public can obtain the money to purchase the lines at 4 per cent, whereas the public is now charged rates to guarantee the roads 6 1-2 per cent on their money. The saving on the present capital account of the railroads would be about $400,000,000, and on an honest valution would be nearly twice this sum. The Plumb plan provides for a sinking fund and every year one of the fixed charges would be 1 per cent of the outstanding indebtedness, to be used in retiring the bonds. The Government also uses its profit in retiring bonds, so eventually, probably in 50 years, the people would own the roads debt free. A further saving would be in the operation of the roads as a unified system, which permits the interchange of equipment, the end of wasteful competition and greater economy in buying supplies. Under this plan passenger rates of 1 1-2 cents a mile and a reduction of freight rates by 40 per cent appear reasonable.

Public and Labor Share Alike

Why is it called the Plumb plan? Because it was conceived by Glenn E. Plumb, general counsel for the Organized Railway Employes of America.

What can you do to help its realization? Join the Plumb Plan League (lodge membership, $10 a year; individual membership, $1, payable to Treasurer Plumb Plan League, 447-453 Munsey Building, Washington), talk with your friends and write your Congressman. It is the only association to secure public ownership that has the indorsement of the organized railroad employes.

Who is eligible to the league? Everyone who believes that democracy in industry is the solution of the railroad problem.

The Plumb Plan League has been formed for the purpose of uniting in a single organization the millions of American citizens who believe that the time has come when the public must take over the railroads of the country.

The organization is national in scope and nonpartisan in character.

A financial panic is threatened by the demand of the railroad interests for the return of the railroads to private control on terms certain to result in disaster.

The leading financiers of Wall street and the most prominent railway executives declare that this crisis is coming, unless their wishes are complied with. Other equally competent authorities assert that the plans of the railroad interests are certain to result in disaster if the railroads are given back on their terms.

Distinguished officials of our Government—legislative, administrative and executive—agree that this danger is impending, although they disagree on the best method of averting it.

Upon but one point, apparently, is there harmony of thought, and that is in the necessity for governmental intervention to save the nation from a financial panic a few years after the closing of the world war. Such a panic would be far more serious than was the panic of 1873, which occurred within 10 years after the Civil War.

Over 6,000,000 American citizens and voters, through the organized Railway Employes of America, composed of the 14 railroad internationals, together with the American Federation of Labor, the Nonpartisan League, various farmers' organizations and civic bodies support the Plumb plan as the only rational solution of the railroad problem.

The Plumb Plan League comes into existence, therefore, to arouse public sentiment and secure laws to accord with the determination of these millions of American citizens to make the principles of the Plumb plan effective in the critical situation which confronts the country.

Other millions of Americans, representing all walks of life, whose interests are likewise in danger, will be appealed to and urged to join this movement on behalf of the public welfare.

The Four Corners of the Plumb Plan

Railroads are overcapitalized—hence freight and passenger rates are exorbitant, wages inadequate and service unsatisfactory.

Purchase the railroads for the actual amount invested to afford public service as determined judicially, recognize no fictitious securities, no discounts and no improvements paid for out of earnings or by the public.

Substitute for the present Wall street control the unhampered management of trained officials and employes—the most intelligent and efficient transportation organization in the world.

Pay capital a fair and fixed return on the dollars actually invested in railroad property and divide savings effected by economy and efficiency between the public and the operating organization—share and share alike.

The income received by railroad companies is derived chiefly from the transportation of commodities and people—freight charges and passenger fares. Both of these are paid by the public. The expenditures of railroad companies include, broadly speaking, returns on securities issued, cost of upkeep and extensions, operating charges and wages to employes. Rates, which include both freight and passenger fares, must provide the income necessary to cover expenditures—otherwise bankruptcy is inevitable.

Therefore, the item of returns on securities issued or which are included in the "property investment account" is of paramount importance in rate-fixing.

This "property investment account" item is vital. It should be noted carefully. It is a bookkeeping term used to cover the billions of watered stock and billions of fictitious values upon which Wall street demands that labor and the public shall pay tribute.

Inflated capitalizations, if officially recognized by Congress, will call for inflated earnings. These can only be produced by higher rates or reduced wages and inferior service.

Four plans which have been suggested for the solution of the railroad problem are of enough importance to warrant attention. They are:

1. Return of railroads to private ownership with a governmental subsidy.
2. Return of railroads to private ownership with a rate increase.
3. Government ownership and operation of railroads.
4. The Plumb plan, with its equitable safeguarding of all interests.

The first plan is so contrary to American thought and practice that it does not merit serious consideration.

The second plan is also objectionable and injurious, since it contemplates a general increase of commodity prices that will eventually re-establish the identical conditions that exist today.

The third plan finds favor with a very limited number of Americans, because there is a grave fear that political management will be little, if

How Kansas City Aids Good Roads Plan in 100-Mile Radius to Win Business

Experts Watching All Propositions for Road Building in Effort to Direct Them Towards That City.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Aug. 9.

WHEN the last Missouri Legislature passed the McCullough-Morgan road law, under which Missouri counties can build good hard roads or soft mud roads, Kansas City forgot about its fight on the measure as a "mud road bill" and started out on an organized campaign to have roads built, whether good or bad, which should lead straight to Kansas City.

A Lesson for St. Louis From Kansas City

THIS story of Kansas City's activity in fostering a vigorous propaganda for the building of good roads within a radius of 100 miles of the city in Eastern Kansas and Western Missouri is presented with a view of suggesting to St. Louis business interests what may be done in the same way around this city.

A 100-mile circle drawn around St. Louis would include a population of more than 2,600,000 in 29 Missouri and 37 Illinois counties, including some of the richest portions of the two states, as well as large industrial districts.

Illinois recently has undertaken a $60,000,000 road-building project to build hard roads in all parts of the State. Road engineers have suggested that proper efforts exerted through St. Louis interests could direct some of these roads from Southern and Central Illinois counties to St. Louis, and that St. Louis could derive much gain.

As a result there isn't a road bond issue campaign in Kansas City's trade territory that Kansas City does not have a hand in it, and there isn't a road project proposed that Kansas City does not have a well-informed road expert on the spot with a definite plan outlined by which the travel over that new road, when it is built, can be directed toward Kansas City.

No secret is made of this in the city on the Kaw. Business men and road builders there admit they are actuated by a spirit more or less selfish. They want the business good roads leading to Kansas City will bring and they are going out after it on the theory that if the business of the vastly wealthy surrounding territory once is drawn in it will stay.

Thirty-nine business and civic organizations in Kansas City in May leagued themselves together to boost road building in the territory surrounding the city. They formed the Good Roads Association of Greater Kansas City and invited everybody in Kansas City to join and pay $10 a year to carry out the work.

It was explained through the newspapers and at the meetings that Kansas City didn't expect to build any roads outside of town. The promoters realized that no amount of money they could raise would amount to much in acttual road construction, but they could raise a fund of sufficient size to maintain an office properly equipped with every detail of information about road construction that county highway engineers and County Court Judges who were thinking about good roads might want. The fund could provide men to go to any place within the Kansas City territory and arouse road enthusiasm, it could provide money to pay for a systematic good road propaganda through the newspapers in the territory, and it could help in defraying the expenses of circulating petitions for good roads bond issue elections.

Kansas City is doing all of that. Something more than $10,000 already has been obtained and the organization is little more than started, though it is going ahead to accomplish its purpose just as though it had been at it for years.

To Conquer Territory.

One of the first things done was to draw a circle in a radius of 100 miles surroundings Kansas City and declare it to be conquerable road building territory, and it sent out to Topeka, Kan., and hired J. Frank Smith, president of the Kansas Good Roads Association, who had been leading in arousing road building sentiment in Kansas for many years, to have charge of the work.

On the outer rim of Kansas City road circle are the Iowa line to the north, Princeton, Milan, Huntsville, Boonville, Versailles, Hermitage, Stockton and Lamar, Mo., and Girard, Chanute, Yates Center, Council Grove, Manhattan and Frankfort, Kan., and a good portion of one Southeastern Nebraska county. Kansas City wants every public road within that circle, which is 200 miles in diameter, built with the view of carrying the business of that road to Kansas City.

Smith talked to the Post-Dispatch correspondent about the plans of the association.

"We, of course, are not putting up any money for road construction," he said. "That would be very foolish, because we couldn't get enough money to help any, but we can arouse sentiment.

"We see to it that if petitions for road bonds are being circulated in one county that the newspapers of all the other counties know about it. That unquestionably breeds interest, and pretty soon some of those other counties are thinking about road bonds, and the first thing you know they are circulating petitions, and so it goes. We are continually arousing the people to the need of good roads. We show them, for instance, that they can save probably $25 a year or more, on automobile repairs if they have good roads. We show them they can haul their product to the railroads, or to Kansas City for that matter, at a lower gasoline cost for their trucks, or a lower cost with farm wagons, over good roads than over bad ones. We keep drilling that into them.

A Catching Fever.

"Of course, it is slow in some places, but we don't let up on that account. Every time a road bond issue is passed in a county we know that pretty soon there will be a bond issue passed in the adjoining counties. There isn't anything quite as catching as the good roads fever when it gets into a county or a neighborhood.

"We are prepared to explain to anybody in any of that territory, and we won't hesitate to go beyond it if anybody wants us to, the road laws of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska.

"We will explain just how they must go about it to obtain state and Federal aid in building their roads and give them all the information that is to be had as to the best kind of roads for the particular communities.

"While we have not been able in three months to compile all of the information, it is our purpose to have proper engineering tests made of all road materials and be in a position to say just what every kind of road material will stand up under, but we will seek to give prospective road builders the information which will aid them in getting the most for their money.

"Just now we are particularly interested in building roads toward Kansas City, but we would like to see St. Louis go into an active campaign. Perhaps St. Louis can find a better plan than the one we have adopted, but we know that any road-building activity in Eastern Missouri and Illinois will help us in that it will keep up the interest throughout the Middle West for good roads."

Estimates Are Compiled.

From the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce and other business organizations, the Good Roads Association has compiled estimates of the prospective growth of business in its

Value of service with 2000 cars [illegible] per mile	$10.50

The association laid out an immediate program of considerable proportions as the one to bring the greatest good to Kansas City in the shortest time. This included:

A good road to Excelsior Springs.

A good road to Lawrence and Topeka.

To secure hard surface for these roads.

Secure resurfacing of road to Leavenworth.

Paved road to fill eight-mile gap on Leavenworth road.

Hard-surfaced road to connect Bonner Springs road with Fort to Fort road.

Connecting Fort to Fort road with Kansas City.

Hard road to Fort Scott.

Paved road to St. Joseph.

A 365-day road between Kansas City and St. Louis.

Marking highways with easily followed road signs.

Securing maintenance of present roads in best possible condition.

Securing hard-surfaced roads over entire system at early date.

Drafting hard-road petitions.

Planning and assisting road-bond campaigns.

Spreading clean, effective 365-day road propaganda and crystallizing sentiment that will build roads.

Furnishing exact information for securing State and Federal road aid.

To assist tourists and freight traffic into the city by systematic routing over boulevards and trafficways.

To make Greater Kansas City's merchandise, professions and entertainments available daily to 1,500,000 people—the population within our circle.

A 150-mile circle drawn around St. Louis would include a population of more than 3,500,000 in 29 Missouri and 37 Illinois counties, including some of the richest portions of the two States as well as large industrial districts.

Illinois recently has undertaken a $60,000,000 road-building project to build hard roads in all parts of the State. Road engineers have suggested that proper efforts exerted through St. Louis interests could direct some of these roads from Southern and Central Illinois counties to St. Louis and that St. Louis could derive much gain.

LITTLE GOOD ROADS CONSTRUCTION UNTIL 1920 IN MISSOURI

Highway Board Having Surveys Made Throughout State to Be Ready for Spring Work.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 9.—Little actual good roads construction can be expected in Missouri before the spring of 1920 in the opinion of F. L. Sanford, chairman of the Missouri State Highway Board, which has under its direction the carrying out of the McCullough-Morgan road law, which was enacted by the last Legislature in response to clamor from rural districts to replace the Hawes law of two years before.

Sufficient time has not elapsed since the enactment of the new law, which is commonly known as the "McCullough-Morgan mud roads law," to demonstrate whether it will aid or retard hard road building in the State, but the Highway Board is engaged in having road surveys made throughout the State to be ready, Chairman Sanford says, to take advantage of the spring weather to build roads.

Preliminary steps, some of which are far advanced while others are in a very elementary stage, have been taken for the building of roads to cost the counties nearly $4,000,000. As this represents only the amount of money which has been voted in bonds or which it is proposed to vote, and as a number of the road projects will be designated as State roads, thus obtaining State and Federal aid, it is not improbable that by next year road construction on projects aggregating at least $10,000,000 will be under way.

There already have been voted in various Missouri counties and road districts for road work yet to be done bonds aggregating $11,442,000.

Elections have been called to vote on road bonds aggregating $1,770,000, and petitions for elections or a strong agitation is under way for the issuance of an additional $1,[illegible] of bonds for roads.

Sanford, speaking to the correspondent of the Post-Dispatch, said:

"Road building in Missouri since the creation of the State Highway Board has been delayed by a number of causes. Of course the war, making the sale of bonds difficult and the work of construction almost impossible, stopped us for more than a year.

"This was followed by the meeting of the Legislature and the certainty that the law would be changed. The passage of the new law came so late in the year that we lost all the spring months, when more work can be done in a week than in several months in the fall and winter.

"As a result there will be little noticeable improvement in Missouri roads this year, but the public must not think that effective work is not

PIMPLES, SORES HUMORS AND SKIN ERUPTIONS

Are Caused by Impure or Bad Blood—Internal Treatment Is Necessary.

There are a great many conditions of poor health caused by bad blood. These disorders are evidenced by skin eruptions, swelling of the glands or joints, falling hair and sores on different parts of the face, limbs or body. While it is bad enough to be sick, such troubles are a continual source of embarrassment and annoyance.

You can alleviate these troubles caused by impure or bad blood by taking Prescription C-2223, a blood purifier of merit. The medicinal ingredients which are used in its manufacture are so proportioned and combined as to go directly to the seat of the trouble, sweep out the impurities and purify the blood, that one great necessity of a healthy body.

Prescription C-2223 contains no mercury, opium, morphine, chloral or strychnine; it was originally the prescription of a prominent physician, used in his practice in the treatment of conditions due to impure blood. If any one doubts the merits of the medicinal ingredients used, the manufacturers will gladly furnish this information to their family physician.

Prescription C-2223 can be found at all good drug stores for $1.50 a bottle, or the manufacturers will send prepaid on receipt of price. Write the C-2223 Laboratory, Memphis, Tenn., for free literature.

KANSAS CITY IS AFTER GOOD ROADS TO GET BUSINESS

being done. The Highway Department is getting every possible preliminary arranged so that construction can start in earnest in the spring. We have divided the State into six road districts with a competent engineer in charge of each, to not only survey roads and aid with advice in preparing specifications, but to aid in creating a road building spirit throughout the State. I can say that we already are seeing the results

"I have insisted upon careful detailed reports of just what every engineer is doing and as to just what is the condition of every road project in the State, and every employe of the board knows that the very last thing the board wants is excuses. I have demanded action, and have impressed upon everybody connected with the department the fact that results not explanations are what we must have. They have joined in the spirit, and while I do not doubt that there will be many persons who will criticize us for not building roads this year, we know that roads cannot be built in a day, and are going ahead. We are confident that by the end of next year the public will be satisfied with our work."

So far six counties have presented specifications for roads which have the approval of the State Highway Board. These are for a total of 101 miles of hard surface road, of which 81 miles has been approved by the Federal Government, and the approval of the remainder of which is thought to be but a matter of a few days.

On each of these roads the State will spend $1200 per mile, and the State and Government together will bear half the cost above that amount.

Although the McCullough-Morgan law was considered principally a dirt road measure, the fact is that none of the six projects approved is a dirt road. Three are for concrete, two for gravel and one for bituminous macadam.

The first county to receive approval was Ralls, which submitted plans for 38 miles of gravel road, one stretch of 16 miles from Oakwood on the Marion County line to Pike County by way of New London. The other is a 22-mile stretch from New London to the Monroe County line by way of Center and Perry. These roads are to cost $4000 a mile. Ralls County is building by public subscription rather than waiting to obtain funds through a bond issue.

The Sedalia special road district has sent in plans for five miles of bituminous macadam road running east from Sedalia, to cost $10,000 a mile.

Mississippi County has submitted plans for 15 miles of concrete road from Charleston to Bird's Point at a cost of $28,000 a mile.

The Federal Government has approved a 27-mile gravel road project from the Cape Girardeau County line to New Madrid, in Scott County. The cost will be $211,000, or slightly less than $8000 a mile.

A concrete road seven miles from Joplin to Carl Junction has been approved. It is to cost $135,684.

Harrison County has obtained approval for nine miles of concrete road in three directions from Bethany, the county seat. The estimated cost is $185,000.

That there is activity for improved roads is indicated by the number of bond issues which have been voted on this summer and the number to be voted on in August and September.

Texas County voted $225,000 of bonds July 29. In July, Howell County voted $500,000, Stone $1,000,000 and Pettis $500,000. In Greene County a proposed issue of $2,000,000 failed to carry, but another election will be held in September. Jasper County will vote in three townships Sept. 19 on a total of $700,000. Monroe County was to have voted Aug. 2 on an issue of $1,500,000, but the election was called off because of the discovery that under the law in a county having its assessed valuation it could not vote more than $1,350,000 without exceeding the legal limit for the county. Elections will be held Tuesday in Worth County on a $500,000 issue, in Shelby on $1,000,000 and in Marion on $1,500,000. Livingston County will vote Aug. 18 on $1,250,000 and Linn County Aug. 19 on $1,000,000.

Previous to the enactment of the present road law, bonds which will produce funds to be expected under the new law had been voted in several counties. Among these were St. Louis, $3,000,000; Buchanan, $2,000,000; Scott, $750,000; New Madrid, $850,000, and Mississippi, $375,000.

Besides the county-wide bond elections, many townships and special road district bond elections were held. These included five townships in Harrison County, $118,000; one in Cooper County, $60,000; five in Gentry, $363,000; two in Saline, $153,000; one in Ripley, $46,500; two in Dunklin, $130,000; one in Madison, $11,000; one in Wayne, $36,000; one in Iron, $35,000; three in Washington, $82,000; Dent County, $160,000; three in Lawrence, $66,000; three in Dade, $57,500; four in Cedar, $85,000; one in Christian, $60,000, and one in Polk, $26,000.

In the following county petitions for elections are being circulated:

Atchison, $1,000,000; Ray, $1,250,000; Holt, $1,000,000; De Kalb, $1,000,000; Carroll, $1,100,000; Clinton, $1,000,000; Caldwell, $1,000,000; Mercer, $600,000; Daviess, $1,000,000; Sullivan, $1,000,000; St. Francois, $1,000,000; Putnam, $750,000; Polk, $750,000; Franklin $1,000,000; Scotland, $600,000; Adair, $750,000; Knox, $400,000; Phelps, $400,000; Audrain, $700,000; Oregon, $300,000; Warren, $400,000, and Morgan, $300,000.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York: Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins hospital, says: "Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly and who are seemingly healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison, which when absorbed by the system, slowly affects the nerves, membrances, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness or even cancer or the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests. Read aloud one full page from a book. If, in the course of reading, your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct, and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh, and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next, in the morning before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or snuff to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In either case you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self-poisoning process irrespective of the dangers and suffer the consequences, or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula: Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol tablets, take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco, the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will quickly improve."

Note—When asked about Nicotol tablets, one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including the Judge & Dolph, the Wolff-Wilson and the Enderle Stores.—ADV.

Kidney Remedy for 40 Years A Pronounced Success

When kidney diseases have been successfully treated for a period of more than forty years, it is reasonable to assume that the remedy therefore must possess unusual merit. Such is the remarkable record of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy. Without its ability to give relief and benefit its users so that they would continue its use, it could not have existed 40 months, much less 40 years of its enviable record. Many letters have come to us to prove that it has been a household remedy for years and years. Here is what one grateful woman has recently written:

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—(Signed) Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D. No. 1, Dunkirk, Ohio.

For the elimination of poisons due to impaired kidney action, Warner's Safe Remedy was famous for 25 years before this woman so judiciously began its effective use. There are thousands of people who realize that their general health depends upon their kidneys and have found Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy a reliable family medicine. Forty years ago it was named "Safe" because it is SAFE absolutely; equalizing the work of both the kidneys and liver. Satisfactory results are obtained in the most severe cases, and it is sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and druggists everywhere. A sample sent on receipt of ten cents. First in St. Louis—
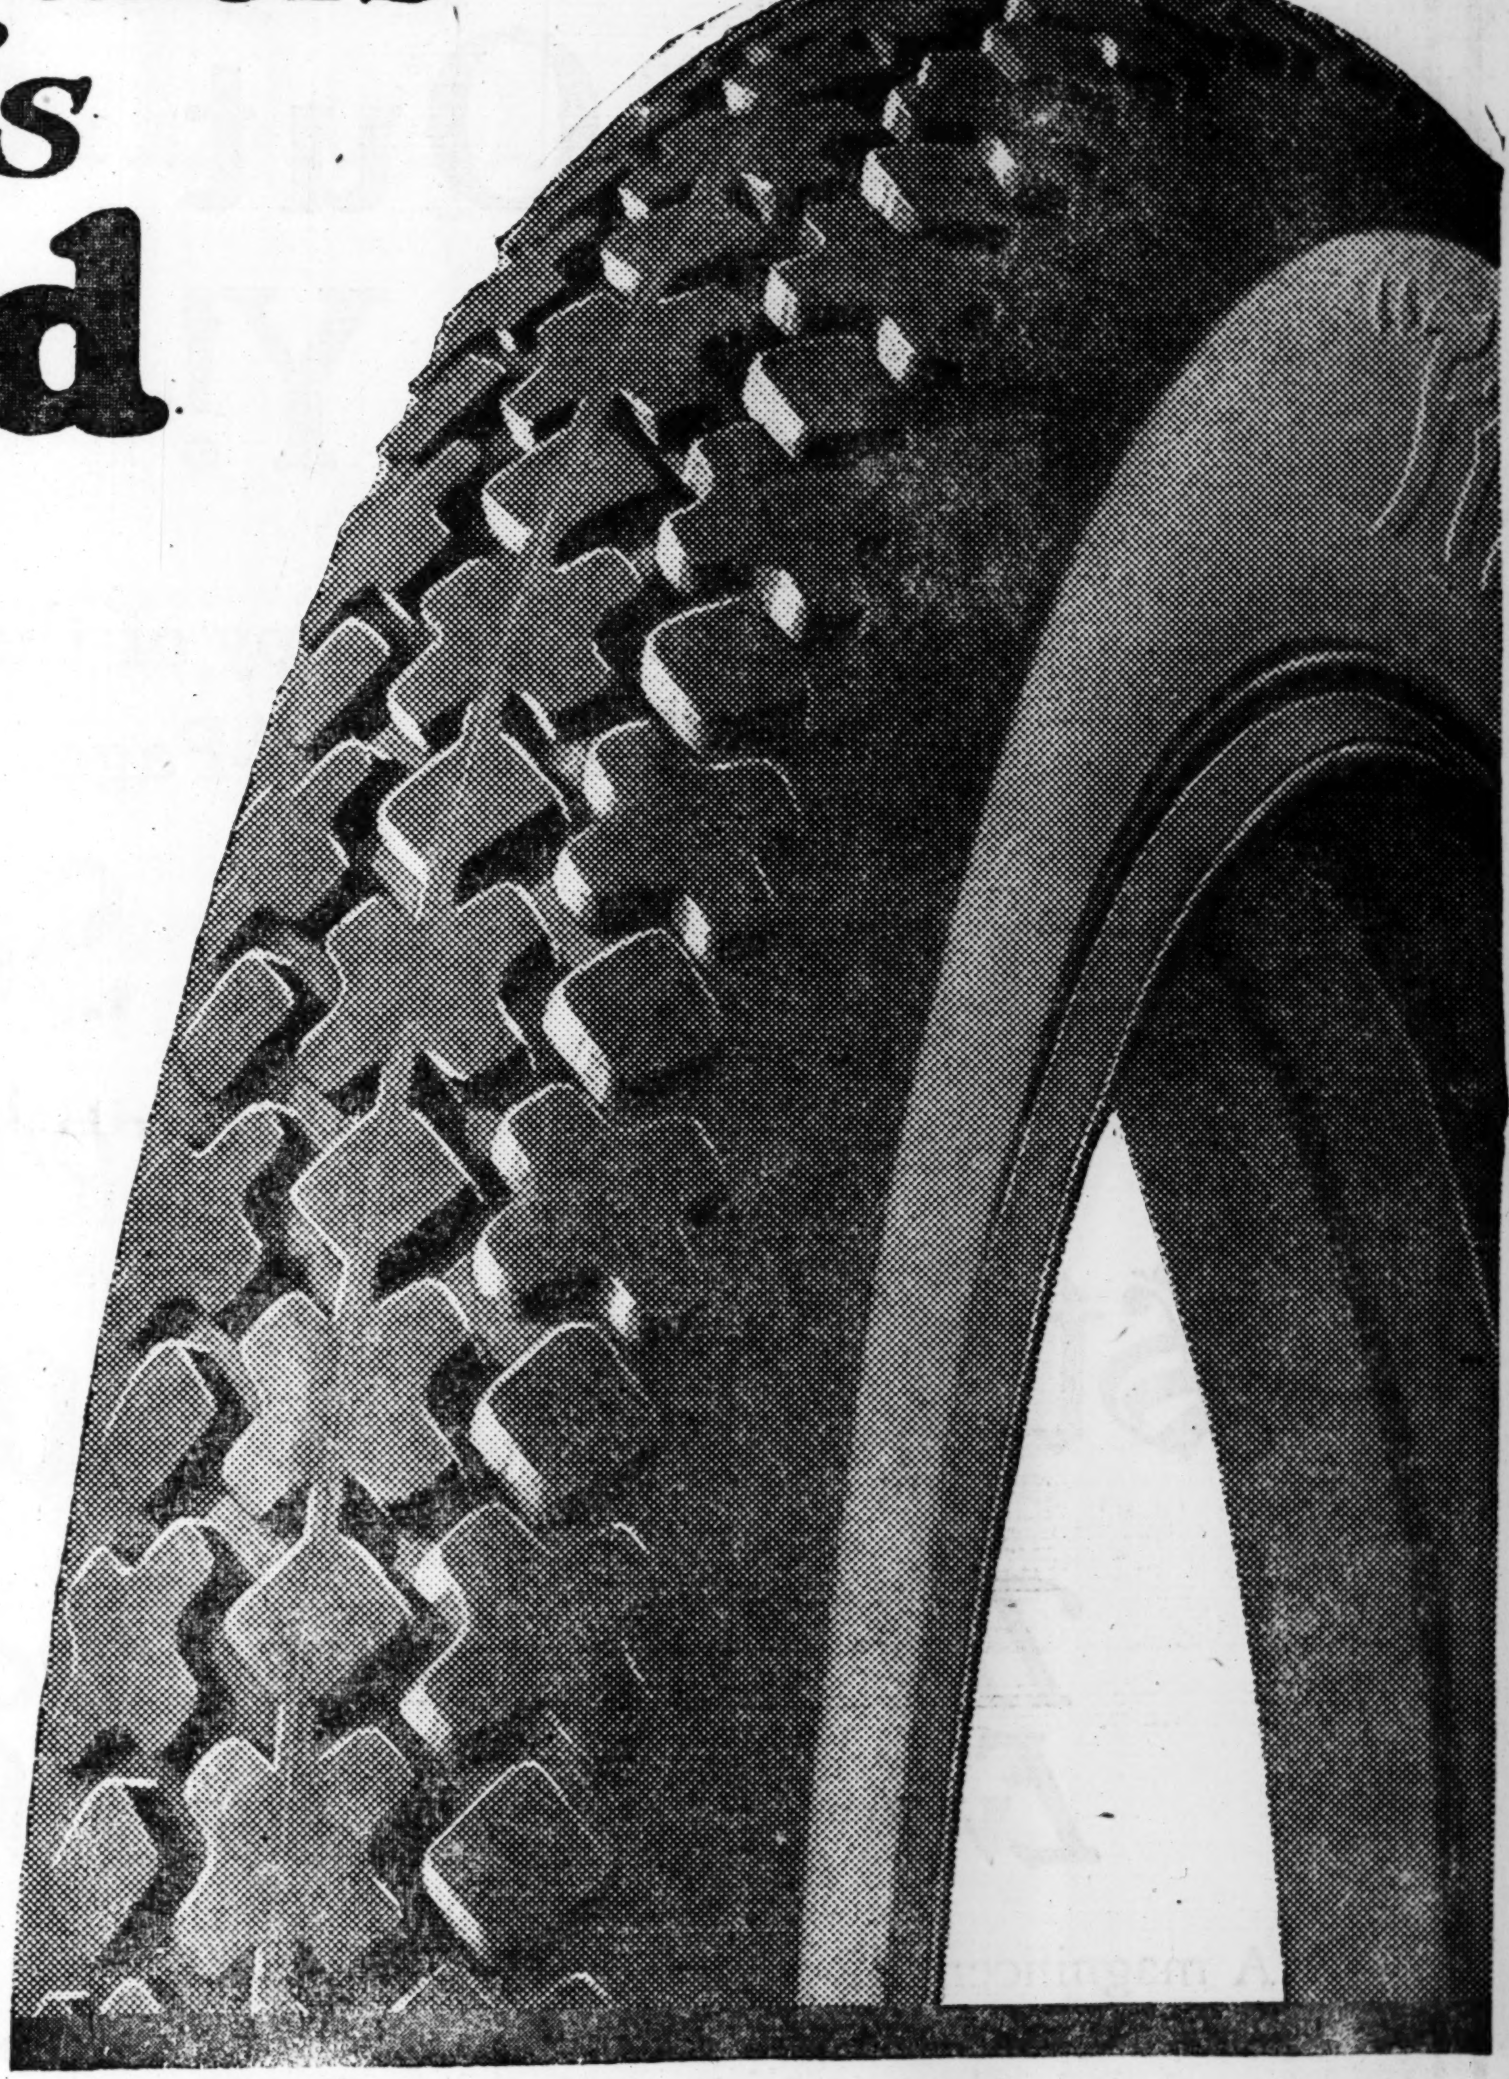
"First in Everything"

"Sells on Sight"

That's what Dealers say about this New Cord



BECAUSE—it's the first of the new standard oversize cords—so big that it leaves no room for comparison.

You get a lot more tire, which means much more mileage. The cross-section is wider, the air capacity is greater, there is much more material—rubber and cord. And all these extras don't appear in the price. See why below.

The new extra heavy non-skid tread is another feature that makes this tire "sell on sight." You can see and feel the extra volume of choice rubber. And if you are something of an engineer you can tell on sight that the tread angles will prevent skid, slide or spin. Whether you are an engineer or not, you will know as soon as you drive these tires that they have real traction, that they do hold the road.

And this cord is as much better inside as it is outside. Firestone builders soak the cords in rubber so they become saturated. Then they put an extra coat of gum between the layers of cord.

It not only "sells on sight" but it delivers mileage and the kind of service that wins permanent users.

How Can Firestone Give So Much More for the Money?

BECAUSE—Firestone is building more mileage per dollar into tires than other makers. And that is because Firestone has done big, practical things in the way of organizing man power and capital.

The 16,000 Firestone workers are doing more per man than the workers in any other organization, so far as we can determine. They are putting more into their work because they are getting more out of it—the things that make for happiness, efficiency.

Over 90% of them own stock in the company.

Thousands own their homes; Firestone Park is the "fireside" of Akron.

So, whether it is the Firestone man in Singapore buying rubber and shipping it direct, whether it is the tire builders in the great Firestone factories at Akron or the men in the field serving you through your dealer, you can count on it that they are giving car-owners most miles per dollar—bigger value this year than it has ever been possible to deliver before.

Let your dealer show you this Firestone Cord.

This is the Firestone year

What Is Behind This Enormous Demand?

For some time, now, the production of Goodyear Tires has been sustained at a point beyond anything previously recorded in the tire industry.

Over several months, the output of the Goodyear Akron factories alone has approximated 25,000 finished Goodyear Tires a day, while the daily production of our Canadian plant has well exceeded 2,000.

It is so evident that even this unprecedented total will not meet all needs that we are now at work on a plant in Los Angeles which will afford us several thousand tires additional daily capacity.

In other words, the demand for Goodyear Tires has assumed such immense proportions as to make our present enormous production all too small.

Behind this demand on the part of the public is no other thing than the consistently fine service Goodyear Tires everywhere deliver users.

No fictitious discounts, no delusive guarantees, no expedients of any sort have been employed to stimulate artificially the steady advance in sales.

Purely on the intrinsic merit of the product, and the faultless character of its performance, rests the unexampled leadership that Goodyear Tires enjoy.

Certainly Goodyear Tires must embody a conspicuous superiority thus to win and hold the allegiance of the largest single group of tire-buyers in the world.

We are devoting our whole energies to the expansion of our production, in an endeavor to establish ample stocks of Goodyear Tires everywhere.

In the meantime we suggest that you let your Goodyear Service Station Dealer show you how to give proper care to the Goodyear Tires you now have, as a means of assuring you their maximum usefulness.

He will be glad to instruct you in the application of Goodyear Tire-Savers, which are designed especially to prevent troubles and to prolong tire life.

Your return from their use will be not only increased satisfaction, but a very material profit in added mileage.

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 10, 1919.

To Indian Creek Is a Short Tour Affording Motorists Many Outdoor Pleasures

Bathing in Clear Water, Fishing, Boating, Wiener Roasts, Hikes and Dancing Are Some of Amusements—Roads Are Rough in Stretches, but Good Roads Are in the Majority.

Indian Creek is a narrow stream that flows over a gravel bed for several miles before emptying into the Meramec River, six miles south of St. Clair, Mo., and is increasing in popularity as a haunt for motorists who want to get off the beaten path for an outing of several weeks or even during the week-end.

An iron bridge crosses Indian Creek about a mile from its mouth and near here parties composed of entire families may be found bathing most any time of day at this season. The water is shallow and cool for long stretches and affords an ideal place for children to wade while the older folks may find pools farther down where the water reaches the shoulder and is so clear that one may easily see the gravel bottom.

Fishing is also popular, the principal varieties being caught are bass and sunfish. For four miles from the mouth of Indian Creek fishing is permitted, but to fish further upstream it is necessary to first obtain permission of the farm owners.

"Lookout," a summer resort located on the south side of the Meramec River near where Indian Creek enters it, caters to motorists.

"Piney Bluff Home" is another resort located on the summit of bluffs several hundred feet high along the Meramec River in the same vicinity.

Both resorts furnish flat bottom row boats which may be used for fishing and other pleasure purposes.

The water of Indian Creek is said to be 20 per cent cooler than the water of the Meramec River where they join, because of the difference in current. There is also a long gravel bar covered with sand in places along the Meramec River at the junction of the two streams that affords an inviting beach for bathing during the cooler hours of the morning and evening.

Lined With Shade Trees.

Indian Creek is lined the greater distance with shade trees which shelter the stream, and make it possible to bathe there during the hottest part of the day.

Bathing suits are not furnished at either resort. The motorist who intends taking a plunge will have to bring his suit along.

The majority of those persons now spending their vacation at these two resorts are St. Louisans.

Their program of entertainment includes hikes through the hills, wiener roasts, hay rides and dancing. At "The Wayside," a stopping place for tourists where refreshments and light lunches are served there has been a dance floor constructed of rough lumber. Dances are held here every Thursday night. It is opposite Piney Bluff Home on the road to Indian Creek.

One of the sports that the majority of the patrons who enjoy swimming and fishing are interested in is a float of 14 miles down the Meramec River that can be had by hauling a flat boat a distance of two and a half miles overland to Wall's Foad.

The managers of both "Lookout" and "Piney Bluff Home" say it would be necessary for motorists to make reservations in advance by either telephone or letter if they contemplated a stay of any length as most of their rooms have been reserved up to the middle of the month. They even suggest that motorists touring for a Sunday dinner inform them by telephone so their dinner would be in readiness upon their arrival. Either resort may be reached by asking the St. Clair operator. For the motorist who would prefer his own basket lunch there are places here and there for parking at his disposal.

Distance Is 75 Miles.

The distance to Indian Creek from the Post-Dispatch Building is approximately 74 miles. At this time the roads are in fairly good condition all the way in taking the course suggested. There are some rough stretches but the majority of the mileage is over improved roads that pass through scenery that causes one to have no regret that he made it.

The procedure most motorists take who spend the week end at Indian Creek is to leave St. Louis before the sun becomes hot and spend the hotter hours at the various shady nooks along Indian Creek and the Meramec River, returning to the city about the time of sundown. The scenery in traveling north from St. Clair to Union at the time of sunset is most beautiful as a broad view is afforded to the west for miles and miles over the rolling farmland fringed with timber.

Route to Indian Creek

FROM Post-Dispatch building north to Locust street, west to Lindell cut-off, over Lindell avenue to Forest Park, through Forest Park to Skinker road, south to Clayton road, west on Clayton road to Clarkson road, left to Manchester road at Ellisville. Road very good to fair. From Ellisville right on Manchester road through Hollow, Grays Summit and Villa Ridge to Union. Road fairly good to Hollow. Rough from there to near Union. At reverse fork on entering Union with brick grain mill on right turn sharp left passing over covered wooden bridge shortly beyond. Continue straight ahead to St. Clair. Road of macadam and dirt construction and fairly good. Cross railroad tracks, passing through business section of St. Clair coming to fork just beyond. Take road to left and continue on to Meramec River. Graded dirt road varying from good to rough condition. After crossing bridge over Meramec River turn sharp right passing "Lookout" on left. At first road to right turn right with iron bridge in distance which spans Indian Creek.

In returning to St. Louis turn off Manchester road at west limits of Grays Summit, at three corners, with sign of Pacific Commercial Club giving direction to Pacific, which is five miles distant. At this point there is a farm on right with large concrete block silo in barnyard. This is a gravel hardsurfaced road in very good condition all the way to Pacific. From Pacific continue on road along railroad through Allenton and Eureka to Valley Park. Road fair to good. At Valley Park go due north through business section on road to Manchester. Road fair to rough. At Manchester turn right on Manchester road to Ballas road. An orphanage built of red brick on left at Des Peres, also road signs. Turn left on Ballas road to Clayton road. Road varies from rough to good. Turn right on Clayton road to Forest Park and Lindell boulevard, to Locust street and Post-Dispatch building.

CHICAGO TRUCK TOUR TO TRAVERSE 6 STATES

Plan to Tour 3000 Miles Through Rich Farming Country. Is Similar to Tour Held Here in June.

A motor truck expedition similar to the one inaugurated by St. Louis motor truck dealers through Missouri and Illinois last June left Chicago last Monday on a 3000-mile trip through the rich farming section of the middle Northwest. The expedition which is known as the National Motor Truck Development Tour is being run under the auspices of the National Association of Motor Truck sales managers and expects to visit 70 cities in passing through six states before it finishes, Oct. 4, at Milwaukee.

Twenty motor truck factories are participating in the run which is being conducted with the purpose in view of selling to the farmer the idea of motorization of the farm. Each factory is limited to one entry of from one to two and a half ton capacity. All of the trucks were required to be equipped with pneumatic tires.

The proposed route is through Illinois, Iowa, South Dakota, North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

AUTO CLUB SECRETARY ON TOUR TO GATHER DATA

Will Place Posters Along Route Announcing Free Camp Site for Motorists in St. Louis.

Ernest Reeves, secretary of the Automobile Club of St. Louis left yesterday on a tour of inspection of the Capitol Highway between St. Louis and Jefferson City which passes through Union, Leslie, Rosebud, Drake and Linn, Mo. Because of recent reports that the Southern Highway was rough and in need of repair between Osage City and Chamois a number of tourists have been coming to St. Louis from Jefferson City by way of the Capitol Highway. It is the opinion of some tourists that the Capitol Highway is the better of the two routes at present, on the south side of the Missouri River. Reeves will gather data on road conditions, returning to St. Louis over the National Old Trail road through Fulton, Warrenton Wentzville and St. Charles.

On his trip he will have placed in garages and hotels posters announcing the free camping site for motorists in St. Louis.

CAR IDENTIFICATION BECOMES NECESSARY

Thieves So Cleverly Disguise Stolen Machines That Owners Can't Tell Their Own.

If the average car owner were asked whether he could identfy his own car under any given set of circumstances, his impulse would be to say he could. The police of any say he could. The police would probably disagree with him.

As a matter of fact most car owners depend for identification on some scratch on the body, some broken screw in the chassis or some other equally uncertain factor. Thy do not stop to consider that manufacturers are turning out models in 10,000 lots that differ from each other in not the slightest discernible degree. By the time a successful automobile thief has run a stolen car through his "service station" it will puzzle the most careful owner to identify his vehicle.

An instance in point is found in the recent experience of a car owner who lost his car, a touring model of a popular make, and after some three weeks of anxious waiting was summoned to police headquarters to see whether he could identify a vehicle answering to his description of his lost car.

Arrived at the police station he found a small group of other owners, who had assembled to try and identify the same car to see which he had been summoned. The hopeful owner had a number of marks by which he felt confident he could prove his ownership. There was a bent screw in one part of the chassis, a dent in one fender, a scratch of peculiar shape on the dash. The car with which he was confronted was undoubtedly of the same vintage as his, but unhappily it was painted a rich ultra-marine blue instead of the dark green that had graced his vehicle. The most earnest scrutiny failed to disclose any of the distinguishing marks on which he had relied. A slight chipping of the new coat of enamel revealed the fact that it had been put on over a previous coat of the dark green that our friend had described. But two of the other assembled owners had put in bids for dark green cars, and eventually one of them managed to identify the car by a chip in the gearset housing. The identification was not particularly convincing, but in the absence of anything better it served to give the car to the owner who had been able to describe the imperfection.

Thieves Disguise Cars.

No car owner ought to depend on any such casual means of identification as slight imperfections that may have accrued during the operation of the vehicle. When the professional automobile thief steals a car, he takes it to what amounts practically to a rebuilding factory. In many cases the entire mechanism is taken down and the different parts are redistributed with those from other cars of the same make and model to turn out what amount to new vehicles.

The only safe method of identification is to keep a record of the serial numbers of the motor, chassis and as many of the other parts as are numbered in addition to the serial numbers, make and size of tires on each wheel. When the police have this information, even though thieves may have transferred the motor to another car, they are able to establish the identity of the other parts and make the recovery of stolen cars more rapid.

Don't stick in a rut—reach out to bigger, better things. Make use of Post-Dispatch WANTS.

KANSAS CITY TO JOIN ST. LOUIS IN MOTOR TRUCK EXHIBIT TOUR

Both Trains of Trucks to Meet at Sedalia to Take Part in "Ship-by-Truck-Day" Exercises.

George T. Barnes, manager of the Division of Industries at the Missouri State Fair, was in St. Louis the greater part of last week assisting in the preparations for the St. Louis Motor Truck Expedition which will leave here Wednesday to arrive in Sedalia in time to take part in the "Ship-by-Truck day" exercises Aug. 15.

Barnes came here direct from Kansas City where the motor truck dealers are arranging to send a similar expedition to meet the one from St. Louis at Sedalia on "Ship-by-Truck day" which happens to be Good Roads day at the State fair as well. He said there will be about 46 trucks in the Kansas City train, ranging from one to six ton capacities. A large tent for sleeping quarters with cots and camping supplies will be carried in one truck for members of the expedition during their stay at Sedalia. A 6-ton truck will carry lumber in the event any bridges have to be reinforced. Another truck will be equipped as a commissary, he said. Each of the trucks are to be loaded. The distance by road from Kansas City to Sedalia is 107 miles. The expedition will leave Kansas City at 7 a. m. on the morning of Aug. 15 and arrive in Sedalia at 6 p. m. the same day. It will be run under the auspices of the Kansas City Truck Dealers' Association.

The St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, co-operating with the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, is endeavoring to get as many as 150 entrants in the St. Louis expedition.

Carl J. Baer, manager of the Production Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, is in charge of the recruiting of entrants from St. Louis business houses. C. E. Lightfoot, chairman of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, is in charge of arrangements for the truck dealers.

MOTOR VEHICLE LIGHTS

TO comply with the law, which requires the lighting of motor vehicle lights a half hour after sunset, motor cars should be lighted this week as follows:

Today	8:33
Monday	8:32
Tuesday	8:30
Wednesday	8:29
Thursday	8:28
Friday	8:27

GOPHER ASSOCIATION'S ROAD TO GLACIER PARK

The Glacier Train Association has been formed at Willmar, Minn., to develop the trunk line between the Twin Cities and the park. The trail will be registered with the State Highway Commission. It will follow the Great Northern Railroad. The officers are: President, C. H. March of Litchfield; vice presidents, A. C. Carlson of Benson and A. W. Wells of Herman; secretary, P. L. Spooner of Morris; treasurer, W. H. Boland of Waverly.

GOOD WRENCH IS NEEDED BY ALL AUTOISTS

Only a practiced hand can instinctively feel that a nut has been pulled up as tightly as is good for the bolt.

A clumsy wrench, particularly if the handle is long, is almost sure to lead to rough treatment of the smaller bolts at the hands of the novice. Another thing that often leads even those who should know better to pull too strongly with the wrench is that the nut often has to be pulled around to a certain position to allow a cotter pinhole to be exposed above it, or if it is a castellated nut to align the slots in the nut with the hole through the bolt.

Another thing that is bad for the bolt is when its head is forced awry, because the surface of the metal about the hole is not true with it. This causes an elongation of one side of the bolt at one short portion of its length.

MOTOR RUNS BETTER IN WEATHER THAT THE HORSE COULDN'T STAND

Farmers of St. Louis County Now Do Most of Hauling to St. Louis Market by Motor Truck.

When horses furnished the main motive power for farmers in St. Louis County the task of hauling wheat to market was often tedious, especially with hauls of 10 miles or more, as care had to be taken at this season of the year that the horses were not overheated. Farmers in the vicinity of Cross Keys, Mo., thought they were doing well if they made two trips in one day from the farm to the grain elevators in North St. Louis between 7 a. m. and 5 p. m., the hours which the elevators are open. Most farmers who attempted two trips in one day from his distance would change teams. The maximum load of a two-horse wagon is 50 bushels, but varies with road conditions and the size of the horses. The time it takes a team to travel from Cross Keys, Mo., to the elevators in North St. Louis is two and a half hours.

Joseph Antoine of Cross Keys, Mo., is but one of the hundreds of farmers in St. Louis County who have either abandoned the horse for motor transportation or have added a truck to their stables and during the last week have been hauling wheat in his 1½-ton truck to the elevators in North St. Louis over the same course he used to take with his team.

Antoine said that he now covers the 10 miles in 45 minutes and makes four and five trips a day, carrying from 55 to 60 bushels of wheat each trip. As to the hot weather's effect on his new transportation. Antonio said, "the hotter the day the better the motor runs."

Henry C. Meyer of Shoveltown, Mo., has a two-ton truck in which he hauls on an average of 100 bushels of wheat and makes four trips easily in one day, he said.

The foreman in charge of the Annan-Burg Grain and Milling Co., 7550 North Broadway, said 90 per cent of the wheat hauled there this year has been brought by motor truck. He said during the last several weeks from 2000 to 3500 bushels of wheat have been hauled there daily by farmers in the vicinity of St. Louis.

OTHER CITIES HAVE MOTOR THEFTS, TOO

Car thieves are still busy in Hartford, Conn., and cars are being taken at the rate of three or four a day. An insurance man came out of his office a few days ago in time to see a stranger driving away with his new car, and as there were no other cars near, he was unable to pursue the thief. He has not regained the car yet. The proprietor of a Hartford battery station bought a new touring car. He had it just two days when some one made away with the machine and abandoned it 20 miles away, first making off with the rims and tires, as well as the battery; otherwise the car was not harmed.

How Tires Are Constructed

Cord Construction Cross-woven Fabric

What is a cord tire?

How does it differ from the fabric tire?

These are questions that many motorists make inquiry about daily, according to tire dealers on Motor Row.

The illustrations herewith show a section of both a cord tire and a fabric tire highly magnified, showing the principal difference between the two, which is in the construction of the carcass of the tire. It is upon this inner carcass of cotton that the strength of the tire depends.

The carcass of the fabric tire is made up of layers of cotton fabric that is cross-woven and appears to be of such strength that the casual observer would be justified in believing it could not be improved upon as a material for the construction of the tire foundation.

The carcass of the cord tire is built of layers of cords about as thick and fully as stout as the better grade of fish cord and does away with the cross-thread construction policy.

Cords in Layers.

In each layer of the cord tire carcass the cords lie side by side and all run in the same direction. To avoid the difficulty of handling the cords separately they are held together in layer form by delicate filaments of cotton woven through the cords at intervals.

The layers of cotton construction in both the fabric and cord tires are coated with rubber cement as the carcass is built up and rolled to insure proper adhesion. Thin layers of rubber built between give the necessary cushion effect. In both types of tires layers of a heavy canvas are used for the side wall construction. In constructing a tire the beads of the tire are placed on a form of the size of tire desired and the side walls of canvas built around them. The carcass is then built upon this framework of canvas.

When the carcass is completed the rubber tread is added and the tire is then ready for vulcanizing. The vulcanizing process makes a solid body of the rubber and in the construction of the cord tires insulates each cord so that it does not come in contact with its neighbor.

Cord Tire Popular.

On an average of five pounds less air pressure is required for cord tires than fabric tires of the same size.

Tire dealers say this permits of better traction and flexibility.

Though fabric tires have improved greatly in a number of points in recent years and are still giving satisfactory service to a great proportion of motorists, tire dealers say the popularity of the cord tire is constantly increasing.

Horse Is Losing Heavily in Pace With Motor Car

FIGURES furnished by City Collector Fosberg of Chicago, to the Trailer Manufacturing Association of America, from records of licenses issued for vehicles under the wheel tax law in that city show that during the last four fiscal years ended April 30, 1919, the number of horse-drawn vehicles licensed decreased from 49,582 to 32,489, or 34¼ per cent; while the automobiles and motor trucks licensed increased from 43,129 to 77,332, or 77¾ per cent, in the same period.

DELEGATES TO TOUR TO ROAD CONVENTION

Delegates to the eighth annual convention of the Burlington Way Good Roads Association which is to be held in Jackson, Tenn., Sept. 16 and 17, who live north of St. Louis, will tour from St. Louis over the Burlington way to the convention, it has been announced by J. C. Reintges of Granite City, president of the Burlington Way Good Roads Association.

The official cars carrying the delegates will leave St. Louis the morning of Sept. 13. They will include Frank R. Miller and Frank R. Sweet of Springfield, Ill.; R. D. Martin and Frank Merrill, Palmyra and Roodhouse, Ill.; J. C. Reintges and George Darling, Granite City, Ill., and Ernest Reeves, secretary of the Automobile Club of St. Louis. At Sparta the party will be joined by W. J. Hood, at Murphysboro by James E. Reynolds, at Jonesboro by E. L. Karraka and at Cairo by John H. Jackson.

A schedule has been arranged for night controls and brief stops to be made where the delegates will be the guests of automobile and commercial clubs along the route.

It is expected that more than 300 delegates from Duluth to New Orleans, the two extremities of the Burlington Way, will attend the convention.

PACKARD ANNOUNCES ADVANCE IN PRICES

P. S. Russell, president and generol manager of the St. Louis branch of the Packard Motor Car Co., announced last week an increase of $300 on Packard passenger car chassis and an increase of approximately $250 on the motor truck chassis, to become effective immediately.

Russell states that the factory had for some time felt that price increase was rapidly becoming necessary in view of the greatly increased and rapidly increasing prices of raw material, together with their inability to secure sufficient raw material to meet their scheduled production.

This advance, he said, takes into consideration only costs which have already become effective. It is believed that before Jan. 1 additional price increases will become imperative, he said.

JITNEYS ARE PUT UNDER BOND IN MASSACHUSETTS

Because of a regulation made by the Public Service Commission governing jitneys there has been a lot of trouble in Massachusetts cities lately. The board, which has jurisdiction over railroads, trolleys, etc., came out and stated that jitneys should not be allowed to operate on the roads until they had filed a bond of $2000 in some cases, or $500 per passenger carried in others. Cities and towns were asked to accept this interpretation through their local councils or selectmen, and then issue license to those who applied.

FREE CAMP SITE SHOWS TOURIST HE IS WELCOME

St. Louis Tourist Says Such an Accommodation for Motorists Will Help Make St. Louis Traffic Center.

St. Louis would be making a serious mistake to abandon the proposed free camp site for automobile tourists in Forest Park, is the opinion of W. A. Lippman, a member of the Federal Highway Council, International Rotary Club Highway Committee and Missouri vice president of the Burlington Way Good Roads Association. Lippman has been making long tours annually for eight years and is known as one of St. Louis' best-informed tourists. He returned but a week ago from a 4500-mile tour with his family through the West.

"That St. Louis is in need of just such a place for the accommodation of motor tourists," said Mr. Lippman to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "can be readily proven by a visit to any of the excellent camps of this character already in use in many of our Western cities. Kansas City, for instance, has a splendid camp in Penn Valley Park, one of their most beautiful scenic centers. A special comfort station constructed of native stone, with ample lavatory facilities, partly hidden by a stone wall and shrubbery, furnishes adequate accommodations for the hundreds of tourists who use the camp. The site is in plain view of a number of apartments on an adjoining street and is not in any way as convenient as the proposed St. Louis camp. There are camp stoves, with a ready supply of wood for fuel, drinking fountains, and ample space for a number of parties to make camp without encroaching upon the privacy or seclusion of others. Above all, there is a cordial spirit on the part of those in charge of the camp which makes the visitor feel welcome and willing to stay and come again.

Denver Has Large Camp.

In Denver a much larger space has been devoted to the camp than in Kansas City, and not content with giving their guests less than the best they have, Denver made her camp near the shores of a beautiful lake in City Park, the largest and most beautiful recreation center in the city. Mr. Lippman states that at one time he counted more than 75 cars, with every conceivable type of camp outfit, parked in the camp. It is typical of camping motorists that night stops are prolonged and lengthened into days and in some cases weeks, when a suitable place is found. "I met a party in the Denver camp consisting of a wealthy banker-oil-man from Oklahoma, with his wife and their children and grandchildren to the number of 14 in all, camping in three tents with three good cars, staying in the camp by preference, having intended to stay only a few days but hanging on because the camp was good and the town looked good for the investment of money, of which the Oklahoman had plenty." That many decisions are made by business men to move and re-locate in cities where the spirit of hospitality is pleasantly visible, is a fact known to every live commercial association in these Western cities.

The Lippman party, in their numerous trips West, have camped in many city camps, as much to gain a knowledge of what other cities are doing as for the convenience. On their return from a 4500-miles trip

PRACTICAL PARAGRAPHS

Fuel Stoppage.

When the engine, after being started, runs for a minute or two and then stops, the first place to look for trouble is in the gasoline feed line. A partial stoppage in the pipe will lessen the flow of fuel so that the float chamber fills slowly. On being started the motor at once consumes this gasoline and then has to wait for more. There is another possible cause of this trouble, and that is the float of the carburetor sticking. Of course if the float is stuck in a high position the flow of fuel will be greatly lessened or even stopped.

Use for Old Files.

Occasionally it becomes necessary for the man who operates his own car to file a piece of cast iron that has been subjected to friction and has acquired a glassy surface of "skin." The best way to get through this skin is to use the edges of an old file, as using a good file on such surfaces will spoil it.

To Clean Spark Plugs.

An excellent method of cleaning spark plugs, or in fact any mica surface, is to wash them first in a 10 per cent solution of acetic acid which is an infallible solvent of grease and carbon deposits. The plugs should then be washed off with gasoline and finally dried by rubbing them with a cloth.

Bluing Metal.

The car owner who does his own repair work sometimes finds it necessary to "blue" small bright objects, such as screws. This may be done by placing them on a piece of sheet iron and holding them over a fire until they assume the desired color.

For Cleaning Contact Points.

It is sometimes difficult to find a really satisfactory agent for cleaning the contact points of ignition apparatus or the surface of a commutator on a starting motor or a lighting dynamo. There is something known as "cuttlefish paper," which is finer than the finest quality of sandpaper and which is very well adapted to this operation. Cuttlefish paper is not regularly carried by hardware stores, but it may be obtained from dental supply houses.

Interior Wire Break.

On rare occasions it happens that a wire breaks inside its insulation, giving no exterior sign of the trouble. The car owner thinks the ignition system has gone bad, changes spark plugs, send the magneto to the service station, etc., when all the time this interior wire break is the cause. In the event of an obscure ignition trouble remember this.

Speckled Varnish.

The varnish on the new car frequently becomes speckled after its first encounter with a rainstorm. These spots are hard to get off, but a treatment with raw linseed oil and salt and malt vinegar applied with plenty of elbow grease will come as near turning the trick as anything.

Cause of Knocking.

In motors with detachable cylinder heads great care should be taken to see that the gasket used to pack the joint does not project into the combustion chamber. When this occurs the gasket is likely to become incandescent, causing preignition knocks and even back-firing in the carburetor.

NEW ROADS SHOULD NOT BE LIKE THOSE OF 20 YEARS AGO

Motor Transportation Requires More Permanent Construction to Benefit Commerce.

Every state in the Union, with the possible exception of three, have, or are going to authorize bond issues for the building of good roads, according to Windsor T. White, chairman of the Motor Truck Committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

However, the mistake of building them of too light a construction should be carefully avoided. They should not be built as roads were built 20 years ago, before the advent of the motor truck when horse-drawn wagons were the sole users of the highways.

We are not building our highways to look at, nor are we building them for horses and wagons, we are building them for HIGHWAY MOTOR TRANSPORTATION, for great lines of motor trucks which are going to use them for transporting our commerce—as feeders for the railroads, the long haulage units, and for bringing food in from the farms.

Twenty years ago we did not need highways as we do today, for the demand was for ordinary dirt, or, at the very best, lightly constructed macadam, because they were called upon to carry one or two horses and a light vehicle. Today, however, a heavy hard top is required, and the high cost of it is only economy in dollars when commerce instead of pleasure uses them.

Think what it is going to do for you personally in the way of lower costs, once highway transportation get its proper pace—it means that you are going to get more for your money, and I will tell you why?

Transportation in the past has been by our inland waterways and our railroads. Each had its capacity for getting into certain places. But they have not been adequate to our growing demands—the demands of 100,000,000 people.

The big demand today is food, and we are not getting enough of it and so, of course, we are paying a heavy penalty because the railroads and waterways do not reach the farms.

Now with the coming of the rural motor express, we are going to reach out into every hill and valley and provide the farmer with quick and efficient, economical transportation by motor truck, so that he will be encouraged to raise larger crops and send them to you. This will mean that you will get more food for less money, the farmer will get a greater return because of the larger consumption and your city and State will benefit generally.

The coming of hard-topped highways and motor transportation will usher in a new era of advancement, will open up new sources of production and throw lines of commercial influence around the world.

NEW CONCERN DEALS IN AIRCRAFT PARTS

The first concern to go into the general aircraft parts and supply business on a national scale is the newly organized Aircraft Materials and Equipment Corporation of New York City, which has established itself on a broad basis. They will be distributers for the United States of spare parts for Canadian training planes and will act as manufacturer's agent in handling all lines of airplane accessories from flying maps to gauntlets. A comprehensive catalog and parts list has been prepared which is aimed to become the "blue book" of those in the flying business.

Warehouses have already been established at 1409 Sedgewick avenue, New York, and in the Westminster Building, Chicago. A warehouse is to be opened as soon as practicable in San Francisco. A system has been worked out for shipment of spare parts the day the order is received.

M. W. Hanks who was in charge of aircraft specifications in the Bureau of Construction and Repair of the Navy Department during the war, is president of the enterprise, which is incorporated for $100,000.

Motor Should Be Cleaned at Regular Intervals

Necessary That Wornout Oil Be Drained Occasionally to Avoid Repair Shop.

"If motorists would only take reasonable care of their cars they would be surprised at the increased mileage they would receive without visits to the repair shops," is the advice of George Weber, president of the Weber Implement and Automobile Co.

"One way that a car can be made to last longer, and most owners do not realize the paramount importance of the operation is to drain the oil from the crank case every 2000 miles, clean out the crank case with kerosene and then fill it up again with fresh, clean oil. Do this consistently and it will save repair bills and prolong the life of the motor."

In the instruction books to owners, motor car manufacturers strongly recommend that at regular intervals, the old wornout oil should be drained off and the crank refilled with a fresh supply." Many motorists overlook this.

Clogged Oil Pipe.

It is possible to clear out a Ford oil pipe which has become clogged by taking off the front gear plate, which discloses the can gear, and this is removed with a puller. Now the end of the pipe is exposed, and to this an air hose is connected, the air is turned on and the obstruction is blown out. Without this little trick it is necessary to tear down the engine to get at an obstruction of this kind.

ARMY TRUCKS GO TO OTHER DEPARTMENTS

Only Cars Rejected by Bureaus to Be Sold to Public.

There were 75.513 automobiles and motor trucks on hand in the War Department on April 15, according to figures just received by the National Automobile Dealers' Association from Alfred Reeves, general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Of this number, 64,334 were trucks and 11,179 were passenger cars.

There will be held for use in the army 5676 passenger cars and 33,485 trucks. There will be 5503 passenger cars and 30.849 trucks disposed of. All of this surplus has been allotted to Bureau of Public Roads, Agricultural Department; Treasury Department, Public Health Service and Postoffice Department. It is stated that the only cars which will be disposed of to the public are such cars as may be rejected by the bureaus named in the foregoing and will be offered for sale either at public auction or by sealed proposal.

The distribution of these motor vehicles to departments follows:

Public Health Service	1,396
Bureau of Public Roads	27,983

This allotment includes 3600 motor cycles and 5500 passenger cars.

SIRENS MADE FOR GAS ALARMS NOW BEING SOLD FOR TRUCKS

Stewart Products Corporation Puts on Market Horns Government Had Ordered.

During the years of position warfare in France when the front-line position was more or less stable, being established by trench systems heavily protected with wire entanglements, the means used in giving the alarm when the enemy put over gas attacks were often very crude.

Both the enemy and allied troops as a rule used alarms that they had improvised themselves such as triangles made of scrap iron or like material and short sections of steel rail suspended by wire with a large bolt or bar of iron for a hammer were often used. Rattlers made of wood similar to a child's toy, but built in much larger dimensions were also used. The telephone and buzzer communication was relied upon also to circulate the warning of presence of gas. These warnings were important for gas was often hard to detect, one make that the German troops used being odorless.

With the entrance of America into the war the Klaxon horn came into use as a gas alarm. Because reserves were often in dugouts it was necessary that the alarm be sufficiently loud to attract their attention as well as that of troops in the open, where the noises varied with activity. For his reason a still louder alarm was needed and the War Department, through the Chemical Welfare Service, had placed during 1918 a large contract with Stewart Products Corporation for a siren that would answer this purpose. With the signing of the armistice work ceased on the Government contract and the sirens are now being sold to the public for use on motor trucks, launches and fire apparatus.

D. F. Hyland, manager of the Stewart Products Service Station in St. Louis, has received the first shipment of the new siren. It is operated by a crank and judging from the signal it gives would undoubtedly have fulfilled the desired requirements had the war lasted. It has a base for attaching to vehicle or boat and is painted in olive drab.

ST. LOUIS CONCERN TO DISTRIBUTE NEW TIRE

The Byrnes Belting Co., 2109 Locust street, has engaged in the distribution of Hewitt tires, doing business as the Byrnes Rubber Co., it was announced last week by James W. Byrnes, president.

The Hewitt tire, which has not been long on the market, is made at Buffalo, N. Y. Though the tire is a new product, Byrnes said the management has had more than 10 years' experience in the tire business.

Plantation and South American rubbers are used in the construction.

It is made in both the plain and nonskid fabric and cord tire styles. Inner tubes will also be distributed in the territory which includes Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Southern Illinois.

Byrnes said there would be no set mileage guarantee, but that users of Hewitt tires would be warranted all that can be gotten out of rubber and fabric tire construction.

"A guarantee of satisfaction rather than mileage will go with each tire," he said.

FIRST OF NEW SERIES OF DORRIS CARS IS SOLD

The first of the new series of Dorris four-passenger coupes was delivered last week to Dr. M. Ney Smith, 501 Pine street.

The body is in dark maroon, with the chassis, including hood and fenders, painted in black. The new model follows the latest lines in squared design, having a semi-underclung appearance that is now in vogue throughout the East. There are two ventilators on the hood which are operated from the dash to aid in cooling the motor. The windows in the doors are opened automatically. A tire rack in the rear carries two spare tires. There have been put minor changes in the mechanical makeup of the new Dorris.

Webster Colburn, vice president and general manager, said a number of orders have been received for this model and completed cars will be delivered regularly from now on.

through the Rockies, Yellowstone and the Far Northwest, Mr. Lippman tried out every available city park camp, and in addition to those of Denver, Kansas City, Colorado Springs and Cheyenne, found the Happy Hollow camp in Omaha one of the most delightful and appreciated. Situated within 100 yards of a cold spring, in one of the fine parks of the city, it is secluded yet quickly reached, and within a few minutes' ride of the most beautiful residence section in the new or western section of Omaha. In this camp a situation exists similar to that found in St. Louis in that the tourists use the usual facilities already found in the park, no special provision having been made other than to set aside the several acres of space for their use. Near by is a refreshment stand and playgrounds, and in this park as elsewhere nothing but the most cordial relation exists between the tourists in camp and the citizens, who apparently do not feel that they have been robbed of any privilege or benefit by granting to long distance travelers such courtesies as they can. Throughout the great West a spirit of hospitality is abroad, and it is refreshing to find that the aggressive cities are the ones that have the greatest regard for the stranger within their gates.

As an advertising asset, there can certainly be nothing better than to have travelers come into the city, intent on merely getting supplies and continuing on their journey and then by reason of the cordial welcome staying for days and perhaps weeks. Travelers who thus taste of the good quality of the city's attractiveness cannot help carrying away with them favorable news of the city and in doing so spread the news to others. Such news lodges in good soil frequently and makes new citizens and brings new enterprise, wealth and population to our city.

Should Welcome Tourists.

St. Louis has had too much adverse advertising, and it is regrettable that another incident should arise to make strangers feel they are not welcome in St. Louis, no matter what the real facts may be regarding the genuine hospitality of the majority of our citizens. There is a well-defined feeling among a percentage of motor tourists that St. Louis does not want tourist business, that the condition of the highways near by is an evidence of this, that St. Louis should be or is responsible for the proper maintainance of principal routes in every direction, that such fiascoes as the long-drawn bond-issue suit in St. Louis County, only recently settled after three years' delay, are the fault of St. Louis, and many tourists coming in from the west, who should come via St. Louis to continue east, leave the trails at Kansas City and head northeast to go through Chicago because of the conditions I have just mentioned.

That we do not deserve much of this is true, but the city gets the benefit of the unfavorable conditions in the community about it because it is the center of its activities which should remedy the existing defects in roads and travel conditions.

Let the tourists camp in Forest Park or in some other good place where as guests of the city they will have as good accommodations as we can give them. We should furnish temporarily facilities for water, lavatories and whatever can be done in the short end of this season, and then for next year we should make a permanent camp with the best of equipment, comparing favorably with other western cities, mark our street corners for traffic turns so that incoming tourists need not lose their minds trying to get to the park camp, or elsewhere for that matter, then we should go out a hundred miles or more from St. Louis and place welcome signs at frequent intervals keying these up with a large unavoidable sign at a good point on each of the inbound highways not only calling attention to the camp but inviting all tourists to lengthen their stay in St. Louis and share in the many good things we have here. That will help make St. Louis the traffic center it was for a half century. That will help bring our million population.

Brunswick Principles In Fine Tire Making

The reason you are interested in the name on your tire is that it identifies the maker. By knowing the maker you can judge his ideals of manufacture.

The only secret of a super-tire lies in the principles of the maker. His standards decide the quality. For there are no secrets in the tire industry.

What you get depends on what is behind the name on your tire. Brunswick, as you know, means a very old concern, jealous of its good name. Since 1845 the House of Brunswick has been famous the world over for the quality of its products.

The Brunswick Tire is all that you expect—and more. Your first one will be a revelation. You'll agree that you've never known a better. And you'll tell your friends. So spreads the news among motorists. The Brunswick is the most welcome tire that ever came to market.

Try one Brunswick Tire. Learn how good a tire can be built. And remember, it costs no more than like-type tires,

UNDERINFLATION IS RUINOUS TO TIRES

Many Cases of Improper Inflation Blamed on Hot Weather, Dealer Says.

Many motorists blame their tire troubles during the summer months on the hot weather, when their fault lies with improper inflation, according to C. A. Jessup, manager of the St. Louis branch of Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. "The weather never gets hot enough to cause of itself any damage to tires," he said.

"I know some motorists who firmly believe that blowouts are frequently caused by increase in the inflation pressure due to the expansion of air in the tire when heated. Because 'heat expands,' they think a rise in temperature causes a proportionate, and therefore dangerous, rise in the inflation pressure. That is why you will frequently find motorists who lower the inflation pressure in hot weather so that even when the car is standing, there is a noticeable bending of the side walls of the tires.

"As a matter of fact, a tire which had been filled with air at 75 degrees Fahrenheit to a pressure of 80 pounds, then run rapidly over blistering hot roads until the casing and the air within were raised to 150 degrees, would show an increase in pressure of only 11 pounds, not enough to injure any well-made tire. Under actual conditions such a high temperature would seldom be encountered, and the probable increase in pressure would not be more than five or six pounds, which is scarcely more than the variation in readings of different pressure gauges.

Underinflation Is Damaging.

"Under such conditions, instead of the air in the underinflated tire expanding and filling the tire to the proper inflation pressure when heated by driving, the side walls are deflated considerably more, owing to the strain of going over inequalities in the road. This flattening of the tire causes a 'rolling-bending' motion which is continuous as long as the wheel moves.

"In addition, this waving or bending of the deflated tire induces a separate motion between the layers of fabric and the rubber. It has the same effect as the endeavor to bend a pack of cards held firmly at one end. Each card will move separately from its fellow at the outer end. It is this action which causes tread separation of a tire that has been run with insufficient inflation. This tearing or tendency to rip apart the various layers causes friction, which, together with the friction caused by the rolling-bending motion as the tire revolves, creates excessive heat which separates the layers further and causes rapid deterioration. As a result, any unusual shock, such as a severe bump or the sudden application of the brakes, strains the weakened carcass beyond the limits and a blowout occurs."

"Then," he says, "when the motorist gets out and finds the casing excessively hot, he blames it on the hot weather, instead of realizing that the heat was created by friction between the layers of the carcass and that underinflation, not overinflation, caused the friction."

TOURIST ADVERTISED ST. LOUIS WITH "RAINBOW" AUTOMOBILE

Head of Car Painting Firm Says Striking Colors Created Much Interest on 3200-Mile Trip.

St. Louis was well advertised on a 3200-mile tour through the East, which included Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, New York, Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburg, according to Max Lovy, president of the Universal Manufacturing Co., 3413-3415 Locust street, who recently returned with his wife and son in a Studebaker touring car. He carried a large St. Louis pennant on each side of the car.

The painting and trimming of automobiles is Lovy's business and the main purpose of his trip, he said, was to study the progress in this line of work in the East. As an example of the work done in St. Louis, Lovy had his car painted in colors of the rainbow blended one with the other on all sides of the body. The blending of these colors, which was a difficult task, he said, attracted attention wherever they went. The body also was of his own design and is practically a "made in St. Louis" product.

In Chicago and New York, where the largest crowds gathered about the car, he was asked several times by the traffic police to park elsewhere because of the congestion of onlookers.

More than a dozen offers were made for his car, he said, by onlookers at various stops. The automobile shortage was acute in the East, he said. While in New York he was asked by some of the passersby these questions: "Are all automobiles in St. Louis painted that way?" and "Is that the way you paint automobiles in the West?" Lovy said he smiled and nodded "No."

ST. LOUIS TRUCK CONCERN INSTALLS RADIATOR PLANT

The Traffic Motor Truck Corporation has installed a complete radiator core manufacturing plant in their new factory at 5200 N. Second street. It was placed in operation last week. The capacity of this plant will be 50 complete radiator cores per day in order to meet the output of the new plant which is 50 trucks per day. Corrugating and stamping press honey-comb crimpers, furnaces for solder baths, wash and header plate equipment, sealing and pressure tests, together with other modern equipment make this one of the most complete radiator core plants of its kind in the country, according to Guy Wilson, president of Traffic Truck Corporation.

WHY A HOT SPOT CHALMERS IS STINGY ABOUT GAS

THE only thing stingy about a Chalmers is its use of gas. It has small appetite. It travels a long day's march on a few gallons.

Every drop of gas that goes in the tank is held to account. There's no waste.

That is because Hot Spot takes the low grade, inferior gas of the day, and prepares it so that the engine can get out all the power that nature put in.

It is aided by Ram's-horn, and the results are de luxe.

Put your foot on the little button of any Hot Spot Chalmers and get a new sensation.

It isn't the 90 H. P. kind, but it gives quick, decisive action and so "silky" you scarcely know there's anything going on "up under the bonnet."

It's action that doesn't burn your pocketbook, nor jar your fenders loose.

AUTO NOTES and GOSSIP.

The Dayton airless tire, made by the Dayton Rubber Co., of Dayton, O., will be handled in St. Louis by the W. Gilbert Tire Co., 1136 Chestnut street.

Frank Bishop, J. E. Gillespie, J. W. McFerran and Art Walsh will be in charge of the exhibit of the Briscoe Motor Sales Co. at the Sedalia State Fair this week. Three Stewart truck models, one Liberty and five Briscoes will comprise the display.

The Brandle Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributers of Westcott Motor cars, are sending nine drivers to the factory at Springfield, O., to drive back cars. The drivers are leaving tonight and are expected back with the autos by Monday night.

The Modern Auto Repair and Reconstruction Co., 4601-13 Olive street, of which Charles Less is president, has had published a booklet on information concerning the care and upkeep of internal combustion engines in general, which they are distributing to motorists.

AUTO HAS AVOIDED CLASS OF PROFITEER, MANUFACTURER SAYS

Auto Price Advance Averages 25 Per Cent While Some Commodities Have Reached More Than 100, He Says.

Some credit is due automobile manufacturers and dealers who have dealt moderately with the public in the upward trend of prices in view of the high increases that have taken place in the prices of other commodities, is the opinion of Stewart McDonald, president and general manager of the Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis.

McDonald said: "We find stories circulated about the advances made in automobile prices and the public is inclined to complain. This is unjust in view of conditions. The average advance in the selling price of automobiles has been 25 per cent, in some instances only 20 per cent. Provisions, including all kinds of supplies, are up from 40 to 100 per cent. A suit of clothes which formerly cost $25 now sells for $50 to $60. A pair of shoes once $3.50, now sells for $7 to $10. A ready-made dress for a woman last year cost $15 to $40. Now they cost $40 to $75, for the same dresses.

"Anyone acquainted with conditions will know that the advance made in the price of automobiles is even less than is justified. Labor cost is greatly increased and more for the kind of skilled mechanics we employ than for any other kind. Raw materials, parts, accessories, steel, iron, copper, brass, wood, leather, upholstery hair, and all other motor car supplies are now at unprecedentedly high prices, yet our advances have been kept down 20 to 25 per cent.

"I feel rather proud of the automobile maker, under the circumstances. He cannot be justly charged with profiteering."

FULTON MOTOR TRUCK COMPANY REORGANIZES

The Fulton Motor Truck Co. has moved its executive offices from the factory site at Farmingdale, L. I., to the new Ford Building at Fifty-fourth street and Broadway, New York City.

Coincident with such action a number of important changes have occurred in the personnel of the Fulton Motor Truck Co.

George C. Sherman, president of both the Universal Tobacco Machine Co. and the advertising agency of Sherman & Bryan, Inc., replaces W. F. Melhuish Jr. as president of the Fulton Motor Truck Co.

F. G. Saunders, until recently vice president of the Army Bank in San Antonio, Tex., has been elected treasurer.

Carl H. Page, who was formerly New York Sales manager for both the White and Chalmers Motors Companies, has been elected vice president in charge of sales and advertising.

W. R. Bamford, formerly of the Oldsmobile Motors Co. and Hupp Motor Car Co., is in charge of production, and C. M. Kraham, formerly assistant sales manager of the Republic Truck Co., is assistant sales manager. C. M. Strieby is assistant manager of advertising.

BUILDS WHITE WALLS INTO ALL ITS TIRES

As a consequence of the increasing popularity of tires with white side walls, many car owners are now taking the pains to secure the desired effect by the use of white paint. While there is no doubt but that this gives a distinctive appearance to the car, as a general thing the use of paint is injurious to the tire itself and will shorten its life. For that reason the Norwalk Tire and Rubber Co. is calling attention to their product. Because of their method of compounding rubber, Norwalk tires, both cord and fabric, come out of the factory with side walls that are pure white by nature and need no painting to obtain the neat effect now in such favor. Although when brand-new the walls have a slightly yellowish tinge, this is removed by washing with any standard household cleaner or washing powder, and repeated scouring keeps them permanently pure white.

ILLINOIS FIRM MARKETS NON-SKID TIRE CHAIN

A quick, detachable, nonskid tire chain that is said to be the first tire chain improvement in over 17 years has been patented by the Bear Manufacturing Co., Rock Island, Ill. This new chain can be put on or taken off in a few seconds without the use of a jack or any other tools and it makes no difference whether you are already in the mud or on a dry road. It is the only chain that can be put on when the wheels are mired down in the mud. A large sales force is being organized to cover the hardware and automobile accessory trade.

Biltwell Bodies

—Ace-High in Quality

The ordinary stock type of commercial body becomes loose and rattly long before the tread is worn from the tires. This is because bodies of this type are simply bolted together.

But BILTWELL BODIES are different. They are custom built, the parts being mortised and fitted together just as in a piece of good furniture. Every part of the work is done in our own shop by experts in this line.

BILTWELL BODIES are light in weight, pleasing in appearance and unusually durable. They stand the wear and tear of traffic as only a special built body can.

We build them to meet the individual requirements of your business—any color or design. And the cost will be no more than you would have to pay for the ordinary knocked-down, bolted-together stock type.

Write for descriptive circular or call at our shop.

Famous Actress Tells How She Uses Derwillo to Beautify Her Complexion

MISS ETHEL CLAYTON.

New York—Miss Ethel Clayton, the clever young actress now successfully starring under the Paramount banner, is famous for her beautiful complexion. When her friends inquired about it she said: "It's all due to a toilet preparation called derwillo, which I use twice daily. The experience I have had prompts me to make my secret public. This wonderful derwillo instantly beautified my skin, and its continued use has made the results permanent." When Mae Edna Wilder, the well-known beauty specialist, was interviewed in reference to Miss Clayton's remarkable complexion, stated: "Anyone can have a beautiful complexion when they know how. It's a very simple process. I use the same article in my work, and until you try it you have no idea of the marvelous results. The very first application will astonish you. Go to the toilet counter of any drug or department store and get a bottle of derwillo, then make the following test: Examine your skin critically before your mirror, note carefully its appearance, then apply derwillo as directed. After you have made the first application look in your mirror again and note the surprising change. A peach-like color mounts the cheeks; a baby softness comes to the skin; it makes the skin rosy-white, velvety and radiantly beautiful. It is wonderful for a dark, sallow skin, shiny nose, freckles, tan, oil skin, sun spots, coarse pores, pimples, blackheads, chapped, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles and many other facial blemishes. Derwillo method is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. It is superior to face powder, as perspiration does not affect it, therefore it stays on better. Thousands who have used it have had the same results as Miss Clayton, and I am sure if you will give it a fair trial you will become just as enthusiastic as I am and always use it in preference to any other powder or beautifier."

NOTE—When asked about Derwillo, one of four leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful beautifier, away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to anyone who is dissatisfied, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the product possessed unusual merit." It is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all department stores and up-to-date druggists, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and Enderle Drug Co.

FRENZY IS LACKING IN SENATE DEBATE ON THE LEAGUE

ready, if they are interested; and they can read the gist of the speech in the newspapers and the whole of it in the Congressional Record.

The Record, it may be explained, gives a verbatim account of all that is said on the floor of the Senate. It is strictly accurate, yet inaccurate in that it may leave a wrong impression. It cannot tell you, for example, that Senator So-and-So read his speech from manuscript; that the well-rounded periods did not come trippingly from the tongue, but, perhaps, were droned in expressionless voice. You note in the Record that the Speaker prefaced many of his paragraphs with "Mr. President," and you get the impression that, in a fine oratorical frenzy, the Senator turned to the Vice President, maybe shook his fist at him, and addressed some peculiarly pregnant remarks directly to the Chair. But when the Senator said "Mr. President," meaning the President of the Senate, it is extremely likely that he was looking the other way. "Mr. President" is a convenient bridge between paragraphs; it signifies nothing. When a Senator is speaking extemporaneously, it is a handy way of killing time while he marshals his thoughts. Where an orator at a public gathering uses "Fellow Citizens," the Senator says "Mr. President" because, in Senate usage, his remarks must always be addressed to the chair.

"Mr. President" Used Often.

"Mr. President, our brave and heroic soldiers demonstrated to the world that they were second to none in courage."

And again:

"Mr. President, to my mind the chief question is," etc.

In beginning his speech, Senator Nelson made use of the familiar formula:

"Mr. President, I crave the indulgence of the Senate for a few moments."

He then read a paper of 4000 words.

It must not be understood that all the speeches on the league of nations are read. Borah, Johnson, Reed, Hitchcock, Williams and others have spoken extemporaneously, and often with real oratorical fire. At any time, the rapier of Williams may clash with the broadax of Borah, and bring a shower of verbal sparks. But now that the issue has been defined as between the league as it stands and the league with reservations, most Senators feel it incumbent on themselves to get their views, in extenso, in the Congressional Record. Hence the recent plethora of repetition of the scene as described.

Few Arguments in Speeches.

Few of these set speeches have developed any new arguments for or against the league. In only two cases did the Senate evince any particular interest in them. Senator Nelson's position had been in doubt, and when he began to speak, without having given the customary notice, more than the usual number of Senators flocked in from the cloakrooms. The Democrats were smilingly hopeful that he would bolt the Republican platform and declare himself for the league without alteration. The Republicans were worried. But Nelson came out for reservations. The Senate lost interest in his speech when his position became plain.

Senator Thomas had never committed himself finally for or against reservations. So when he announced that he would speak the hopes of the Republicans ran high, while the Democrats were apprehensive. He had fully a dozen Republican auditors. Thomas read a long paper, a scholarly, philosophical treatise, and wound up by saying that though he had read the treaty three times and the covenant of the league many times he was still troubled with doubt. Neither side got much comfort from his remarks.

Viewed purely as phrase-making efforts, some of the set speeches are not lacking in interest. All possible changes are run on two main themes—the bravery of the American soldier and the misguided partisanship of the opposition. To award the palm for literary excellence would be a difficult matter, but in at least one field there can be no doube of the winner. Senator Marcus A. Smith of Arizona set the highest mark yet recorded for alliterative endeavor, when he characterized the remarks of the opposition as the "diaphanous diatribes of desperate debaters."

any, improvement over private management.

The Plumb plan alone, then, remains as meriting the attention of those who sincerely desire a correction of intolerable conditions.

It removes from discussion all talk of subsidies, higher rates and political manipulation. It offers a scientific, equable, business-like arrangement for the operation and development of the nation's transportation system on democratic principles.

Its adoption will usher in an era of industrial stability, prosperity and well-being that will influence favorably all industries and so contribute to the welfare of every citizen.

SHIPBUILDERS PUT IN STOCK

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 9.—The United States may be "dry," but Oakland ship launchings will be "wet" for some years to come. To this end the shipyard owners of this city have laid in a supply of California champagne to be used at christenings. This step was taken in deference to sea superstition.

"We had to do it," said George A. Armes, president of the Moore Shipbuilding Co. "Sailors will not go to sea on a ship that has not had a bottle of wine broken over its prow at its launching. It is a 'hoodoo ship.' It would be difficult for us to sell our ships if they were not christened according to custom."

PLUMB PLAN FIGHT ON TILL 'GRANT AND PRIVILEGE CEASE'

No Atempt to Put Other Industries Under Proposal, Unless Employes and Public Desire, He Says.

RAILWAY UNIONS DENY DESIRE FOR VIOLENCE

Information to Be Put Before House Body in Support of Charge of Plundering of Roads, Says Witness.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Organized labor will not attempt to impose the Plumb plan for railroad control on other industries unless employes and the public desire it, and its fight for public ownership of utilities will not stop until it has reached that point where "grant and privilege cease."

This was the message delivered today by Glenn E. Plumb, speaking as labor's representative, to the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which for three days has been holding hearings on tripartite control of the transportation systems. It was spoken calmly, after the witness, worn out by the long ordeal on the witness stand, but still smiling, had denied that the plan was socialistic.

Again today Plumb pounded the table and denied in terms calculated, he said, to brook no repetition of the charge that the railroad brotherhoods had attempted by threats of violence or strikes, to force Congress to adopt his plan for control of the railroads by the public, operating officials and employes. The denial was made first in a statement from Plumb's office and signed by the heads of the 15 brotherhoods and while Plumb was answering a hot fire of questions from Representative Dewalt, Democrat, of Pennsylvania, who wanted to know where the new idea would stop.

"We unite in a definite assertion that we have no desire and have had none," said the statement and also Plumb, who paraphrased it, "to impress upon the public, by violence, or by threat, our proposal that the railroads be nationalized under 'tripartite' control." Labor would be blind to its own interests, Plumb added, with emphasis, if it attempted such methods.

Conference on Control.

When Plumb left the committee room during the afternoon to return again Monday, he went into conference with a number of men and women invited by him to attend a national conference on railroad control. Those attending included Frank P. Walsh, E. F. Dunne. Gov. Allen of Kansas, F. C. Hovak, J. I. H. Hopkins and M. L. Cook of New York and Basel Manley. Later he announced information would be put before the committee in support of his charge that there had been systematic plundering of the great railway systems of the country.

Plumb stood his ground while Representatives Dewalt, Montague, Democrats, Virgina; Merritt, Republican, Connecticut, and others asked questions which they intimated were intended to point out defects in the Plumb plan. Representative Montague particularly wanted to know if, in buying the railroads, the Government would pay for tracks and lines built out of profit. Plumb said it would not. Representative Dewalt inquired if the Plumb plan was leading to socialism. Plumb said it was not.

Representative Merritt wanted to know if the plan would be extended to gas plants, trolley lines and the like, and Plumb said it would—that he had in mind all corporations doing business on privileges which the individual could not enjoy.

Postoffice Department.

Plumb cited the case of the Postoffice Department, "the only great industry politically managed," and said its efficiency would be greatly increased if the employes had a voice in its management "or if it were operated under the democratic principles of this bill,"

It would be absurd, he declared, to suggest farmers might come forward with a demand for tri-partite control, but, if they wanted it, and the public said so, they should have it.

There was scarcely a reference during the day's hearing to the high cost of living. The thread of Plumb's testimony ran constantly in another direction—toward greater opportunity for the laboring man.

Citing the case of railway executives who had advanced from the ranks, Representative Montague asked Plumb if he had found evidence of undue repression which would halt the upward march of the under man. He quite agreed that a majority of the highest paid railroad men today went up from the bottom, but insisted that they were

PENOCHLE 'HOUNDS' SCORN NEAR-BEER TO QUAFF FIZZES

Belleville Players Return to Favorite Haunt and Close Session With Nut Sundae.

Penuchle, which it seems, cannot be played properly without real beer and pretzels, and which went into mournful retirement in Belleville, where it was the "national sport," July 1, when the lid was clamped on everything drinkable but soft beverages, came back last night but not to the accompaniment of near-beer. The penuchle veterans made a clean sweep of it and topped off the game with a nut sundae, pineapple fizz and grape juice.

James Heap, at whose thirst parlor on Lebanon avenue, the largest foaming steins were formely to be had, remained in business and began selling near-beer. The penuchle players passed his place but did not enter. The penuchle tables were getting dusty. Penuchle without real beer was like home without a mother to the former customers. They could not even think of penuchle and near-beer as a harmonious combination.

Yesterday the penuchlers could hold off no longer. They decided they must have a game at Heap's place in spite of the absence of beer, so they gathered last night for the first time in six weeks. They played a game and then called for near-beer. They tasted it and made faces at each other and pushed the unemptied steins aside.

A few more games were played and Heap was summoned to the table.

"What'll it be, gents?" he inquired as he wiped off the board.

"Bring me a nut sundae," said the first customer.

"Make mine an ice cream cone," said No. 2.

"I'l have a pineapple fizzer," No. 3 ordered.

"And fix be up some of that old grape juice," muttered the fourth.

ROCKEFELLER SAYS WAR-TORN WORLD MUST CO-OPERATE

Declares in Standard Oil Magazine That This Generation Faces Great Task.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—John D. Rockefeller, in the August number of The Lamp, a magazine printed for employes of the Standard Oil Co., declares that co-operation is the keynote on which the reconstruction of the war-torn world must be based.

"The world needs above all else co-operation," wrote the Standard Oil founder. "A new world is to be founded. The men of this generation are entering into a heritage which makes their fathers' lives look poverty stricken by comparison. You need only to steer the straight course, to apply yourselves assiduously to the task, to use your imagination, your sympathy, your best judgment, and success must be yours."

PLANE MAKES 35-MILE GLIDE

Pilot Sets New Record With a Thomas-Morse, It Is Believed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Flying in a Thomas-Morse side-by-side two-seater plane yesterday, Pilot P. C. (Tex) Marshall glided with his motor dead a distance of 35 miles from the head of Cayuga Lake to Ithaca, N. Y.

This is believed by officials of the air service to be a new world record. The longest glide hertofore recorded is credited to Capt. Raynham, who was to have piloted the Martynside Transatlantic plane, when he glided from Brooklands to London, England, 22 miles.

Pilot Marshall attained an altitude of 17,500 feet, cut off his motor and headed for Ithaca. When he arrived over the field on which he landed he was still 5000 feet in the air, and probably could have added a few more miles to his record had he so desired.

ALIENATION SUIT FOR $40,000 FILED AGAINST CHICAGOAN

W. E. Schrock Declares, However, That Mrs. J. J. Moore Was Only a Good Comrade.

"ENTIRE AFFAIR IS ABOUT NOTHING"

Former Army Officer Asserts Trouble Came When Husband Found Him With Wife at Lunch.

William E. Schrock, a civil engineer, of Chicago, formerly First Lieutenant, commanding a New York replacement outfit of machine gunners in France, says he was a surprised man yesterday when a Sheriff's deputy knocked on his door at Room 912, Jefferson Hotel, and served him with notice of a suit for $40,000 filed in the Circuit Court here by John J. Moore, an advertising solicitor, alleging alienation of the affections of the plaintiff's wife, Mrs. Gladys Moore.

"What do you think of that?" he said later to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "I took lunch with Mrs. Moore in a downtown restaurant Friday afternoon. Her husband walked in on us and put on a storm. He told me I had better stay away from his wife, and a lot of stuff like that. I said 'All right' and walked away. Friday night someone pounded on the door of my room. I made no response, and the next day the suit was filed. Can you beat that? Suit for $40,000. I wonder where he gets that comedy. He must think I work in the mint.

"All About Nothing."

"It's all about nothing. I live at the Plymouth Hotel in Chicago. So do Mrs. Moore and her mother. The Moores were separated last January. I had nothing to do with it. I was over in France. When I became acquainted with Mrs. Moore I took a fancy to her. She was a jolly companion—just the kind of person a fellow likes to talk to. I enjoyed her company, but I never met her except in the presence of her mother."

"How did you happen to be lunching with her Friday?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, yes," replied Schrock, "I forgot about that. I came down to St. Louis on business several days ago. I didn't know Mrs. Moore was in town until I received a note from her requesting me to meet her at the Statler Hotel. When I got there she was writing a letter on the mezzanine floor. Her face was bruised. I asked her what was the matter, and she began crying. She said her husband had beaten her. I invited her to lunch. We went to a small restaurant somewhere downtown, and we hadn't been there but a few minutes when her husband came in. He had another man with him. He was about to create a scene, but I took him aside and told him to speak in a low tone. He accused me of everything he could think of. My first impulse was to hit him, but I restrained myself.

"Just a Nice Little Girl."

"Mrs. Moore went away with her husband. I told him that I was not trying to steal his wife and that I never had tried to steal her. I told him I did not want her. She is nothing to me. She is just a nice little girl, but that is all I know about her. I just liked her company. That was all."

Schrock said he would be back here in October, when the case is to be heard, to refute in court the charge against him.

At the Pettingill apartments, 5630 Pershing avenue, where he resides, Moore could not be reached last night for a statement. His petition stated that he and Mrs. Moore were married Sept. 5, 1917, and separated Jan. 25, this year. Mrs. Moore is about 22 years old.

1600 ILLINOIS COAL STRIKERS VOTE TO RETURN TO WORK

2000 COLLINSVILLE MEN REJECT ORDER

Say Wage Demands Must Be Met by Operators—Belleville Miners Will Resume Jobs Monday.

Twelve hundred miners employed in the shaft of the Mount Olive & Staunton Coal Co., northeast of Edwardsville, returned to work yesterday, in accordance with general orders issued by State President Frank Farrington of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, who declared that the strike in Illinois is unauthorized.

Members of Local No. 304 of Belleville, in a mass meeting last night, voted to return to work Monday. Their action followed receipt of a communication from President Farrington. There are 400 members.

Approximately 2000 miners in Collinsville, who are out, refused to return to their posts and declared last night that the number of men out over the State had reached 40,000. There are between 70,000 and 80,000 miners in the State.

It is estimated there are 12,000 men out in the Belleville subdistrict. The strikers at Collinsville deny that they went out because of resentment to the fines imposed upon those who favored the Mooney "sympathetic strike." They assert they went on strike solely for the purpose of getting a special district convention to effect an immediate readjustment of their wage scale, because they believe they cannot survive the financial loss that would be involved in waiting for their dispute to be taken up through regular official channels. They say such procedure would require at least three or four months. They hope to have all the Illinois miners called out by next Thursday.

Strike Leaders Assaulted.

Dave Reed, one of the leaders of the strike movement in the Belleville district, where approximately 50 mines are affected, was assaulted Friday in Springfield, when he and a committee from Collinsville went there to persuade the Springfield men to quit in order to bring pressure to bear on Farrington to call a special convention. Robert Bartlero and Pat Mareno, who were with him, also were beaten by Reed's assailants. Dave Jenkins, the fourth member of the committee, was unharmed. The men declare the attack was led by a Collinsville miner who is employed in Farrington's office as an investigator of compensation claims and other men who are supporting the State president.

The injured men said they had just left the hotel in which they had eaten lunch when they were accosted by the party. The leader stopped them, they declared, and demanded to know their mission. In the course of the conversation he pointed to Bartlero and said, "There's the ringleader of them." The attack followed. The assailants escaped before police arrived. Reed asserted it was a pre-arranged plot.

As a rsult of the attack the Springfield miners have called a meeting for this afternoon to discuss whether they shall walk out.

Miners Say Contract Is Void.

The miners take the position that a contract drawn up between them and the operators and the United States Fuel Administration at the beginning of the war is no longer binding because the war has terminated and the Fuel Administration has been abolished. The contract provided an agreement that should exist "until the termination of the war," or until April 1, 1920.

Another grievance of the strikers is that the State presidents of the United Mine Workers of America, without conferring with district presidents of the organization, indefinitely postponed a special convention that was to have been held in May of this year. The meeting was canceled by the State presidents, it is said, after a meeting of the operators in Chicago when resolutions were passed favoring a continuation of the war time contract until 1921.

Farrington sent out a communication from his office to all union miners of the State, warning them to "beware of demagogues, malcontents, politicians, fanatics, emissaries of the Socialist Labor Party and of I. W. W." who, he stated, were "spreading a propaganda of falsehood and deception to influence the men to rebellion against orderly procedure and constituted policies."

Collinsville Men Incensed.

The Collinsville men were incensed at the imputation that they were the tools of propagandists and because Farrington admitted in his letter that they had just cause for complaint.

COL. ROOSEVELT'S FIRST PUBLIC SPEECH ATTACK ON DEMOCRATS

Declares Wilson Has Become Whole Show and Congress and Senate a Rubber Stamp.

By the Associated Press.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Aug. 9.—In his first public speech in his campaign for nomination as one of Nassau County's Republican candidates for the Assembly, Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt touched on national affairs and launched an attack on the Democratic party.

The address was made at a clam bake held here today by the Republican county organization. Introduced by Secretary of State Hugo as the "coming man," Col. Roosevelt said, in part:

"The Democratic organization has done its utmost to upset the American idea of a representative Government. The Chief Executive has become the whole show and Congress and the Senate merely a rubber stamp."

Col. Roosevelt ended with an appeal to his audience to convince "anti-Republican voters of the county who do not know which way to turn," that the Republican party "is the only stable organization."

ILLINOIS DOCTOR AND WOMAN HELD ON POISONING CHARGE

F. L. Alderson of Macomb and Mrs Lawrence Clugson Arrested Following Death of Latter's Husband.

By the Associated Press.

MACOMB, Ill., Aug. 9.—Frank L. Alderson and Mrs. Lawrence Clugston were arrested late today charged with poisoning Clugston, who died July 20 last, after he had been treated by Dr. Alderson for typhoid fever. The arrests were ordered by a coroner's jury.

S. J. Bagley, father of Mrs. Clugston, recently requested of the coroner that his son-in-law's death be investigated. The officer took charge of the body and the organs were sent to Chicago for analysis. The report showed no trace of typhoid fever, but found 4.27 grains of a poison.

Clugston was a prominent farmer. His wife is said to be about 35 years old. Dr. Alderson, who is 51 years old, has been making his home with the Clugstons and practicing at nearby towns.

COMPOSER LEONCAVELLO DIES

ROME, Aug. 9.—Ruggiero Leoncavello, the composer, is dead.

Ruggiero Leoncavello was born in Naples in 1856. He received his musical education in the conservatory at Naples, and at the age of 16 made a tour as a pianist. He was a man of letters as well as a musician and was a Wagner enthusiast, having done much to make that composer's works popular in Italy.

Others of Leoncavello's operas were "Medici," "Savonarola," "Trilby," "Cesare Borgia" and "Zaza." He first visited the United States in 1906.

Geuting, president of the National Shoe Retailers' Associatio. The bulk of next fall's shoes will be sold at from $8 to $12 a pair instead of higher prices, he said.

The statement further said that it is unfair to hold up one line of merchandise as a "horrible example" when in reality the profit is not more than 6 per cent.

ARMY FOOD PRICES HELD A THIRD TOO HIGH TO AID CITY

INDIVIDUALS CAN BUY THROUGH PARCEL POST

They Must Pay in Advance, While States and Counties Can Get Goods on Credit for 30 Days.

Mayor Kiel and City Supply Commissioner Thomas said yesterday that the price list announced in Washington for the army food stores which will be sold to the public, was much too high to justify the municipality in buying them to sell to the people. Mayor Kiel said that the Government's prices will have to be reduced one-third before municipal selling will accomplish its purpose.

Thomas stated that the prices quoted, while showing a reduction from those previously quoted on surplus Government foodstuffs, are still above the prices being paid by the city for municipal supplies. Thomas added that he is keeping in touch with Lieut. Jones, in charge of the surplus food supplies of the army stored at the Arsenal here, and that if the prices reach a point low enough he will open negotiations.

72 Staples Enumerated.

The statement made public by the War Department enumerated 72 food staples. Quotations on some of the leading commodities are as follows: Bacon, $4.15 per can of 17 pounds; corned beef, 55 cents for can of 1.36 pounds; baked beans. 5 cents for can of ¼ pound; sweet corn, 10 cents for 2¼ pound cans; dry beans, $6.49 per 100 pounds; crackers, 5 and 6 cents a pound; army flour, $6 per 100 pounds; macaroni, 7 cents per 1½ pounds; rolled oats, 12 cents per two pounds; seeded raisins, 10 cents per pound; rice, $6.74 per 100 pounds; tomatoes, 9 cents per two-pound can, and white cornmeal, $3.50 per 100 pounds.

Other quotations are as follows: Roast beef, from 23 cents to $2.13 a can; corned beef hash, 22 and 37 cents a can; stringless beans, 9 to 42 cents a can; cornmeal, $5.79 a bag; dry beans, $6.49 a bag; corn starch, 4 cents a can; dried codfish, 40 pounds for $6.82; corn flour, $5.24 a bag; graham flour, $3.80 a bag; rye flour, $3.75 a bag; coarse hominy, $6.49 a sack; condensed milk, 13 cents a can; rolled oats, 12 cents a carton and $3.50 a bag; rice, $6.74 a bag; tapioca, 1-pound carton, 13 cents; Vienna sausage, 52 cents a can; pork, 49 cents a can; evaporated apples, 6.44 for 60-pound case; evaporated peaches, $6.50 for 50-pound case; prunes, $5.50 for 50-pound case; bacon, $33 for 100-pound crates, and ham, $31 for 100-pound crates.

Some Sales by Parcel Post.

This list had not yet reached the Zone Supply Officer at the Arsenal yesterday, but he received from the War Department instructions which are to govern the sale of food here. The stores will be sold to municipalities, states, counties, charitable institutions, employes in Government departments, the Boy Scouts and other organizations, and finally to postmasters, as distributing agents for the parcel post. It is through the last channel that individual consumers, placing their orders through their postmen, if so wished, may participate in the distribution.

Individuals must pay in advance, and postmasters placing orders through the parcel post will be required to accompany the orders with cash or money order. Sales to municipalities, states, counties and public institutions need not be paid for in advance. The Secretary of War has ordered credit to be extended to them, on orders signed by a properly authorized official, for a period not exceeding 10 days from receipt of goods.

Must Pay in 30 Days.

Municipalities or other local governments, if prevented by their charter and laws from buying and selling, may obtain the appointment of their Mayors or heads of government to act as Government agents, to supervise the distribution of the food, or else such officials may appoint an agent so to act. In this case the goods are to be returned or paid for within 30 days, the municipalities in question to pay freight from point of shipment, and upon any goods returned.

Postmasters are notified that, as to parcel post shipments, exchange or replacement of damaged articles will be made only upon the affidavit of the recipient, approved by the postmaster and forwarded to the zone supply officer.

It is ordered that no soles are to be made for export save with the approval of the War Department.

HOW CLEMENCEAU HANDLES THE FOOD SHARKS IN PARIS

Finds "Frigo," Frozen Meat Is Sold as Fresh, and Sets 15 Days as Limit for Reform.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS Aug. 9.—Premier Clemenceau recently thought he would like to try "Frigo," as the Parisians call frozen meat. He told his cook to get some. She searched the whole quarter in vain because the butchers were selling it as fresh meat.

"This state of affairs must stop," said the Premier, according to the newspapers. He summoned two members of the City Council, M. Vilgrain, Under Secretary of the Ministry of Provisions; Henri Roy. Under Secretary for Food, and M. Autrand, Prefect of the Department of the Seine. The councilors said other things besides "Frigo" were missing.

"This must change," the Premier declared. "Henceforth Vilgrain and Roy will have charge of the victualing of Paris, Prefect Autrand undertaking the trucking of supplies, each being held responsible. I give you 15 days to have everything in order."

As a first step M. Vilgrain will open a hundred more sheds for the sale of foodstuffs. The sale of "Frigo" will be taken from ordinary butchers and will only be permitted at the municipal docks. Additional municipal stores will be opened to make 200 in all.

8 KILLED, A SCORE HURT IN GRAIN ELEVATOR EXPLOSION

Financial Loss in Blast at Port Colborne Is Estimated at $1,800,000.

By the Associated Press.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Aug. 9.—Eight persons were killed and a score were injured, seven seriously, in an explosion which wrecked the large Government grain elevator on the Welland Canal here this afternoon. Four bodies have been recovered; one has been located in the debris of the elevator and three others are in the wreck of the barge Quebec on the beach. The financial loss is estimated at $1,800,000. Spontaneous combustion is believed to have caused the explosion.

The elevator was built eight years ago at a cost of $2,000,000. It had a capacity of more than 2,000,000 bushels and the bins were said to be about one-third filled with grain, mostly wheat.

GREY IS OFFERED U. S. POST

London Paper Says Viscount Can Have Ambassadorship.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Sunday Observer announces that the post of Ambassador to the United States has been offered to Viscount Grey. The newspaper says that Viscount Grey has not yet reached a decision.

A dispatch from London Aug. 4 said that Viscount Grey had been mentioned unofficially as a possibility for the post of Ambassador to the United States. Although Viscount Grey's eyesight is failing rapidly, the message said there was a tendency in American circles in London to couple the Viscount's name with the statement of Andrew Bonar Law, the Government's spokesman, in the House of Commons, intimating that a person who had been high in political life would be offered the position.

WILSON EXPECTED TO DISCUSS HIGH COST OF LIVING ON LEAGUE TOUR

Indications at White House That President Will Denounce Profiteering While Other Agencies of Government Are Busy in Campaign to Relieve Situation.

SECRET SERVICE ON HUNT FOR GOUGERS

Prosecutions of Extortioners Looked for Soon; Congress to Proceed Promptly With Measures Recommended by Executive.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Tangible results from the investigation of hoarding and profiteering initiated by Attorney-General Palmer are expected to develop in the immediate future as the result of an order today directing the entire secret service of the Bureau of Investigation to assist the forces now at work trying to uncover instances in which the public has been gouged by the illegal control of prices.

Officials of the Department of Justice said reports from many sections of the country showed the search for evidence of extortion in the necessaries of life was proceeding vigorously, and it was indicated that many prosecutions might come very soon.

Announcement was also made today that Congress would proceed promptly with legislative measures recommended by President Wilson in his address yesterday as necessary to stop the "vicious practices" which have been largely responsible for the rising cost of living.

Republican Leader Mondell stated in the House that appropriations would be made at once to enable the Government departments to attack the problem, and Chairman Haugen announced that the Agriculture Committee would begin hearings Monday on legislation to control the time foods could be held in cold storage.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee discussed suggestions of the President that interstate shipments of necessities be controlled by a licensing commission, and Chairman Cummins announced that he would appoint a subcommittee Monday to recommend such legislation as it should decide was necessary.

There were indications at the White House that President Wilson might let the high cost of living pair with the league of nations speaking tour of the country which he is soon to make. The President has been devoting virtually all of his time recently to the economic situation and has come to believe that the importance of the question demands discussion equally with the big international problem, to explain which was the prime purpose of the tour.

Trained Men in Search.

Attorney-General Palmer's instructions were that the special agents should drop everything but the most pressing cases now pending and devote their entire attention to assisting in the campaign to reduce the cost of living.

While it was not so stated, the impression was gained that nothing but the investigation of radical propaganda which resulted in recent bomb outrages would be allowed to interefere with the efforts to punish profiteering.

"Congress stands ready to consider any estimates," declared Republican Leader Mondell in his statement in the House, "and hopes such estimates as are necessary and essential will be submitted to Congress as promptly as possible. All appropriations found necessary and needed will be made as soon as possible."

In regard to legislation, Mondell said some of it would be enacted promptly while that affecting "profoundly the policies of the Government," would be debated. All would receive the active and quick consideration of the House, he added.

The Senate committee's work on permanent railroad legislation, Senator Cummins stated, has advanced to such a stage that he has drafted a tentative bill outlining his views for the subcommittee's consideration and enactment. Senator Cummins withheld details of his bill, but it is understood to embody suggestions from a source of plans submitted to the committee. He explained that his measure was merely the basis for committee deliberations.

After concluding his address on the President's recommendations, Mondell suggested that the House adjourn until Tuesday because of a "lack of imperative business." This led to a protest from the Democrats, after former Speaker Clark had announced that every Democratic member would be notified to return to Washington as quickly as possible.

"We're stuck here, without a possible vacation until fall," Clark said, "and I think we should continue with business."

Representative Mann, Republican, of Illinois, said members should "go home and rest their souls,' 'adding that it was "not in the interest of the country to have the House in session."

After further discussion, the House finally adjourned until Tuesday.

Hearings on new cold storage legislation recommended by the President will begin before the House Agricultural Committee Monday, Chairman Haugen announced late today. It is understood that the measure as proposed would limit the time in which supplies might be held and compel disposal of them after the permitted period.

Army Prices Reduced.

Coincident with the President's appearance before Congress the War Department announced the prices at which its surplus food stocks would be sold. Price lists are to be sent to postmasters throughout the country with whom the consumers may place their orders, beginning Aug. 18. Under the department's list, the consumer will be able to buy bacon for 25 cents a pound, baked beans for 5 cents a pound, flour at $6 per hundred pounds, and other commodities at correspondingly low prices. To the prices quoted by the War Department will be added parcels post charges from the nearest army depot which are to be paid by the purchaser.

FEATURES OF THE PRICE CRUSADE IN WASHINGTON

Activity in Various Departments and in Congress Follows President's Recommendations.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The movement to reduce the cost of living took shape today as follows:

Republican floor leader Mondell announced prompt consideration would be given by House committees to appropriations and legislation required by executive departments as suggested by the President. Democratic floor leader Champ Clark promised co-operation by the minority.

Chairman Haugen, of the Committee on Agriculture, conferred with Secretary of Agriculture Houston, who promised to submit suggestions for legislation early next week, and called a meeting of the committee for Monday morning to take up cold storage legislation and arrange a program for dealing with three other measures relating to packers control, regulation of feedstuffs and fertilizers.

Chairman Volstead of the Judiciary Committee decided to ask the opinion of the Department of Justice on a bill from the Capital Issues Committee for regulating publicity as to shares of stock in corporations, referred to by President Wilson. A bill requiring license for corporations, also suggested by Mr. Wilson, is on the Judiciary Committee's calendar.

Republican and Democratic leaders decided to call absent members back to Washington. Three committees of the House are expected to handle most of the cost of living legislation, those on appropriation, agriculture and judiciary.

Scores of Bills.

Scores of bills and resolutions on different phases of the food and clothing problems have been introduced. Leaders expect definite plans of legislation to be proposed by administration heads. It is expected a deficiency bill or bills will be brought in supplying funds for the Federal Trade Commission, Department of Agriculture, Department of Justice or other branches planning publicity.

The various recommendations submitted by the President relating to lessening the excessive prices demanded for necessities of life will be promptly considered by a special sub-committee for the Senate committee on interstate commerce.

The problem of obtaining better prices for farm products will be taken up by the Senate Agricultural Committee next Tuesday.

Chairman Haugen of the House Agricultural Committee said today he approved President Wilson's suggestion that the scope of the food control bill be enlarged to include control of shoes, clothing, farm implements, pig iron, steel "and anybody engaged in evil practices." He favored this when the bill was first up in 1917.

Haugen said the President was in error when he said there was no penalty for enforcing the food control act. "Section 4," he said, "requires dealers, manufacturers and distributors of foods to be licensed, and the President to fix reasonable prices. A provision is in the law that if anybody does business without a license or with a revoked license, he may be fined $5000 and imprisoned six months."

He notified the packers that the storage bill would be up Monday. Pointing out that many cold storage plants were independently owned, he said the proposed legislation met with their approval. The measure was introduced by Representative Hutchison, Republican, New Jersey, and includes most of the features indorsed yesterday by the President, though its author said the New Jersey law had been amplified to include some of the good features in measures of other states. There is some question as to the time of storage. The first witnesses will be chemists of the Department of Agriculture, to explain the effect of storage on various food products. The title of the measure is "To Provide Revenue, and for the Regulation and Supervision of Cold Storage Warehouses and the Conservation, Storage, Sale and Distribution of Food and Food Products."

"If we can regulate storage, we have solved a big part of the problem," said Hutchinson today. "Trouble has been that packers removed their goods from warehouses of one state to warehouses of another state to escape restrictions of some states that forbid storage after a certain period. They have built up warehouses in states where there were few regulations or none. This bill forbids removal after 10 months, the limit permitted by it for storage, and empowers the Secretary of Agriculture to keep in touch with the goods."

He added that only 400 to 500 cold storage plants report today, but there are hundreds of others that make no report. The definition of food does not include liquid food, which is not to be allowed in storage.

Storage Promised.

Persons operating a cold storage plant must have a license, to be issued by the Secretary of Agriculture after he is satisfied as to sanitary conditions. All food must be stamped as to time of receipt and time of withdrawal. Transfer of food to another cold storage plant must be in accordance with the restrictions and under the eye of the Government. Food kept in storage longer than authorized is to be sold at auction in 30 days, or if condemned must be destroyed. Full authority to inspect is given the Department of Agriculture and quarterly reports shall be made.

Violation of the law would be punishable by $500 fine for the first offense and upon a second offense the offender will have committed a misdemeanor. Punishment in each instance may be meted to individuals responsible.

Domestic feeds, meaning those useful for feeding domestic animals or poultry, are to be regulated by another bill already introduced by Mr. Haugen.

The Anderson-Kenyon bill to regulate the packing industry will be given a place on the program of the Agricultural Committee.

The Department of Agriculture is preparing a bill for regulation of fertilizers to prevent adulteration.

Representative Tincher today said he believed an investigation would show $1,000,000 of excess profits have been made by millers of the country. Pointing out that they are limited to profits of 25 cents a barrel, he said:

"The Food Department of the United States sent auditors into my district and audited the books. I have one milling company that, it is said, owed the Government $282,000 of excess profits. All of them together, I think, owe a million dollars. Without reauditing those books, without sending another man to look at the books, the milling company sent their attorney here to Washington and he compromised for $8000, and went home with a receipt in full."

Prices of Cattle.

He added that such conduct encouraged profiteering. Turning to the practices of packers Tincher said he went to the Department of Agriculture with Senators Capper and Kendrick, and Representative Hoch to inquire about prices of cattle.

"There was a prevalent sentiment in the country to the effect that we were doing a patriotic thing if we did not even eat meat," said Tincher. "The cattle men, who were being ruined by the reduction of the price of cattle, were begging for publicity on that question. To make it plain to the people that there was no longer a ban on eating of meat they were asking the Department of Agriculture to give publicity to that fact. We found, when we got to the department, the Bureau of Markets in conference with the officials of the Department of Agriculture, and the gentleman in charge of that bureau had procured the preparation of an article to which they were going to give publicity, and in which they were going to say that the packers of the United States were entirely blameless in this instance."

Their information, said Tincher, was based on figures from Buffalo, St. Louis, Chicago and Cincinnati that while packers had reduced the price of a 1200-pound steer 5 cents a pound, or $60, they added to the 800-pound carcass a price of 5 cents a pound, or $40, which was paid to the cattlemen.

"On the first day of March, I told the department the steer was worth $60 more than he is today, selling at 5 cents less a pound. The packers claimed they only wanted to make $1.60 on that steer. They are now selling the carcass of 800 pounds today for $40 less than on the first day of March, or 5 cents a pound. If the packer was making $1.60 on the first day of March, he is making $21.60 today, and here is the bureau of markets, which is supposed to be helping the consumer and producer, planning to give publicity to the effect that the packer was blameless.

"They changed the publicity, saying 'the packer was manifestly unfair' "

CONGRESS INCLINED TO UNITY ON LAWS FOR PROFITEERING

Republicans Happily Surprised by "Words of Sanity" in President's Message on High Cost of Living.

PARTISANSHIP MAY BE KEPT FROM FORE

Wilson's Utterances Against Radicalism and Plea for Law and Order Gain Unanimous Approval.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1919.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Nobody who heard President Wilson deliver his memorable address to Congress on the high cost of living could fail to observe that, for the moment, at least, the personnel of the legislative and executive branches of the Government seemed to be lifted out of the depths of cancerous partisanship and brought back to the place of unselfish patriotism which won the war and which must now help keep the peace.

It was an impressive sight—Republicans applauding along with Democrats—applauding not the mere phrases of an individual but the doctrines of law and order pronounced with a deliberateness and finality intended to give tonic to a panicky and disturbed state of mind. For the national capital had been torn between a nationwide demand for lower prices and a sudden insistence by railroad leaders that they be permitted to introduce the soviet system in the management of the transportation facilities of the country.

Hit At Radicalism Cheered.

Every time the President hit at implications of bolshevism he literally brought down the house. Republicans and Democrats joined in a spontaneous tribute whose meaning was unmistakable.

"There must be no threats," said Mr. Wilson, and both the Senate and house assembled did not wait for him to finish the thought. "The world has just destroyed the arbitrary force of a military junta, it will live under no other." Again cheers echoed through the legislative chamber. But the climax came when the President added: "Everyone who is in real touch with the silent masses of our great people knows that the old strong fiber and steady self-control are still there, firm against violence or any distempered action that would throw their affairs into confusion. The worst thing, the most fatal thing that can be done now is to stop or interrupt production or to interfere with the distribution of goods by the railways and the shipping of the country."

It must not be forgotten that whether the country has realized the situation here or not the truth is, Congress being Republican and the Administration Democrat, a game of party politics has been played ever since the elections last fall. It has projected itself even into the controversy over the peace treaty and league of nations. The encouraging thing about the reception by Congress of Mr. Wilson's address was the tendency to lay aside political considerations and tackle anew the acute problems of the moment on which party platforms have never functioned because they could not foresee the present economic disturbance.

The scene was all the more remarkable because it began as usual with a partisan display. Only the Democrats clapped hands as Mr. Wilson entered. Senator Reed of Missouri, Democrat, was a conspicuous exception with his hands locked behind him. As the President slowly revealed how closely interwoven the peace treaty and the economic situation seemed to him to be, again the Republicans smiled cynically at what some of them evidently regarded as a typical bit of Wilsonian strategy. Senator Fall, Republican, who said Congress can declare a state of peace without ratifying the treaty, did not seem impressed. But the Democrats and a few Republicans wondered if possibly Europe's distressful condition had not affected America somewhat, especially in the reflection of economic unrest and credit uncertainties.

Disposition to Unite.

So it was when the President turned from what might be considered his pet subject—the league of nations and international co-operation—as he abandoned his mild rebuke at a lagging Senate and took up the domestic problems so well understood by the average voter and so well accentuated by the events of last weeks, both parties listened with a vivid interest and concentrated thought.

"Threats and undue insistence upon the interest of a single class make settlement impossible" was approved by all because Mr. Wilson struck a note for the common interest and because he seemed to be serving notice on the railway shopmen that they were not the only class suffering and that rather than increase wages unduly in their behalf relief must be found in measures lowering the entire scale of living for everybody. When the President came to this passage: "We are all involved in the distressing results of the high cost of living and we must unite, not divide, to correct it," I noticed applause by Representative Campbell, Chairman of the Rules Committee, a Republican who has been most bitter in his attacks on the President.

What does it mean? Simply that Congress is alive, not asleep in these critical moments and that the voice of the country has been heard in the legislative halls at Washington. It is not too much to expect an era of non-partisanship such as prevailed during the war when committee after committee brought in unanimous reports. Perhaps the era may be said to have begun when the Senate committee on interstate commerce brought in a unanimous recommendation to the effect that Mr. Wilson had the power to raise the wages of railroad men. The President did not stop to quibble, he took this recommendation literally and set to work at once to adjust the railway dispute by executive action. But his ultimatum to the railway men that they must obey their leaders and go back to work before consideration could be given to their demands brought instant approval throughout the capitol.

Republicans Happily Surprised.

Even before Mr. Wilson read his message, there were those of opposite political faith who remarked upon Mr. Wilson's words of sanity. Indeed, it is said that as the President finished his message Senator John Sharp Williams, Democrat, leaned over, and, chatting with Senator Calder, Republican, who sat in front of him, observed: "Well, the President may be visionary and an idealist, but he comes across with some practical sense when it counts."

Senators and Representatives of both parties crowded around President Wilson as he finished speaking. Champ Clark and Claud Kitchin came forward to congratulate him. Some said it was Mr. Wilson's best utterance since the message declaring war.

Whether that is so or not it certainly was the first time since that occasion that one saw Republicans and Democrats applauding and cheering. It was interesting to see Senator Kellogg and Senator Harding of the Republican fold and Senator Lodge, too, clapping their hands. It was interesting to watch the nods of approval by other leaders of opposite political faith.

They feared Mr. Wilson might seek to ride on the crest of the radical wave in America, that he might suddenly stimulate the radical movement by recommendations of a fundamentally radical character. But they learned that President Wilson had decided, instead, to appeal to the sober sense of the American people, their sturdiness and self-control their dispassionate co-operation and their unselfish patriotism. If the two big political parties can only be compelled to work together by further manifestations of public opinion, America will get through her reconstruction troubles with the same vitalized unity that won a world war and saved civilization from destruction on the battlefields of France.

ARMY FOOD PRICES HELD A THIRD TOO HIGH TO AID CITY

municipalities, states, counties, charitable institutions and Postmasters, save that in such instances no sale is to be made of less than one-case lots, or in the original package of sugar, flour, etc.

Sales to individuals through the parcel post will be inaugurated Aug. 18, and before that time all Postmasters will have a price quotation list from which the consumers may order. On the parcel post distribution no orders will be received directly by the War Department, but only through the Postoffice Department, which will requisition the supplies by case or larger order.

The prices quoted are f. o. b. and from storage points in each of the 13 districts into which the country is divided for War Department subsistence purposes. The department now is redistricting the food supplies in the 13 areas in order that each may have its proper proportion according to population.

200 Cars of Surplus Army Food for New York State.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Under an arrangement with the War Department worked out today the entire allotment of surplus army food stores for New York State probably will be taken up by the 60 or more municipalities of that State for distribution and there will be no parcels post sales or sales by other Federal agencies in the State.

Dr. Eugene H. Porter, head of the New York State Division of Foods and Markets called on the director of sales at the War Department today and was told that if the New York municipalities submitted orders for these surplus supplies by Aug. 15 they would be filled to the extent of the State's allotment, which is approximately 200 carloads of assorted commodities.

CROWN PRINCE IN GERMANY FOR COUP, RADICALS HEAR

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—According to a report which cannot be confirmed but is current and credited in radical quarters, the Crown Prince has secretly returned to Germany and everything has been prepared for a military monarchist coup d'etat in a week's time. It is said that he has been in Silesia 10 days waiting for the signal for a counter revolution.

The radicals assert the plan is to proclaim a military dictatorship under Gen. Lettow Vorbeck as a preliminary to restoration of the Hohenzollern dynasty. Germany still has an army of over 2,000,000 men, counting the Baltic troops, radicals declare, and Noske, they say, will play along with the military leaders.

HOUSE LIKELY TO BE SUMMONED FOR TREATY TESTIMONY

Senate Foreign Relations Committee Said to Regard Him as Last Hope for Information.

LANSING PROVED A FAILURE ON DATA

Wilson Immune From Formal Examination Before the Committee or at the White House.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—It now seems certain that Edward M. House, the President's closest friend and adviser, will be called before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and examined concerning all details of the pending peace treaty. A formal determination to that effect has not been reached, but an interchange of views among members makes it assured that Mr. House will be placed on the witness stand. Action in the direction of securing his attendance is expected next week.

Mr. House appears to be about the last hope members of the Foreign Relations Committee have of obtaining desired information regarding the treaty. Secretary Lansing proved a failure so far as furnishing any data or details is concerned. He participated but little in framing the pending treaty and knew nothing of the reasons assigned for various compromises and provisions.

It is considered impossible to submit the President to any form of examination. If he appeared before the committee and made a statement, he could not be questioned on it. If the committee went to the White House, members point out, they would be guests of the President and could not go far in seeking to bring out facts not voluntarily given.

Knows More Than President.

There are a number of questions, committee members say, that could and should be answered by Mr. House. The coming of Lansing, they say, made the appearance of Mr. House all the more necessary. In their opinion Mr. House really knows more than the President. It was he, they say, who engineered all the deals and trades by which various important results were obtained. He could tell more in the way of explanation that the President himself, they think.

The method of bringing Mr. House here has not been worked out. It is believed he would come in response to a cabled request from the Foreign Relations Committee. It is doubtful whether he could be compelled to come under any process possessed by the committee.

The foundation for bringing Mr. House here was laid when Secretary Lansing was on the stand. In reply to questions the Secretary said Mr. House now was in England. He did not know how long he would remain and when he expected to return home. He said Mr. House could be reached at any time by communicating with the American embassy at London.

It was entirely evident from Mr. Lansing's testimony that the President and Mr. House performed all the responsible duties connected with the American peace commission. Neither Lansing, White nor Bliss participated to any great extent.

"I believe Col. House should be called before the Foreign Relations Committee and questioned regarding the peace, treaty," said Senator New, a member of that body, this evening. "He is the only person in a position to furnish the committee information it is necessary to obtain. No details of even minor value were secured from Secretary Lansing. The President virtually occupies an inaccessible position. He cannot, with any degree of propriety be cross-examined, and a visit to the White House would prove unsatisfactory and barren of results. I am strongly in favor of having Col. House called before the committee and examined regarding the peace treaty."

Long Delay on Treaty.

Some members of the Foreign Relations Committee said today that much delay may result from awaiting the receipt of the Austrian, Bulgarian and other pending treaties, which they think should be at hand before final disposition is made of the peace convention. It is held by these members that all the treaties now under negotiation should be before the Foreign Relations Committee before the pending instrument is reported. This might foreshadow a delay of several weeks.

Capt. O. E. McCabe of Chinook, Mont., who has just returned from overseas with the A. E. F. in France, gives out a statement which is held to indicate the sentiment prevailing among the American troops in France regarding the proposed league of nations covenant.

The Captain took a voluntary poll of the entire Sixty-eighth Regiment of Engineers, some 2000 men, as to their sentiments regarding a league. The votes were collected by the 125 officers of the regiment, with the following result:

Those in favor of a league, 193; those opposed to any form of league, 809. This total included the officers. A separate poll of the latter disclosed the fact that 124 officers were opposed to the league and 1 in favor of it.

The poll was taken in the form of a request to the officers and men and was in no sense compulsory. A large majority of the men openly expressed their opinions to the effect that the United States wanted no entangling alliances of any sort with Europe, after the war.

Capt. McCabe states his belief that the sentiment of the Sixty-eighth Regiment of Engineers on this subject was that of practically the entire American army in France, and that the 2,000,000 men who have been coming back to this country are almost unanimously antagonistic to the proposed peace covenant with the league of nations factor included in it.

not advanced through vote or voice of employes, but by railroad autocrats who felt they "were extortioners of human effort." He wanted employes to pass on a man's right to go higher.

Success or failure of the Plumb plan, Plumb said, in his House testimony, must be found in the 15 directors—10 of whom would be named by railway employes. Discussing the tremendous power vested in the directorate, Plumb said there was no fear on the part of labor of creating a situation beyond control of the people.

Montague said during the Civil War some Confederate companies elected their Captains, and added: "The result probably didn't show the wisdom of it."

"I never heard of that," Plumb replied, "but in this last war we had some able officers, and if privates had been permitted to select them, would have had more."

Declaring that the requests of the men that living costs be reduced or their wages increased was aside from the question of the future disposition of the railroad problem, the labor leaders said in their statement that if President Wilson and Congress could not meet this request the men would "have to try to find another solution."

Result of Wilson Message.

While the labor leaders did not mention the President's address to Congress yesterday, it was the general belief that their statement resulted from his warning to the labor world that strikes would only make present conditions worse and that those who sought to employ threats or coercion were only "preparing their own destruction."

"To prevent any misunderstandings as to the policy of the organized railroad employes," said the statement, "we unite in a definite assertion that we have no desire and have had none to impress upon the public by violence, or by threat, our proposal that the railroads be nationalized under 'tripartite control.'

'Two distinctly separate considerations now confront the people, the wage requirements of the railroad employes, and the Sims bill (embodying employes' plan for reorganization of the railroads).

"In the matter of wages we have an eminently just proposition. We have said that if we are to continue to live as Americans should live and are to care for our families as American families should be cared for, the profiteers must be restrained or our wages increased. Every fair-minded man, and every intelligent housewife, will recognize the reasonableness of this request. If Congress and the President cannot meet this request, it is still a living question and we shall have to try to find another solution.

"This, however, bears in no way upon our sponsorship of the Sims bill. We do hold to our conviction that the railroad employes are in no mood to consign themselves finally to the autocratic control of financial dictators, but in proposing the elimination of capital and the tripartite directorate, we have no purpose of intimidation. We appeal to the statesmanship of America and to the common sense of American manhood and womanhood. We all are voters; and unless our democracy in Government is a failure, our democracy in industry need not be. We believe in the native ability of American labor. What we ask is the Americanization of the railroads."

Hitchcock Opposes Plumb Plan.

Senator Hitchcock, Democrat, of Nebraska, announced today that he was opposed to the plan of the railroad brotherhood for reorganization of the railroads. Replying to an inquiry from brotherhood officials in Nebraska, Senator Hitchcock said: "In my opinion, Congress would not be justified in enacting such radical legislation without a mandate from the people. The railroad organizations have raised a very large question—one that should not be passed upon by Congress without becoming the issue in a general election. I am opposed to the bill."

Gov. Allen's Opinion.

Gov. Allen today said that he was not committed to the Plumb plan or any other definite program, but came to the conference with an open mind, at the invitation of the brotherhoods, to make suggestions on the solution of the wage problem.

He believed, he said, that the Plumb plan had some commendable features, including that which would base railroad earnings on the value of the property and not on inflated values. While he thought that the country did not want Government ownership of the railroads, he thought that there was general agreement that some stronger form of Federal control should be exercised than existed before the war.

1600 ILLINOIS COAL MINERS VOTE TO RETURN TO WORK

He urged them, however, to wait until the proper time for settlement.

"This is not a move on the part of I. W. W., Socialist leaders or Bolsheviki," Reed said yesterday. "It is a move by the honest rank and file of the United Mine Workers of America to obtain relief from an unbearable situation."

Leaders of the strike say their condition is critical. Few of the mines have been operating more than two days of each week since the signing of the armistice. There are no factories or other places where the miners can obtain employment when the mines are shut down. The men declare that it was unusual for mines to operate more than four days a week during the war. The last increase in pay they received was in 1917, when diggers were granted an extra wage of 10 cents on each ton of coal. Yardage workers, deadworkers and room turningmen were advanced 15 per cent in salary at that time.

One Collinsville man, it is said, has earned an average of only 60 cents a day since the signing of the armistice. He has a large family.

The men late yesterday received a communication from Farrington, in which he declared the existing agreement between the miners and operators will not expire until the peace treaty is ratified by the Senate, and that the national officers now are arranging for a joint conference to be held immediately following the adjournment of the convention of the United Mine Workers, which meets in Cleveland, O., Sept. 9.

LOOT OF THIEVES CONSISTS OF HAM, EGGS, BREAD AND BUTTER

Shops, Wagons and Homes Robbed of Food, Clothing, Money and Jewelry.

Burglars started out yesterday to solve the H. C. L. problem after their own fashion, judging from police reports made during the day. Some of the thefts reported are:

Five pounds of boiled ham and four pounds of veal loaf stolen from a cooler in the butcher shop of Julius Wilmes, 5357 Cote Brilliante avenue.

Ten dozen eggs and 14 pounds of butter stolen from a wagon of Mrs. Elizabeth Bauman, Glencoe, Mo., while standing at the Farmers' Market, Sarah street and Laclede avenue.

Thirty pounds of butter stolen from the dairy of John Langasand, 3816 Nebraska avenue, taken from the cooling room.

Eight loaves of bread taken from the South End Bakery, 700 West Davis street.

A burglar used an ice pick to open a lock on a screen door at the home of William T. Stephens, 4734 Beacon street, after which he ransacked the house, taking $35 in cash and a watch.

Three dresses belonging to girl roomers were stolen from the home of Miss Nellie Hedderman, 2526 North Grand avenue, by sneak thieves, while the girls were absent.

At the home of Mrs. Adele Marks, 4022 Delmar boulevard, daylight burglars stole $1.45 and a ring.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Drafting of a reservation of the $25,000,000 Colombian treaty to insure protection for American oil and other property interests in Colombia was discussed at a conference late today between Senator Fall, Republican, of New Mexico, chairman of a Foreign Relations Sub-Committee charged with the question, and J. A meeting of the sub-committee to consider the proposed reservation, which caused the treaty to be recommitted, is planned for next Monday.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—A report was current in Paris this afternoon that Gen Pershing had been recalled suddenly to the United States, but it met with no confirmation when inquiry was made regarding it at Gen. Pershing's office here. The report had it that the General might even abandon his visit to King Albert of Belgium, planned for Sunday, but it was stated at the General's office that no one there was aware of any change in his plans.

Gen. Pershing's special train, in fact, was at Lille this evening, taking him on his way to Belgium for his visit.

FRICK BUYS MORGAN ART WORKS

$1,500,000 Reported as Price of Famous Limoges Enamels.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Henry C. Frick has added to the art collection in his Fifth avenue home, at a reported cost of $1,500,000, the famous Limoges enamels included in the collectio of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, according to an announcement today.

There are about 40 bronzes and tryptychs. Notable among the enamels are portraits of Leonard Limousin and earlier artists, such as Monyaerni, Nardon and the Penicauds. The Penicauds are represented by the members of the family, Jean First, Second and Third. In 1915 Frick bought, for more than $1,000,000, some of the rare Morgan porcelain china. Previously he had acquired the famous Fragonard paintings.

ANXIETY IN PANAMA OVER FIGHT ON TREATY

President, Pointing to Opposition to Article X, Wonders Whether Panama Is Protected.

By the Associated Press.

PANAMA, Aug. 9.—Dr. Belisario Porras, President of Panama, expressed anxiety, in a statement issued Thursday night, over the attitude of the United States Congress toward the first article of the American-Panaman treaty guaranteeing Panaman independence, in view of the objections voiced in the American Senate to Article X. of the league of nations covenant, which is similar.

"Senator Walsh, of Montana," President Porras said, "in a speech which appears in the Congressional record of June 11, defending the right of the President of the United States to fulfill such an obligation without resorting to Congress for a declaration of war, mentioned the treaty between Panama and the United States. In this treaty, the latter guarantees and maintains the independence of Panama.

"As the objections in the Senate to the league of nations are mainly by Republican Senators and as the Republican party was mainly responsible for the approval of the treaty with Panama there is felt in my country, a certain anxiety in regard to the attitude of those Republican Senators because of the influence they may exercise in determining whether or not the first article of the Panama treaty which is analogous to Article X. of the league of nations covenant, is binding on the United States in view of the constitutional questions raised in the Senate.

"In view of the debate in the American Senate about the league of nations covenant, and especially about Article X., which binds the high contracting parties to respect and preserve the territorial integrity and the present political existence of all nations constituting the league, Panama wishes to know if the Senators opposing the covenant hold beliefs that justify fears entertained by the Panamans regarding the ultimate fate of the United States' obligation to maintain our independence."

Senator Walsh Reassures Panama President in Cablegram.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, cabled President Porras of Panama today that he entertained no doubt whatever of the binding force of the obligation upon the United States to protect Panama from external aggression under the terms of the treaty between the two countries.

The Senator's cablegram was in reply to a message from President Porras which was identical with the statement given by the President to the Associated Press:

"As expressed in my speech," said Senator Walsh's cablegram, "I entertain no doubt whatever of the binding force of the obligation on the part of the United States recited in Article I of the treaty with Panama."

In discussing President Porras' statement today, Senators pointed out that repudiation of the obligation in the Panama treaty had not been suggested from any source.

SUPPOSED POLICEMAN TAKES $150 AIGRETTE-TRIMMED HAT

The theft of a hat trimmed with aigrettes, valued at $150, from Mrs. Myrtle Schertz, 4044 Washington boulevard, wife of a caterer, while she and a party of friends were in the Bellevue Club, 5000 Easton avenue, early Wednesday morning, has caused Chief of Police O'Brien to order a rigid investigation to ascertain the identity of a man said to be a policeman who is accused by waiters and others of the theft.

Mrs. Schertz said she had laid the hat on a table for a few minutes while she went to another part of the garden to speak to a friend. When she returned to the table the hat was gone. Waiters told of a man in a dark gray suit, accompanied by a woman, who had picked up the hat and walked out. They professed to know the man as a policeman, but did not know his name. He had always posed to them as a policeman, they said, and was a frequent visitor at the club.

D. R. Morische, proprietor of the garden, said also he knew the man as a policeman, but did not know his name.

STRIKING SHOPMEN RETURN TO WORK BY THOUSANDS

Railroad Administration Expects Full Force Will Be Back by Tomorrow—Many Union Meetings Today.

LOCALS MAY EXPEL THOSE WHO HOLD OUT

Chicago Effort Characterized as an Attempt to Organize "One Big Union" Which Failed.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Reports to headquarters of the railway employes department of the American Federation of Labor today indicated that striking shopmen throughout the country are returning to work in large numbers in response to the decision of President Wilson that the Government could not negotiate with the union leaders while the men were on strike. Bert M. Jewell, acting president of the railway employes, said reports had reached his office up to tonight that strikers at 80 points in the country had returned to work. He declined to indicate how many men this represented.

Officials of the Railroad Administration said tonight they expected a great improvement in the strike situation over Sunday, with virtually a full force in all shops by Monday. Their reports indicated the men were returning to work gradually as the situation was explained to them, though radical groups in some cities were refusing to go back without wage increases.

No Conferences Set.

No appointment has been made yet for representatives of the shop crafts to begin their negotiations with the Director-General of railroads in the effort to settle the controversy which the Board of Railway Wages and Working Conditions split on. "As things stand at present," Jewell said, "the men are standing in their own way. Railroad administration officials will not hear us, as the President indicated, until the strikers have returned to their work. It all depends upon them now. In my opinion the men who persist in staying off the job are going to find themselves in a fight with a great majority of their fellow members of the unions. The men who take the conservative view of this struggle will not wait many days longer before they demand that the representatives start negotiations, and they are going to force the obstinate ones out of unions and out of their jobs. They will find themselves outside of the whole question."

Jewell said the action of the men who went on strike against the advice of their international representatives was precipitated by so-called members of the union, some of whom at least may have had the deliberate intent of disorganizing the brotherhoods as they stand at present. From Jewell's description of the situation in Chicago where the strike began, an attempt to organize "one big union" was made. It was voted down by an almost unanimous vote. The next move was for a strike.

Many meetings of local unions throughout the country will be held tomorrow, it is said, and the influence of the conservatives will be brought to bear in the meetings held in the proper manner, and under the elected leaders of the unions. Leaders expect this to have the effect of settling the disagreements, and they hope for the situation to be clarified by Monday to the extent that the leaders may report to the administration that they are ready to begin negotiations which will settle the differences.

Insurgents Dominate Chicago Conference of Striking Shopmen.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Representatives of the Chicago District Council of the Federated Railway Shopmen's Union which called a strike Aug. 1 in defiance of the international officers of the shop crafts union today dominated conferences at which some of the international officers sought to have the men return to work in obedience to the wishes of President Wilson.

The council sent a telegram to the President stating that until some concession had been made the attitude of the men would be unchanged and they would remain on strike.

John D. Sanders, secretary of the council, asserted that notwithstanding the claims of the international officers and rail officials that not more than 40,000 men were on strike, not fewer than 250,000 men were out.

In Chicago, the secretary said, no men had returned to work.

At the request of the district council, former Senator Lewis of Illinois last night telegraphed to President Wilson recommending that the Director-General take up the subject with a view to bringing harmony between the international officers and heads of the men's committees.

The message sent to President Wilson by the council in part was as follows:

"We filed our declaration praying for an increase in wages to meet the ever-growing increase in living expenses with the Railroad Administration through our international officers in February, 1919. Since that time we have been unable to secure any information from the Government or the international officers concerning our request. The representatives of the men employed in the railroad shops held a convention to inaugurate some new channel through which we could function. The convention voted to strike Aug. 1 unless our request for increase in wages was given some consideration.

"Until some immediate concession of our original demands presented to the Railroad Administration in February, 1919, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1919, is granted, we regret very much to inform you that the present attitude of our men on strike shall remain unchanged."

BOSTON, Aug. 9.—No improvement was noted in the strike situation on the railroads of New England tonight after a number of meetings of strike leaders and unions had adjourned. Strike leaders on the New York, New Haven & Hartford said that if the men at New Haven had voted to follow the lead of Boston they would "wait a long time before returning to work."

Leaders of Boston & Maine workers said the sentiment was unanimous to remain on strike until the full demands are granted.

Meetings have been arranged for tomorrow and Monday, at which representatives of the grand lodge will speak in an effort to persuade the men to return to work.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 9.—Reports from points in the Southeast indicated that some railway shopmen either were returning to work today or voting to return Monday. In Macon, 2000 voted to end the strike. In Savannah mechanics voted to go back if assured they would participate in any advances granted other shopworkers. Shopmen on the Tennessee Central at Nashville went back to work today.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 9.—Although union railway shopmen in Atlanta and Birmingham remained away from their work today, the promised return Monday of 4000 striking shompen at Macon, Ga., and Albany, Ala., appreciably improves the situation in the Southeast. At Columbus, Ga., 500 more strikers voted to return.

Two thousand shop workers of the Central of Georgia, Southern, Georgia Southern and Florida & Macon, Dublin & Savannah railroads employed in Macon shops, voted to resume their work Monday. At Albany, Ala., where 2000 men have been on strike at the Louisvile & Nashville shops, a mass meeting was held and a vote favorable to return was taken. At Savannah, Ga., and Montgomery, Ala., shop workers agreed to return under conditions which have not as yet been definitely settled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 9.—All the Missouri Pacific shopmen employed here, about 200, returned to work this morning. The men will continue to work at least until Sept. 2, when the issue of a strike will be definitely settled.

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 9.—Twelve hundred machinists in the Missouri Pacific shops last night voted to return to work Monday.

Respecting the wishes of President Wilson, 1400 Missouri Pacific shopmen, who have been on strike since Tuesday, today decided to return to work Monday.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 9.—By virtually a unanimous vote, the 4500 railway shopmen on strike here tonight decided to remain out. The vote was taken at a huge outdoor mass meeting held in a local park. Only men with union cards were allowed to vote.

The 600 striking shopmen on the Northwestern Railroad at Winona, Minn., at a conference tonight voted to remain out.

EXECUTIVE BOARD OF WABASH SHOPMEN FAIL TO END STRIKE

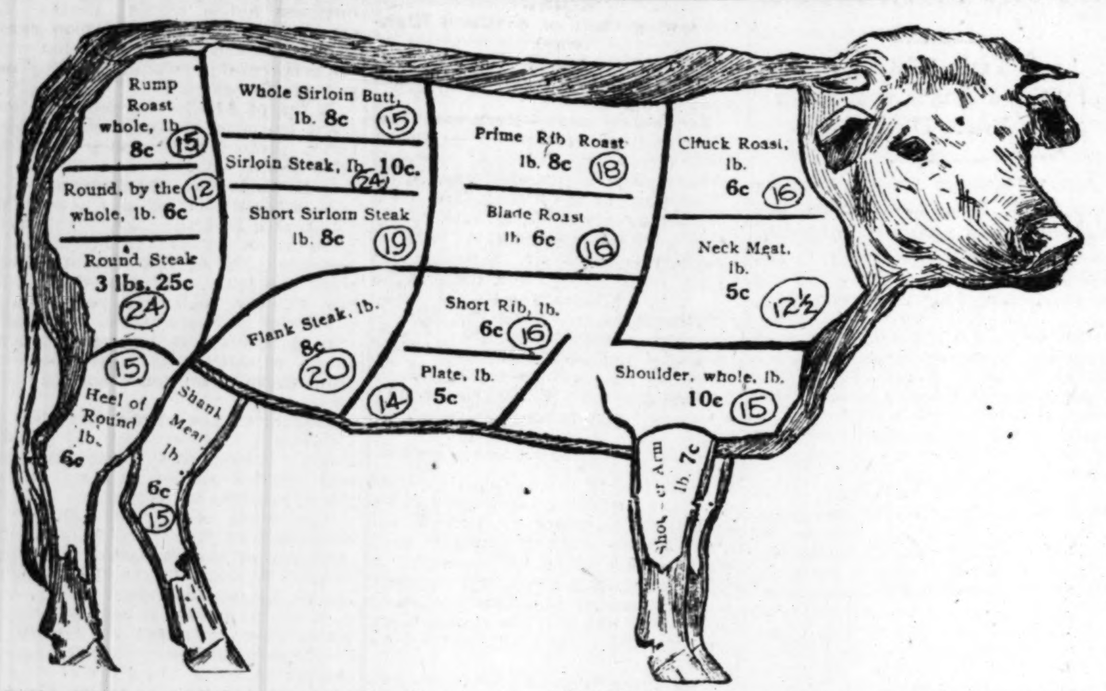
Chairman Says Decatur Session Will Be Resumed Tomorrow, but Outcome Is in Doubt.

No action was taken by the Executive Board of the Wabash shopmen at Decatur, Ill., yesterday regarding the speech by President Wilson, in which he called upon the strikers to return to work, according to D. C. Chamberlain, business agent of the Wabash crafts and a member of the Executive Board, who returned home from the meeting last night. He said that the board would resume its session at Decatur tomorrow and that he was unable to venture a prediction as to the outcome, as there was considerable difference of opinion on the part of the members.

R. G. McGill, representing the Rock Island shopmen, said that the Wabash and Rock Island locals would be governed by whatever action the Wabash Executive Board takes.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 9.—Following a four hour stormy mass meeting, 5000 shopmen of the Pennsylvania, Hocking Valley and Norfolk and Western railroads here tonight voted to return to work Monday morning.

Diagram Showing How Prices of the Various Cuts of Beef Have Risen in Ten Years



This diagram, with the printed prices, was published in December 1909, by a downtown cut-rate butcher, to show what he was asking for the various portions of a beef animal. The ringed figures show the prices at which he advertised the same portions yesterday. It will be noticed that these prices are much lower than those asked in the regular delivery stores and shops where most St. Louisans buy their meat.

SOLDIER RESCUED FROM ARMED COUNTY CROWD

Sheriff and Night Aid Fired Upon by Minor Officials While Speeding to Bellefontaine.

Sheriff Bopp of St. Louis County, received a telephone message at Clayton at 8 o'clock last night from Henry Hoch, a grocer, of Bellefontaine, 20 miles northwest of Clayton, that a mysterious soldier, who had been caught prowling about the village was being detained by a crowd of armed men. In company with Night Sheriff Conrey, Bopp started for Bellefontaine in an automobile.

Near Hog Hollow, about 12 miles from Clayton, while traveling at the rate of 55 miles an hour, the officers were pursued by two men on motorcycles, one of whome fired five shots at the automobile, two bullets striking the back seat. The automobile was stopped and the Sheriffs seized the man who had fired upon them. He identified himself as Deputy Constable E. P. Jackson of Bonhomme Township. The other cyclist said that he was A. W. Tompkins of 6153 Page avenue. They said they were looking for speeders. Sheriff Bopp pulled Jackson into the auto and took him along.

At Bellefontaine the Sheriffs found a young man in the uniform of a private surrounded by a group of excited men with revolvers and knives. They said that he had refused to give an account of himself.

He was handcuffed when he tried to resist the Sheriffs and was taken to Clayton. There he declined to answer questions, but on beieng pressed for his name mumbled "Kithcart." Asked where he lived, he said "Army."

A search of his clothing disclosed an envelope addressed to "Everett E. Kithcart, U. S. General Hospital No. 43, Hampton, Va." It bore the return address, "M. F. Kithcart, 2550 Summit avenue, Kansas City, Mo.," and contained a postcard which ran: "You will likely be coming home soon. We'll be glad to see you. Mother and Dad."

His pockets also contained a lot of torn scraps of papers, one of which bore the date, "March 6, 1893." The word "disabled" could be distinguishel on one of the bits. There was also a metal disc attached to a Masonic emblem. The disc was inscribed: "In case of accident notify Gate City Lodge, 522, A. F. and A. M., 901 Harrison, Kansas City, Mo."

Dr. J. E. Galvin of the County Health Commisisoner's staff examined the prisoner and diagnosed his case as a mental disorder.

When being led from the second floor of the courthouse to jail the prisoner again broke away from the Sheriffs and was recaptured just as he was about to dive over a railing to the first floor, 18 feet below.

His uniform bore no discharge or wound stripes, but he carried on his sleeve the insignia of the medical corps.

Jackson, who gave his address as 6103 Garfield avenue, which is in St. Louis, was placed under a $200 bond. Bopp said he would investigate to learn how Jackson happened to be serving under Constabtle Henry Dintelmann, who lives at Kirkwood. Tompkins was placed under bond as a witness.

4 MEN ARRESTED AFTER FIGHT IN OFFICE OF LABOR LEADER

Bricklayers' Inspector Says He Was Called to Union Headquarters and Attacked.

George A. Greeley, 46 years old, 4225 Evans avenue, former detective and for several years secretary of the Bricklayers, Stone and Marble Masons' International Union, and three others men were arrested at 4 p. m. yesterday when police were called to quell a disturbance in Greeley's office on the second floor of the Pontiac building Seventh and Market streets. Two men were injured in the fight. All four were charged with peace disturbance, and gave bonds.

One of the men injured was Leon Rogers, 37 years old, 5516 Wells avenue, a foreman and inspector of bricklayers. He was cut on the face and head, and asserted that the injuries were the result of an attack by Greeley and two of his friends, Arthur Deeken, a bricklayer, 1252 South Broadway, and Isaac Kelly, a stone mason, 4026 Palm street.

He declared that Greeley had sent for him to come to the union office, and when he arrived Greeley had accused him of keeping in his employ a man who was unfavorable to the union. He denied the accusation, and was attacked, he said.

Deeken exhibited a cut on the shoulder and on the face, and said he had been stabbed by Rogers. Rogers said Deeken received his injuries when a window in the office was broken during the fight.

The two injured men were taken to the dispensary and their injuries dressed. Greeley, Dekens and Keely were cross charged with Rogers in the disturbance charge.

HOG ISLAND SHIP YARD MAKES WORLD'S RECORD IN PRODUCTION

47 Steel Cargo Carriers Aggregating 367,775 Tons Were Launched During First Year.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—A world's record for ship producton was established at Hog Island the first year it was in operation, 47 steel cargo carriers, aggregating 367,775 dead-wenght tons, having been sent down the ways up to Aug. 5, its first launching anniversary. Thirty-six of these vessels, with a total deadweight tonnage of 281,700 tons, have been delivered to the Government and several others are about ready for delivery.

In making this announcement tonight the American International Ship Building Corporation said that the present contract for 122 vessels will be completed about September, 1920. The statement added:

"Since the Quistconek sailed from Norfolk on Jan. 2, 1919, with a cargo of coal, the Hog Island ships have covered 225,000 nautical miles and carried over 400,000 tons of cargo to practically every port of importance in the world. The vessels have functioned perfectly on their voyages and have firmly established the fabricated ship in the eyes of the American people and the peoples of the foreign countries."

STOCKYARDS STRIKE ENDS

Chicago Workers Vote to Resume Jobs Monday.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Striking stockyards workers, at a mass meeting today, decided to return to work Monday. Withdrawal of the militia from the yards yesterday and the Deputy Sheriffs today was satisfactory to the men. The stockyards were placed under guard of militia and police during the race riots last week, when numerous race clashes occurred in the enighborhood. Later special deputy sheriffs were added.

The return of negroes to work two days ago was followed by a strike of union workers. The union leaders, however, said the presence of armed guards was the cause of the strike.

Motor Cycle With Side Car Overturns

Jacob Folden, 38 years old, 1131 Talmage avenue, suffered serious injuries at 7:30 o'clock last night when a motor cycle and side car in which he was riding with his wife overturned at the Arsenal street entrance to Tower Grove Park. Folden turned into the park from Arsenal street and skidded. He suffered a fractured leg and lacerations of the scalp and was taken to the city hospital. Mrs. Folden was not injured.

PROFIT IN MAKING PAIR OF SHOES PUT AT 4.12 PER CENT

Head of International Company Says Product Going to Retailer for $8.50 Costs $8.15.

$5.95 OF AMOUNT IS FOR LEATHER

Figures Show Wearer How the Dollars He Now Pays for His Footwear Are Distributed.

Figures tending to support his statement that the manufacturer is not profiteering in shoes were given to the Post-Dispatch yesterday by Frank C. Rand, president of the $25,000,000 International Shoe Co.

As has been told, C. E. Williams, secretary of the Retail Shoe Dealers' Association, in a speech Thursday, declared that the retailers were not responsible, but that the tanner was pocketing the surplus profit, which had been made possible by the Government's failure to forbid the exportation of leather to the point of famishing the home market.

Rand, by his figures, showed that the International Shoe Co. had a production cost of $8.15 on a shoe that is sold to the retailer at $8.50. The figures are interesting in that they show the shoe wearer where the dollars he now pays for his shoes go.

Gives Table of Costs.

Following is the table of costs given by Rand:

Top (mat calf) 1 5-12 feet at $1.20 a foot	$1.70
Vamps (velour calf) 1 2-3 feet at $1.30	1.17
Trimmings	.28
Findings (thread, laces, etc.)	.38
Outsoles	1.05
Insoles, heels, counters	.75
Labor and Manufacturing cost	.88
Distribution cost	.94

On the basis of a selling price of $8.50, the manufacturer's profit, by the figures, is 4.12 per cent.

Rand's figures indicate that the cost of labor, though it has increased 109 per cent during the war, is a very small percentage of the cost of shoes, and that the greater part of shoe cost is in the leather itself. The total cost of materials in the $8.50 shoe is $6.33, of which $5.95 is for leather.

Differ in Quality.

Williams, in his talk, said that the cost of labor on a pair of woman's shoes was 58 cents and that labor could not be assigned as a cause for high prices. Rand, commenting on this, said that Williams was giving figures on a low grade of shoes and that the difference in his figures was due to the fact that they cover a high-grade shoe.

Rand also stated that in his opinion the retailer could not market the $8.50 shoe on which he gave costs at less than $11.50 or $12, depending on the location and character of his store and the consequent variance in his merchandising cost. He said that 20 per cent for selling cost was a low estimate for the average shoe store. Adding that 20 per cent, the cost of the shoe to the retailer becomes $10.20, from which a selling price of $11.50 to $12 was justified, in Rand's opinion.

CANCELS HIS HONEYMOON PLANS

St. Louisan, Married in Denver, Will Attend Labor Meeting at Capital.

An announcement in yesterday's news dispatches of the marriage in Denver of Edward J. Manion, of St. Louis, president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, and Miss Louise Srspan, of San Francisco, caused surprise among the frends of the bridegroom.

The marriage had been planned to take place last night and was to have been followed by a long honeymoon trip. After his departure from St. Louis, messages telling of dissatisfaction on the part of telegraphers in the East and Southeast were forwarded to him, and, in order to meet the situation, he advanced the date of his wedding to Friday and canceled the honeymoon arrangemeits. After the ceremony Manion and his bride departed for Washington that he might be on the ground to personally attend to the affairs of the order.

BELIEVES HIS DAUGHTER ELOPED

East St. Louisan Asks Detectives to Search for Myrtle A. Singleton.

In asking detectives to institute a search for his daughter, Myrtle A. Singleton, 15 years old, yesterday, Albert F. Singleton, 328 North Fifth street, East St. Louis, said he believed she had been induced to elope with a youth who recently inherited $2300 through the death of a relative.

He said the youth was missing from his usual haunts and he believed the couple had come to St. Louis and might seek a marriage license here. The girl disappeared Friday, he said. The youth lives in East St. Louis also.

During the first six months of 1919 the Post-Dispatch printed 39,820 Automobile "Wants"—12,777 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined.

SENATE OPINION STRONGLY BEHIND WILSON MESSAGE TO PUNISH PROFITEERS

Republicans and Democrats Alike Generally Indorse Sentiment Though G. O. P. Reads Into It a Coercive Peace Ratification Move.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Senator Lodge improved the opportunity afforded by the introduction of the President's message of the necessity for an early completion of peace by making a defense of the Senate against the charge of delay. He said:

"In regard to the artificial and extortionate prices for the necessaries of life, I think the President made some very good and practical suggestions, and I am sure that Congress will deal with them at once. All that he said in regard to the labor situation was of a general character, but I agree with the information conveyed by these general statements and trust they will be put into practice.

"The purpose of introducing the question of the treaty was obvious. We are at peace with Germany as a matter of fact. We are trading with Germany as a matter of fact. It is highly desirable that the treaty of peace with Germany should be ratified as soon as possible and that is the desire of the Senate without regard to party. The wrong done to China in the case of Shantung is all that would delay the treaty if the league of nations had not been fastened on it.

"It took the President seven months to make the treaty. It has been in possession of the Senate barely one month, and the Senate's responsibility and power are equal to those of the President. No other allied nation has yet ratified it except Great Britain, and it is perhaps not surprising that she ratified it quickly. It has not yet been acted on by the French Chamber and has not been taken up at all in the French Senate, and with the exception of Chile, I have heard of on other country which has yet acted upon it.

Has Met Every Day.

The committee has met every day, sat every morning, and sometimes in the afternoon also. They have also endeavored to secure information absolutely necessary for a proper consideration of the treaty. Consideration of the treaty will proceed more rapidly when the committee can secure the information necessary for dealing with it properly.

"There is no desire on the part of either the committee or the Senate for the slightest delay, and no suggestion has been made in the Senate that there has been any delay. No undue delay has been intended in the Senate by anyone and is not intended now. Some time has also been taken up dealing with the Colombian treaty at the special request of the administration."

Comment by others on the message was as follows:

Senator Chamberlain (Dem.), Oregon): There is no question but that legislation against profiteering and the enforcement of legislation now on the statute books will assist in relieving the situation with regard to soaring prices and the high cost of living; but as the President very forcefully suggests, peace must be established beyond peradventure before normal conditions can be restored and the cost of living stabilized.

Senator Nelson (Rep.), Minnesota: The President's address contained many glittering generalities, but most of his recommendations were good. I agree with much that he said and shall assist in putting some of his recommendations into law.

Senator Watson (Rep.), Indiana: I am in thorough accord with the last part of the President's message dealing with strikes and threats of strikes, and particularly on the railroad lines of the country. Unless there is an absolute necessity that can be met in no other way I should not approve his suggestion for extension of the food control act and for putting the business of the country under a licensing system.

Senator Fletcher (Dem.), Florida: The President's message will reassure the country and go far toward settling unrest. It will have a most salutary and steadying effect upon the people everywhere.

Senator Swanson (Dem.), Virginia: The President presented the conditions and needs of the present situation very clearly and effectively.

Says Wilson Has Power Enough.

Senator Gronna (Rep.), North Dakota, chairman Agricultural Committee: So far as I am concerned, the President has got all the power he will ever get from the Committee on Agriculture. I do not agree with him that additional legislation is necessary to reach the profiteer. He can be prosecuted under the Sherman anti-trust law as being guilty of restraint of trade. The President's argument that the peace treaty should be ratified I regard as a club to force favorable action by the Senate.

Senator Capper (Rep., Kan): I agree with the President that many commodities should be subjected to a Federal licensing system, but I think we should start first with the packers. The suggestion that the price paid by the retailer should be stamped on commodities for sale is a good one. It would prevent retailers selling shoes that they now pay $8 and $10 a pair for to the consumer at $25. The capital issues provision of the President's message is particularly good. There is no doubt that in recent months millions of dollars in Liberty Bonds have been traded for worthless oil and mining stocks, and in the end the public really pays for this loss.

Senator Reed (Dem., Mo.): I am in favor of the enforcement and, if necessary, the strengthening of laws to prevent combinations and forestall artificial control of prices. But I am opposed to putting the business of the country in leading strings, to be manipulated by a lot of jacks in Washington.

Senator Pomerene (Dem., O.): The most significant part of the message is the warning to that class of people who come here not to petition for legislation but to order it. The American people are going to run this country. And they will not submit to class dictation of any kind, from any source. Those who control the supplies and fix the prices to gratify their selfish designs must remember that the American people are very patient, but there is a point beyond which they will not tolerate continued abuses.

Senator Brandegee (Rep.) Conn.): The President has taken an unfair advantage of the high-cost-of-living issue and is endeavoring to use it to force through the league of nations. If the President is as anxious for peace as he professes, let him agree to a reservation by the Senate providing that the United States does not consider itself obligated to section 10 of the peace treaty, which is the league of nations' covenant. The Senate, in my opinion, is willing to co-operate with the President in every way effectively to reduce the cost of living, but it will not be stampeded into ratification of the peace treaty without drastic American reservations.

Senator Underwood (Dem.), Alabama: I have no doubt that the Congress and the people of the country will respond to the proposals made by the President, with beneficial results to all.

Objects to League.

Senator Harding (Rep.), Ohio: I was very much pleased with the speech in many ways. I think the connection of the league of nations with it was wholly unnecessary and very far-fetched.

Senator Robinson (Dem.), Arkansas: The President is right in invoking the authority of every executive department to minimize the evils of profiteering. In my judgment, the Congress will respond promptly to his request for legislation supplementing existing laws. His position with respect to strike conditions, I believe, is almost unanimously indorsed by Senators and Representatives.

Senator King (Dem.), Utah: It seems that Sovietism will not dominate in the United States. It was a great American massage.

Senator Hitchcock (Dem.), Nebraska: I believe it will be effective. Personally I was particularly interested in what he said about the necessity of ratifying the peace treaty before we can get down to settled economic conditions. I believe that it will have the effect of speeding up the ratification of the treaty.

Senator McCormick (Rep.), Illinois: Since conditions are so bad, why didn't the Attorneys-General get busy sooner? They have known that prices have been jumping since last January.

Senator Frelinghuysen (Rep.), New Jersey: I think there are certain suggestions that Congress can carry out. I do not believe the majority of the people desire a licensing system, although it may appear necessary in some instances. The suggestion of co-operation between the various elements of producers is good, but too much Government interference and terrorism at the present time may seriously affect the markets. If we can find the causes of profiteering they can be remedied without Government control.

Promises Wilson Support.

Senator Pittman (Dem.) Nevada: The messages renews confidence, dispels fear and appeals to the justice and patriotism of all Americans. He will get the support for which he appealed.

Senator Walsh (Dem.) Montana: It will undoubtedly have a steadying influence upon the country much needed at this time. It brought out with striking distinctness that authority in this country must go lamely until peace is proclaimed and normal conditions in Europe are restored that it may be in a situation to take the products of America.

Senator Thomas (Dem.) Colorado: The President's address was timely, temperate and appropriate. If all the people, merchants, manufacturers, wage earners, producers and consumers will heed his suggestions, keep their heads, co-operate in securing better and less turbulent conditions, suppress their passions and listen to reason we can and we will pass safely through the pending crisis.

Senator Williams (Dem.) Mississippi: The Lodges, Knoxes, et al., will say he is a mere "visionary" and "idealist" and "dreamer," and monopolistic and profiteering enemies will still denounce him as a "sentimentalist," but his sentiment is that of the ennobled part of humanity, and his dreams are of those "dreams which come true."

Senator Gerry (Dem.) Rhode Island: The President in his speech today went to the heart of our difficulties, and the remedies he proposed were so practical that they will appeal to all thoughtful citizens.

Calls Address Admirable.

Senator McKellar (Dem.) Tennessee: I think the President's address was admirable. If the Congress will proceed along the lines suggested by him, as I am sure it will, the problem of the high cost of living will soon be solved.

Senator Owen (Dem.) Oklahoma: The President's suggestions will prove of great value if Congress and the country will vigorously act along the lines suggested. We can and must solve this problem immediately to the extent possible.

Republicans of the House expressed disappointment at the President's message. All, with a few exceptions among the majority forces, promised immediate action when the executive departments made known their need.

Republican Leader Mondell in the House, however, characterized the President's address as a "confession" that the administration had failed to realize the seriousness of the situation and use its powers to cure it. Speaker Gillett declared he found little thoughtful suggestion in the address.

Representative Rodenberg (Rep.) Illinois, was perhaps most severe, declaring that "in his specious attempt to make it appear that additional legislation is necessary to enable him to act the President is employing a species of camouflage that is an insult to the intelligence of the country." He charged that the President today "reached the very apex of demagoguery," and that boiled down the President wanted increased appropriations for several of his superfluous commissions.

Representative Cowdy (Dem.) Maryland, said: "It ranks with his declaration of war speech, and is one of the greatest ever made."

Chairman Esch of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee said the President's references to threats were appropriate.

1600 FOOD INSPECTORS TO SEEK HIDDEN STORES

Chief of Police O'Brien Acts on Suggestion of Official of Department of Justice.

Food hoarders had best watch their step. Beginning today, there will be an official investigator in every precinct of the city, on the quest for hidden stores.

There will be 1600 of them altogether, for Chief O'Brien last night, in an order to the 15 police districts, enlisted every patrolman in the department to search for violations of the Food Control and Sherman acts.

He did this at the request of James J. McLaughlin, acting special officer in charge of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. Any violations discovered are to be reported to McLaughlin.

The policemen are to hail before justice any persons found destroying necessaries in order to raise prices, wasting foodstuffs in their production or distribution, monopolizing foods generally or locally, conspiring to restrict the supply and distribution of necessaries, or hoarding food, either for one's own use or for sale, beyond a reasonable time.

Search on in East St. Louis.

Federal, State and municipal inspectors are touring the wholesale and retail establishments, warehouses, vacant buildings and the railroad yards in East St. Louis in a search for food, clothing and other commodities which may be hoarded, and incidentally are obtaining information relative to violations of the Sherman anti-trust law.

United States District Attorney Burnside said last night that no warrants had been issued for any violation of the anti-trust or hoarding laws. He declined to state what the Federal inspectors had learned.

A number of complaints have been received by municipal and Federal inspectors of profiteering by merchants and others, and retail stores have been visited to ascertain at what prices goods are being sold.

Many persons have given the Post-Dispatch and the municipal and Federal inspectors the addresses of places where stores of canned goods, sugar and other commodities could be found, and which, it was believed, was being hoarded in the hope that higher prices could be obtained.

Twenty Sacks of Yellow Sugar Found

At one place an inspector found 200 sacks of yellow sugar which a packing firm said was being used in the curing of ham and bacon. At another place there was found 700 barrels of hams in the process of being pickled. A warehouse was found where about three carloads of canned goods—sauer kraut, beans, tomatoes, fruit, milk and salmon was stored. The packing company using the warehouse said it was a place which had been used for a long time to expedite shipping.

A building owned by the Cotton Compress Co., which, it was reported, was full of canned goods, was found to be filled with cotton. A packing company had a lease on the building and it was filled with canned goods prior to Aug. 1, when the lease expired.

Burnside asks that any person having information relative to hoarding or profiteering communicate with him.

2 BOYS ON COMMERCIAL TOUR

Lowell C. Browne and Scott Hardy, two members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Dallas, Tex., who are making a tour of the cities of the Middle West and North to study industrial conditions, will visit St. Louis next Thursday.

The two boys are winners of the "summer trip contest,, conducted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Dallas for members who showed the most interest in the workings of that body and the senior organization. During their stay in the city they will be entertained by the members of the local Junior Chamber of Commerce. The junior organization of Dallas was patterned after the local organization, which claims, according to J. Parker Bailey, secretary, to be the largest Junior Chamber of Commerce in the United States with a membership of 1200.

The boys will visit Tulsa, Ok., Kansas City, Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis.

MISSOURI WHEAT YIELD PLACED AT 56,936,250 BU.

Joint State and Federal Report for August Gives Maturing Corn Crop Estimate of 151,210,000 Bushels.

BOTH SHOW GAIN OVER LAST YEAR

Hay the Only Crop to Show Improvement During July—More Tractors Appear in Plowing for Fall Wheat.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 9.—The official crop report of Missouri, made public in detail today, shows a loss in the July estimates of the State's wheat yield of some 8,000,000 bushels and a loss from earlier estimates of more than 15,000,000 bushels. Much of the grain has been threshed, so the present estimates are based on actual returns. In spite of the losses these is a gain over the yield of last year of 4,099,250 bushels. The total yield is placed at 56,936,250 bushels. The total corn yield is placed at 151,210,000 bushels, an increase over last year of 17,350,000 bushels. The report, as jointly certified by the State's Board of Agriculture and the United States Government, follows:

"All Missouri crops, except hay, lost in prospect, and wheat production shrunk 7,881,500 bushels during July, according to the joint report of E. A. Logan and Jewell Mayes, of the United States Bureau of Cropj Estimates and the State Board of Agriculture. The State yield of wheat, indicated Aug. 1, is 56,936,250 bushels.

Corn 26.3 Bushels Per Acre.

"The August condition of corn is 74 per cent, indicating 26.3 bushels per acre, a total of 151,210,000 bushels; condition August, 1918, 72 per cent and 76 per cent for 10-year average; total yield 1918, 133,860,000 bushels.

"Cultivation of corn was neglected somewhat to harvest wheat. Excessive rains early in the season, followed by drouth of three to five weeks, has hurt the crop severely. No hot winds prevailed. The greatest damage has been on thin uplands and in the south central Ozarks, also a few counties north and west of St. Louis. Cinch bugs in Warren, Dade and other scattering points. Recent rains have relieved the drouth situation in the north and northeast, especially Livingston, Boone, Randolph and other central Missouri counties, together with a few south central ones. Fifteen to 20 per cent of the corn was planted late and drouth conditions on this portion are not so damaging. Central Missouri will raise much more corn than last year and for the State at large the crop is more promising than last August.

"Missouri wheat yield per acre is 13.5 bushels, totaling 56,936,250, against 52,873,000 bushels last year. The average yield in 1918 was 17.2 bushels and the 10-year average 13.7. The quality of the grain is 86 per cent, against 94 per cent last year and 89 for a 10-year average. Yields in most sections are under earlier expectations. The quality at first was very poor from excess moisture, but improved by dry weather. Threshing is held back by lack of cars and thresher equipment. Spring wheat very disappointing.

Oats yield 28 bushels per acre, against 29 last year and 26 for the 10-year average. Indicated yield, 39,684,960 bushels, against 44,196,000 in 1918. The quality is 88 per cent, the same as last year, and 85 per cent for the 10-year average. The crop was cut short in the North by hot weather, following excessive rains. About the usual portion of last year's crop is on farms, 3 per cent, or 1,325,880 bushels.

Hay Alone Is Better.

"Hay, the only crop in Missouri which shows a better condition than last month, is 93 per cent, indicating 1.27 tons per acre. The hay in the Middle Ozark sections is good. Crop was harvested under ideal conditions except clover. A good cloverseed acreage promised if favorable season follows. Spring seedings of clover and other grasses are fine. The acreage of timothy cut for seed will be greater than last year. Clover for hay, 1.3 tons per acre, and quality 91 per cent; alfalfa, 91 per cent; millet, 79 per cent; grain sorghum, 85 per cent; field peas, 80 per cent; soy beans, 85 per cent; pastures, 84 per cent; still much good grazing.

"Vegetables all hurt by drouth. Beans, 81 per cent; tomatoes, 81 per cent; cabbages, 75 per cent; onions, 88 per cent; potatoes, 80 per cent; early crop fair; sweet potatoes, 79 per cent—not badly damaged; tobacco, 85 per cent; flax, 87 per cent; watermelons, 70 per cent—poor in Mississippi, good in Dunklin; cantaloupes, 75 per cent; broom corn, 80 per cent; sorghum for syrup, 81 per cent; peanuts, 76 per cent.

"Fruit affected by drouth. Apples, 58 per cent; peaches, 47 per cent; grapes, 75 per cent; pears, 59 per cent; blackberries, production, 82 per cent; some lost for want of pickers.

"General crop conditions not as good as on July 1, but better than last August. Severe drouth followed by too much rain. Labor supply is not yet normal. Plowing for fall wheat progressing slowly, with more tractors in evidence. Water is scarce, but cattle are in fine condition."

ADVOCATES AMENDMENT TO PERMIT HIGHER COUNTY TAXES

Probate Judge Hodgdon Sends Out Letters Urging Circulation of Petitions Throughout State.

Circulation of petitions for an amendment to the Constitution of Missouri to permit counties to increase their rates of taxation is urged in a letter sent out to each county school superintendent of the State by Sam D. Hodgdon, Probate Judge of St. Louis County. A petition form is included in the letter and demands the submission of the amendment to the voters in 1920.

The amendment, to be kown as Section 11a, Article 10, "Home Rule in Taxation," provides that the annual rates for county, State, town and school purposes may be increased sufficiently to provide the necessary revenue on the condition that a majority of voters voting at an election, general or special, held to decide the question, vote for the increase. The new rate, it provides, shall be levied annually until it is changed again in the same manner.

Judge Hodgdon declares the amendment has the approval of the State School Superintendent, Samuel A. Baker. He urges the school superintendent to act as chairman of committees to be formed in each county and to assist in circulating the petitions. Judge Hodgdon declares, that the increased rate available under the amendment would enable each county to give every child a complete education and also to establish and maintain public buildings and construct permanent roads. Municipalities will be able to provide public conveniences now lacking, he says.

SALESMAN ASKS FOR POLICE PROTECTION

Arthur P. Wallace Says He Fears Violence From Frederick Fulton, an Escaped Convict.

Arthur P. Wallace, 510 West End place, a salesman for the Knight Motor Co., 3327 Locust street, appealed to Chief of Detectives Hannegan yesterday for protection, following threats, which, he said, had been made against him by Frederick Fulton, known also as "Fred Krenning," who escaped from the Jefferson City penitentiary Friday, while serving five years for burglary and auto theft.

Fulton, he said, had written letters to persons in St. Louis while he was in the penitentiary saying he intended to escape from prison, and that when he did he would "clean up" ever one who had testified against him or who was instrumental in sending him to prison.

Yesterday at noon, Wallace said, he received a telephone message from one of Fulton's relatives informing him that Fulton had arrived in St. Louis, and was preparing to carry out his threats of revenge.

Chief Hannegan immediately ordered a city-wide search for Fulton, sending detectives with photographs of him to his former haunts and to places where he might be in hiding.

Fulton, according to advices from Jefferson City, was working as an electrician in the prison when he escaped Friday.

Wallace, in his capacity as repretative of the motor company, was one of the men instrumental in sending Fulton to prison. On the night of Oct. 5, 1918, the garage of the company on Locust street was entered and a $1000 Empire automobile stolen.

Two weeks later Fulton was arrested at Jefferson avenue and Olive street while in the stolen auto. He subsequently confessed, police say, breaking into the garage with the aid of his wife. He said he climbed in a window while Mrs. Fulton acted at lookout. The wife was arrested later at their home, 3025 Lafayette avenue. She was discharged at her preliminary hearing, but Fulton went to trial and was given three years on the grand larceny charge and two years on the burglary count, in Judge Davis court. He went to the penitentiary Dec. 4, 1918.

Since he has been in the penitentiary, Wallace told detectives yesterday, Fulton has several times threatened to "get" all those who had a hand in sending him to prison. One of the letters he wrote was received last week by Clarence H. Feller, 5960 Garfield avenue, employd by the motor company.

In the letter, which was not shown to Wallace until yesterday, he said, Fulton told of his plans to escape, predicting he would be at liberty within a week, and said he would come "straight to St. Louis" and start after the person concerned in his case.

Fulton's parents, police were told, live at 6411 Mount avenue, St. Louis County.

During the first six months of 1919 the Post-Dispatch printed 8910 Horses and Vehicles "Wants"—3592 more than the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers combined.

SHEET MUSIC CLEW IN AUTO BELIEVED STOLEN

License in Name of Saloon Keeper Killed by Gangsters and Who Didn't Own a Car.

Some sheet music found under the seat of an automobile supposed to have been stolen, found in possession of a farmer near Dix, Ill., by Detective Fred Reinwald who returned from that place yesterday, may help solve the mystery surrounding the ownership of the car, police say.

The engine numbers of the car had been filed off. The license plate found on the car when it was taken charge of by Chief of Police Kaelin of Centralia, Ill., showed the license had been issued to Henry Krallmann, a saloon keeper of Marcus and McCaffrey place, who was killed by two of four men in an automobile party two weeks ago, supposedly after Krallmann had refused to accede to their demands to throw up his hands when they tried to rob him.

The police department has no record of any automobile or license plate belonging to Krallmann. His relatives could throw no light on the mystery. They said Krallman did not own an automobile when he was killed.

Detective Reinwald went to Dix early last week after a letter from Chief Kaelin had given the license number and had told of the engine numbers being obliterated.

The farmer who had the car told of buying it from a man who claimed to have driven it from St. Louis. Reinwald was unable to find any marks by which he might trace the ownership, but did find some sheet music which the farmer said he had discovered under the front seat cushion.

The owner of the car, police believe, was on his way home with the music when the car was taken.

HAND GRENADES FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN COMING THIS WEEK

Will Be Distributed by Banks and Trust Companies to Buyers of "Baby Bonds."

A consignment of two carloads of hand grenades made for the use of the American boys who went over to fight the Kaiser's army will reach St. Louis this week, billed to the Eighth Federal Reserve Bank District by the War Savings organization at Washington. The grenades have been converted into savings banks and will be distributed to school children through the medium of the banks to encourage thrift.

Banks and trust companies participating in the plan will see that each boy and girl who buys a $5 certificate, or "baby bond," as it is better known, will receive the war souvenir.

At the time the armistice was signed there were fully 15,000,000 of these grenades in the factories and arsenals in the United States.

150 TRUCKS FOR TRIP TO STATE FAIR SOUGHT

St. Louis Train Will Be Feature of "Good Roads and Motor Truck Day."

Acting Governor Wallace Crossley gave the St. Louis Motor Truck Expedition a boost yesterday in a statement he issued concerning "Good Roads and Motor Truck Day" at the Missouri State Fair in Sedalia, Aug. 15.

"If we had hard roads all over Missouri there would be no terror in the thought of railroad traffic being suspended," said acting Governor Crossley, "because the motor truck would serve every essential purpose in the way of carrying supplies."

"The people of this State, especially those living along the highways and in the communities through which the motor trucks will pass on their way to and from the State Fair at Sedalia this week ought to manifest a special interest and enthusiasm in the tour which is being conducted by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and the Truck Dealers' Association, because the tour will bring to the public mind the wonderful possibilities of good roads and the great advantages of a truck transportation system. I am informed that the great procession of motor trucks will leave St. Louis over the Southern Highway, Wednesday, Aug. 13, and that Friday, Aug. 15, is designated by State fair officials as 'Good Roads and Motor Truck Day.'

Use No Longer an Experiment.

"At that time many thousands of Missourians will be given an opportunity to inspect the trucks and to hear of their remarkable success and possibilities in transportation.

"The use of the motor truck in solving the question of rapid transit on short hauls is no longer an experiment, and we shall soon see the truck serving the farmer and the business interests of the small town just as it is now indispensable in the larger cities.

"With good roads and motor trucks we shall not have to depend solely upon the railroads and, when transportation tie-ups come, as is now threatened, supplies can go from country to city, or from city to country. It's a great movement, a promise of tremendous advancement and I am glad our State fair has given the deserved recognition to an industry which is building for progress and prospertiy."

Dealers Pledge Support.

At a meeting at the American Annex Friday night, C. E. Lightfoot, chairman of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, was assured unanimous support of those dealers present that would exert every effort to make this expedition even more successful than the first, which was held from St. Louis in June and was the first of its kind conducted on such a broad scale through the rural communities.

Because the time was short and some of the dealers have had trucks held up in shipment which they had contemplated having available for the tour, they were in a quandary for several days as to how they could make an entry. Before the close of the meeting, however, every dealer avowed that if necessary he would take the trucks he was using for showroom purposes or borrow the truck of one of their users, if need be, to assure being represented. It so happens that there is a scarcity of trucks among St. Louis dealers at this time, due to the demand on one side and tieup of freight on the other.

The Committtee on Arrangements of the dealers' association is composed of T. C. Brandle of Traffic Motor Truck Corporation, L. H. Amrine of Scudder Motor Truck Co., J. T. Rumble of Dorris Motor Car Co., and C. A. Bothell of Packard Motor Car Co. They are in charge of recruiting entrants from among the automobile trade.

Baer Explains Commercial Value.

Carl J. Baer, manager of the Production Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce addressed the truck dealers and other representatives of the automobile trade at the meeting, of whom there were more than 50, and explained the commercial value of such an expedition to St. Louis.

The Chamber of Commerce has sent 500 letters to users of motor trucks in the city, asking them to be represented in the tour by entering a service truck. Baer said the personnel of his department will be kept busy from now until the start of the expedition in soliciting further entries. Entries will close at 6 p. m. Tuesday, when all trucks are to be assembled on the circus lot at Sarah street and West Pine boulevard, preparatory to the departure at 5 a. m. Wednesday.

Francis E. Turin, publicity director of the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, headed by George Giesenber, are assisting in recruiting trucks from commercial houses. Aside from the educational advantages of the expedition in furthering good road development and motor transportation it is the belief of the Chamber of Commerce that the advertising a business house would derive by sending a truck with the firm name printed on the body and loaded with its merchandise would more than pay for the expense.

A fee of $20 is charged each entrant to cover the expense of tolls, ferry, posters and service of guide with motor cycle.

Hope to Get 150 Entrants.

It is the desire of the Chamber of Commerce and the truck dealers to have as many as 150 entrants if possible. Up to last night there were less than a third of that number already registered, with many prospects unheard from. Kansas City is reported as having 40 trucks in an expedition that will be sent from there to meet the one from St. Louis.

Robert E. Lee of the Chamber of Commerce and secretary of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, will direct the expedition to Sedalia.

The route committee which is composed of Roy S. Rauschkolb, manager of the St. Louis "Ship-by-Truck" Bureau; W. L. Patterson of the St. Louis Motor Service Co., and A. S. Smith yesterday sent telegrams which were followed by letters to the Mayors and commercial organizations of towns along the route announcing the time at which the expedition will arrive and arranging for meals and quarters.

Aside from the stops to be made as specified in the itinerary, brief stops will be made at other towns, according to Commander Lee.

7000 PERSONS SEE TRACTORS PERFORM NORTH OF KIRKWOOD

Demonstrations of various types of farm tractors were held Friday and yesterday at Manchester and Denny roads in St. Louis County, north of Kirkwood. About 2000 people attended Friday and more than 5000 yesterday.

The machine making the best record for minimum consumption of oil plowed one and one-half acres on three gallons. Between three and four gallons of oil were consumed by the oil-burners in a three-hour plowing period, while the gasoline burning machines consumed from four to seven gallons for a similar period. Time required to plow an acre varied from one to three hours, depending on the size of the tractor.

A lime pulverising demonstration scheduled did not take place because the machine could not be brought from another demonstration in time.

MISSOURI STATE FAIR OPENS AT SEDALIA

First Day's Attendance Exceeds Expectations—Auto Races on Program Tomorrow.

SEDALIA, Mo., Aug. 9.—Missouri's nineteenth annual State fair, the first of the big Midwest fairs and expositions this year, opened today with an exceptionally large and varied display of exhibits in all departments, which was increased by the arrival of many carloads of livestock and other shipments tonight.

The attendance exceeded expectations, and although the amusement features and special attractions do not start until Monday, the crowds at the grounds enjoyed viewing the magnificent showing of Missouri's products.

Monday all school children of the State under 12 years old will be admitted free. It is children's day, Governor's day and automobile day. The first racing events will be held Monday, when noted dirt track drivers will compete for honors and an airplane will perform stunts. Lieutenant-Governor Wallace Crossley, in an airplane piloted by Lieut. Dudley Steele is scheduled to fly from the State Capital at Jefferson City to the fairgrounds to make an address.

Banquet for Editors.

Missouri editors will be entertained by the fair directorate at a banquet Monday night, at which addresses will be made by newspaper men from various parts of the State. Sunday afternoon Thavius Exposition Band and grand opera singers will appear in a sacred concert.

Each night during the coming week horse shows will be held, followed by a pyrotechnical spectacle, the "Battle of St. Mihiel."

The Government has an exhibit of tanks, airplanes, machine guns, siege guns, anti-aircraft guns, torpedoes, grenades and mines, including numerous trophies captured from the enemy.

The premiums and purses offered this year total $44,530, the largest ever offered. The horse racing will start Tuesday.

Wednesday Is St. Louis Day.

Tuesday is Sedalia day. Business practically will be suspended by stores, factories and other industries.

Wednesday is St. Louis day and a large delegation is expected from that city and from the Eastern part of the State. A caravan of motor trucks come to Sedalia from St. Louis bringing a part of the St. Louis delegation.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD

A PREDICTION

No feeling of satisfaction comes to us from saying: "I told you so." All of our predictions, made early in the year, with reference to deliveries and price of Cadillac cars, have already proven themselves to have been well founded. Our chief regret comes from the fact that so many of our friends have been unable to secure Cadillac cars when they wanted them.

We do not expect to be able to supply the demand for Cadillac cars for many months to come. We sincerely trust that those who expect to become a part of the large Cadillac family in this territory will anticipate their car requirements sufficiently in advance so that deliveries can be made by the time the cars are needed. The only method we can follow in allotting the few cars we receive is to follow the exact rotation of orders in our files.

ARCHDUKE JOSEPH REGENT OF HUNGARY

Budapest Dispatch to Copenhagen Says New Ministry Acts for 'One Firm Center in Country.'

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 9.—A dispatch from Budapest says that the new ministry at its first meeting yesterday resolved to recognize Archduke Joseph as Regent until a national assembly is elected "so that in these unsettled times there may be one firm center in the country."

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Aug. 9.—A state of siege has been proclaimed in Budapest, according to advices received here.

It is reported that in view of pogroms which had been threatened in Hungary, menacing the Jews, the commander of the Rumanian troops has issued an order that any crime against Jews will be punished immediately by death.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—The Rumanian army officials of Budapest have forbidden the newspapers to print the note of Premier Clemenceau announcing the creation of a mission of allied generals to go to Budapest in an attempt to adjust the Hungarian situation and take charge of the armistice question, according to reports reaching here.

An English and an Italian aviator learning of this left Vienna and flew over Budapest, dropping thousands of placards bearing Premier Clemenceau's message. The Rumanians then prohibited telegraph service between Budapest and Vienna for 12 hours.

The Hungarian proletariat and Bourgeoisie have expressed fears that a monarchy is coming in Hungary, while the adherents of the Szegedin Government and Royalists are openly championing the monarchistic ideal.

Airplanes last night dropped placards over Budapest, proclaiming "King Joseph." Some quarters credit him with the ambition to become king, but say that he wants, "for family reasons and piety, to be compelled."

Members of New Government Under Archduke Joseph.

BERLIN, Aug. 9.—A description of members of the new Government of Archduke Joseph as received here today says that Col. Tanezos, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, held a political military position in Bulgaria during the war and that he left Bulgaria shortly before the Bulgarian request for an armistice in September, 1918.

Prof. Jacob Bleyer, Minister of Nationalities, is described as the chief protagonist in Hungary for autonomy of foreigners under Hungarian sovereignty and is a leader of the clerical anti-semitic party. The remainder of the Cabinet of Archduke Joseph is given as follows:

Minister of the Interior, Adolf Samassa; education, Dr. Alexander Inure; War, Gen. Franz Schnitzer; finance, Dr. Johan Gruenn; hygiene, Dr. A. Sillery; justice, Dr. Bela Szalry, and agriculture, Dr. Roland Gyoery.

A transition Government, with representatives of the Bourgeoisie, peasants and workmen, will be formed shortly, it is understood. At the request of the Budapest officials Archduke Joseph has created a volunteer force of 8000 men to keep order in the capital.

The Rumanians are reported to be guilty of further acts of violence in Budapest. Gen. Mardarescu, head of the Rumanian occupying forces and his troops, it has been announced, will retire from the city within a few days. Vienna advices say it is understood the action of the entente in creating a military commission of four generals to supervise the situation in Budapest has had a depressing effect upon the Rumanians.

"Can't Sign Austrian Treaty With Minister's Protection."

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 9.—"We are at a loss to understand why the allies and the Americans above all should criticize Rumania for its action in defeating the Bolshevik in Hungary," said Nicholas Misu of the Rumanian peace delegation today.

"We feel that we have done the peace conference and the entire world a service by giving the Hungarians an opportunity to set up a representative government. Furthermore, we were forced to march against Budapest in self-defense. Hungary attacked us and the Bolsheviki threatened to overwhelm us from two sides."

"We shall move our troops from Budapest when the Hungarians have been thoroughly disarmed and no longer threaten our very existence. We have never left the peace conference and shall obey its orders. But we cannot sign the Austrian treaty if it contains the provisions for the protection of minorities.

"We favored a clause proposed for the league of nations which would have guaranteed the rights of all persons, regardless of race or religion and believe that such action should be taken by all the nations acting together and imposed upon on alike rather than upon a few small powers by the great powers."

Rumania will be able to export 200,000,000 franc's worth of grain this year and also large quantities of oil, M. Misu said.

Ansell Made War Veteran Official.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Lieutenant-Colonel Tim Ansell, formerly acting Judge Advocate in the United States Army, has been appointed junior vice commander of the United American War Veterans and chairman of the organization's council of administration, it was announced here today Col. Ansell, who was the central figure in the army court-martial controversy, will devote a part of his time to defense of accused soldiers, it was said.

Passing of "The Mosque" From C. I. Filley's Ownership Recalls Shrine's Political Glory

THREE PRESIDENTS WERE GUESTS THERE

Nearly All the Leaders of the Republican Party Were Entered There During the Boss' 20 Years' Reign.

The "Mosque" as It Is Today.

WHEN 2700 Lawton avenue was sold at a trustee's auction at the east door of the courthouse last Monday, it marked the passing of the ownership of one of the most interesting political landmarks in St. Louis from the man who for many years so completely dominated the Republican party of Missouri that he was its boss in all that the word signified. Known as "The Mosque," it was pointed out to visitors as one of the show places of the city, not because of its architecture and its grounds, for the building is quite small and simple, with only the usual small residence yardage about it, but because of the things that went on in a political way there and the distinguished political leaders who had been the guests of its owner, Chauncey I. Filley.

Probably no private home in the city or elsewhere in the State has ever entertained so many distinguished guests as this same "mosque" so lightly disposed of at this sale, which Filley himself has characterized as "a friendly transaction."

Though the neighborhood has fallen far to the rear in the growth of the city, and has become the center of a negro district, the "mosque" in its day was in the heart of the best residence quarter, and Filley's neighbors were among the most prominent persons of the city.

The home at 2700 Chestnut—that was the name before the colored invasion—entertained at different times three men who attained the highest office within the gift of American voters, besides many of the greatest leaders in the Republican party of the nation. The three Presidents were Grant, Harrison and McKinley and all three were friends of the chieftain who presided over the "mosque."

Grant visited Filley sometime after the completion of his second term in the White House and was entertained at a dinner there where there were a number of distinguished guests. Harrison and McKinley were visitors there before they attained the presidency.

Party Leaders Confer.

Among the great party leaders of the country who conferred at times with its active occupant were such men as James G. Blaine, who just missed the presidency in 1884; Oliver P. Morton, Don Cameron, John A. Logan, who ran for Vice President on the same ticket with Blaine in 1884; Senator John M. Thurston of Nebraska, Senator J. J. Ingalls of Kansas, one of the most eloquent of the men who sat in the United States Senate; Levi P. Morton, who was Vice President during the term of Gen. Harrison; Gen. Powell Clayton of Arkansas and many other of the foremost men, who controlled the affairs of the Republican party during the years that Boss Filley sat in the National Committee as the member from Missouri.

There were leaders from the State and city there very frequently, as the great caliph who sat in the "mosque" believed very firmly in the doctrine that "the mountain should come to Mahomet" rather than Mahomet should go to the mountain. Hence when there was anything big on the schedule the "sage of Beaumont street" looked for the faithful and the pilgrimages followed as a matter of course, since the system was understood.

It was only on extraordinary occasions that Filley went out looking for his followers, and those were in the days of savage factional fights, when his enemies were seeking to dethrone him from his seat of power.

Even though the "mosque" was from a political point of view one of the most revered temples and its keeper well-nigh infallible, ambitious leaders came along from time to time, and sought to measure lances with the picturesque leader who always preached "harmony" and "regularity." It was in the days of sharp factionalism, and these seasons were not infrequent, that Filley was loudest in his appeals for "harmony."

Complain of Dictatorship.

At such times, it was quite common for those who wanted a change in leadership to declare petulantly that the man of the "mosque" could recognize no brand of harmony that did not continue Filley as the supreme overlord of the entire Republican organization. But all this made little difference to Filley. He had trusted lieutenants who could scent a cabal at very long range, and the movement would hardly get started before it would be checked.

A conference would follow, and if the attack was developing out in the State, there would be a distinguished gathering of Federal officials, Postmasters and others of weight and influence at the "harmony" headquarters at 2700, and the schism that was in the air would soon become but a memory. The "big stick" as a remedy for political insubordination was in common use in Missouri politics, long before Col. Theodore Roosevelt was old enough to vote.

The home on Chestnut street was built in 1878, and was at that time considered amply large. The veteran of many political brushes was then in the National Committee, and one of the most active of its executive organization. Hayes was then President, and as both United States Senators and all but one or two of the Congressmen from the State were Democrats, the Federal plums were in the hands of Boss Filey, who was running all the organizations in State and city; hence his will was the last word in all matters affecting patronage and its judicious distribution. Small wonder then that the "mosque" at once became a much sought place. There were no children in the Filley home, and while the head of the family gave all of his time to politics, Mrs. Filley was always a gracious hostess, and found much time for social, literary and charitable activities. Politics engaged only her passing interest as in her time women had not attained the vote on the scale they enjoy at present.

Six Days a Week.

Politics was the life work of this rugged leader, and he was on the job late and early, and all days save Sunday. That was the one day that even the great caliph of the "mosque" had to declare an armistice, as that was Mrs. Filley's day, and during her entire life that was the rule at 2700 Chestnut street. Filley took possession of his new home in the fall of 1878, and the first guest he entertained was the Rev. Dr. Montgomery Schuyler, then rector, and subsequently Dean of Christ Church Cathedral. It has often been told that Dr. Schuyler blessed the home on that occasion, even though it was soon to be known as the "mosque," a name that has clung to it ever since.

No political Warwick that ever developed with the West has spoken with more decisive authority than did Chauncey Ives Filley from 1876 to 1896, when he was deposed from the National Committee and the control of the State organization by Richard C. Kerens. All great leaders fall in time, if they remain long enough in the game of politics, and the "Sage of Beaumont Street," as he was often called, was no exception to the rule. Kerens built up a mighty machine, and having millions at his beck and call, he stepped in following the nomination of McKinley in this city in 1896, and wrested from Filley the Missouri seat in the National Committee. It was then that the "Mosque" began to lose its magnetism, and the pilgrimages of the faithful became fewer and fewer, until they ceased entirely. It was no longer the Mecca to those who sought public office or the rewards that go with party fealty, and those who knew the place as a shrine, effaced it from thier visiting lists, and followed the new Caliph of Republicanism, who made it a point to maintain bigger and more convenient quarters.

Soon Became "De Ole Man."

It was only a matter of a few years following the accession of the Kerens faction that the resultant hegira had taken all of the erstwhile followers of the Beaumont street sage into the new camp; and those who used to speak of Filley in the same reverent tones that the Musselman spoke of Mahomet, got to calling him "de ole man." In 1898, just two years following the upset at the McKinley convention. Filley delivered his swan song before the State convention in the old Exposition Music Hall which gave way later to make room for the Public Library. On that occasion, Filley for the first time in his life prepared a speech and read it to the delegates, explaining his reasons for asking that he be privileged to retire from further leadership in the State and city counsels. Since then he has been leading a retired life, taking only an ordinary interest in matters political.

He has collected one of the largest political libraries in the country, filling most of the rooms in his present home at 4109 Westminster place, and this he expects to leave to the Missouri Historical Society. He has resided here since he took leave of the "mosque," some 10 years ago.

On the 17th of next October the man who made the "mosque" what it was will celebrate his ninetieth birthday, and, as is his custom, will receive many of the older friends, who, unlike the political fair-weather brand, did not quite forget him when he lost the caliphate and koran of party leadership. They still remember the sage of other days, and they delight in his reminiscences covering the political history of the State and city for a period of more than 60 years. Though rich in years, he is in very good health, and preserves his faculties well.

His memory is as keen as ever, and he spends his days working in his den surrounded by great stacks of papers and scrap books covering all the important happenings in Missouri since he came here a young man from his birthplace near Troy, New York, some 70 years ago.

Has Historic Old Caligraph.

When Filley left the "mosque" about 10 years ago to take up his home on Westminster, he took with him as one of his treasured souvenirs an old caligraph, which was one of the first used in this city. He always wrote his platforms, letters, campaign literature and other impressions on the typewriter, and in busy times the click of the keys could be heard far into the night. He still uses the machine, but has one of more modern manufacture. As a boy back in New York, he wrote a perfect hand, and despite his 90 years, he is still able to turn out a letter that might pass as a copper-plate engraving.

Conversing with a Post-Dispatch reporter on the sale of the "mosque," the former boss showed a disposition to say little about the transaction, beyond the simple remark that it was a friendly proceeding. He indicated no regret that this historic old home had passed from his possession.

"I am comfortably situated where I am now," he remarked, "and my wants are not many. I am getting up in years, I guess, but I am feeling much better than a great many people who are nowhere near my age. I have a bunion on one of my feet which keeps me from putting on my shoes, but, otherwise, I never felt better, at anytime. I keep busy all the time, read all the newspapers and have enough work in my den to keep employed all day and even late into the night. I believe I can say that I have had a pretty enjoyable life, and worry never finds me at home."

How Filley Home Was Named "The Mosque"

WHEN Boss Filley was at the height of his power and Republican leaders throughout the State made regular pilgrimages to his home for counsel and guidance, a political writer on the staff of the Post-Dispatch referred to the place as "the mosque" in an article likening this Pooh Bah of Republicanism to Mahomet. The designation met with much popular approval and was used thereafter by both the friends and enemies of the grizzled veteran, who originated the slogan, "Stand up for Missouri" and whose pronunciamentos on "harmony" and "regularity" were issued daily. Filley took no exception to the label thus placed on his combination home and workshop.

MARINE DIES WHO WAS FOUND IN ALLEY AFTER $95 TAXI RIDE

Daniel Charles Conyer of Dallas, Tex., a United States marine, who served in Hayti, according to a service card found in his pockets was discovered unconscious and with his skull and both legs fractured in an alley in the rear of the Stratford Hotel, Eighth and Pine streets, at 4 a. m. yesterday, following a series of taxicab rides with women, beginning Wednesday and continued through Friday night. He died at 4:30 p. m. at the City Hospital.

Investigation showed that Conyer, who was on a furlough, registered at the hotel Wednesday and placed $400 with the clerk for safe keeping. Wednesday night he drew out $200. Thursday he drew $100 and yesterday he drew all of the remainder except $5.70. He spent the money on taxi parties.

O. H. Cuthbert, taxicab chauffeur, told the police that at 4 a. m. he told Conyer his taxi bill was $30 and Conyer asked one of the women if she would lend him the money. She refused and Conyer ordered the chauffeur to drive to the hotel and went inside. His room was at the other end of the building from where he was found unconscious. At a window about a foot from the fire escape the police found a screen dislodged. This led them to believe Conyer fell while trying to reach the fire escape.

CANDIDATES UNEASY OVER LEAGUE SITUATION

Cowgill Said to Be Willing to Run for Governor if Preferential Convention Is Held.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 9.—Prospective Democratic candidates are said to be viewing with uneasiness the activity of the pro-league faction in the State organization.

Whether Senator Reed and the other anti-league Democrats are invited at the meeting Monday by the State committee to leave the party, the covenant probably will be an issue in the next Democratic primary.

In calling the meeting Monday, it is reported the Neale forces discussed the advisability of holding a preferential party convention to select candidates for State offices. The excuse for that would be to save the candidates the expense of a primary campaign. If the Neale forces win the fight in St. Louis, Monday, Neale would be in a position to say later that only those who stood behind him in his fight to sustain the Wilson policies would be acceptable as candidates. The result would be that the State chairman might be able to put through a slate, eliminating others.

Inquiry may be made at the State committee meeting concerning the events leading up to the call for the committee gathering. The day that Neale issued the call he had a conference, it is said, with Adolph Mussur of Holden, . L. Shepherd, secretary of the committee; Frank Armstrong, assistant secretary, and Mayor Cowgill, and league supporter. At that meeting it is said a suggestion was made that Cowgill run for governor. The Mayor is reported to have stated he might make the race if a preferential convention was held.

The conferences are said to have discussed the advisability of calling a state committee meeting to take a decided stand in favor of the league covenant. That would force the anti-league faction to face about, or get out of the party, it was believed, and thereby pave the way for a harmonious preferential convention. A dinner is said to have been held that night at Hotel Baltimore. Those attending were Neale, Cowgill, Musser, Col. E. M. Harber and other lesser lights in the party, the story goes. The call for the St. Louis meeting was agreed on there, it is said.

THEATER MUSICIANS' STRIKE IN NEW YORK NOW FORECAST

Stage Hands, Too, It Is Predicted, Will Go Out in Sympathy With Actors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Ten New York theaters were "dark" tonight at the end of the third day of the actors' strike. The Globe, where "She's a Good Fellow" is billed, was added.

Members of the Actors' Equity Association expressed confidence that they would win the written equity contracts embodying the demands for which they went on strike. They professed not to be disheartened by the fact that, following the resignation last night of E. H. Sothern, there were received at the equity headquarters the resignations of William Collier, Holbrook Blinn and Allen Rinehart, the last two co-stars in the new production at the Selwyn Theater, "The Challenge." In tendering his resignation Collier said he was "very much averse to the action of the Actors' Equity Association in closing up theaters by ordering a so-called strike."

From the Producing Managers' Association tonight also came expressions of confidence. The managers' meeting today adopted a resolution offering financial aid to all "loyal" actors forced out of work by the strike. George M. Cohan, who has been forced to take a part in his production, "The Royal Vagabond," tonight was host at dinner to stage hands, musicians, chorus and principals who had stood by him in the strike.

A sympathetic strike on Monday of theater musicians and stage hands in support of striking members of the Actors' Equity Association, was forecast in a statement issued at the "Equity" headquarters tonight.

Notices were sent today by the vaudeville committee of the American Artist' and Actors Association to members of the association asking them not to appear in houses where a strike had been declared.

Grant Stewart, secretary of the Actors' Equity Association, announced that he had received telegrams from the actors in Chicago and those employed in the motion picture industry in California pledging their support in the fight against the producing managers. The message from Chicago said the members of the organization there were awaiting orders.

He was a charter member of the Bank Clerks' Association of Missouri, having joined that organization 42 years ago. His wife, Mrs. Annie Fostor Hoock, died four years ago. He is survived by two sons, H. Jesse and Emmett H. Hoock, and a daughter, Olivia Z. Hoock.

The funeral will be at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow, from the New Cathedral, Newstead avenue and Lindell boulevard. Interment will be in Calvary.

ROW ON COMPENSATION ACT VOTE IS RENEWED

State Federation of Labor Contends Names Can Still Be Withdrawn From Petition.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 9.—A. S. Phillips of St. Louis, attorney for the State Federation of Labor, and others who have been here since the referendum petitions were submitted to the Secretary of State last Monday for a vote of the people on the Workmen's Compensation Act, have not only sought to obtain an injunction in the Cole County Circuit Court to prevent Secretary of State Sullivan from officially holding that the petitions are sufficient, but they are now contending that there is yet ample time for persons who signed the petitions to withdraw their names. The various legal angles suggested by these attorneys are somewhat muddling to the lay voters.

The petition for an injunction makes many charges against opponents of the measure, among others that a great many hundreds of voters in the various congressional districts where the petitions were circulated now want to withdraw their names. It is also charged that the petitions contain a great many fictitious names, duplicate names, fraudulent names, that misrepresentations were used in securing signatures.

Names Are Not Given.

None of the names of voters which, it is claimed, were obtained under false pretense or other means not sanctioned by law is given. Presumably this exhibit will be a part of the proceedings later, for a hearing on the application has been set for Aug. 18.

As matters stand the Secretary of State has held that the time for filing petitions and withdrawals from petitions expired the evening of Aug. 7, and he will not consider either in the future. He also held that in the case of withdrawals the parties would either have to appear before him personally or have their withdrawals by mail sworn to before some official authorized to administer oaths.

At the time the secretary fixed the limit on petitions and withdrawals, less than 200 voters who said they had signed the original petitions had notified him of their desire to withdraw.

The petitions filed by Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council of St. Louis and others, asking for a vote on the workmen's compensation law contained more than 31,000 names of men stated to be legal voters.

12,000 More Than Required.

On this representation, added to the number of congressional districts represented by the petitions, there were about 12,000 more signatures than the law requires.

The question of extending the time for the withdrawals until the courts have threshed out the controversy, is a new one. In fact, since the initiative and referendum provision of the constitution was adopted, there has never been a contest over petitions for either the initiative or referendum. It is expected that the present litigation will reach the Supreme Court, where ruling need not be expected before about the close of the year.

COUPLE WHO OBSERVED FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

MR and MRS. WILLIAM HEINRICH

Mr. and Mrs. William Heinrich, 1319 Monroe street, celebrated their golden anniversary last Friday. They were married in Pittsburg in 1869, and came to St. Louis in 1874. Since then they have lived here continuously. They are the parents of 11 children, seven of whom are living, and have 19 grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Heinrich were both born in Germany, he in 1847 and she in 1851. Her maiden name was Margaret Glasser. In 1859 his parents came to Virginia and he served in the Confederate army at Richmond in 1864. After the war they moved to Pittsburg. Mrs. Heinrich's parents moved to Pittsburg from Germany while she was still an infant.

MECHANIC OFFERS NEWLY PATENTED FARE BOX TO U. R.

E. W. McPheeters Says Invention Can't Be Fooled by "Doctored" Coins.

Edwin W. McPheeters, a mechanic living at 913 Chouteau avenue, has patented a cash fare-box, which he has offered to Receiver Wells of the bankrupt United Railways Co., with the assurance that it will stand any test in the maintenance of its mechanical integrity, no matter how many flattened, sweated or otherwise "doctored" coins are passed through its slides and cones. From the outside it looks like the other boxes seen on the pay-as-you-enter street cars, but on the inside there is a radical difference, which the inventor promises will faithfully record every fare.

The McPheeters machine registers pennies and dimes alike and there is an equalizing system, which he claims will work out with precision no matter how many fares are deposited. He also provides a penalty for any street car employe who would shave down a nickel so as to make it register in the penny class, as the machinery is so adjusted that it would in this case, register as a dime. The revolving cones are so arranged that the fares are registered by numbers. For a six-cent fare the nickel registers one while the penny registers two, thus making three on the totalizing apparatus. If the fare is seven cents there will be five in the total and if the rate is advanced to eight cents as it is in Kansas City, the totalizer will record seven numbers.

The invention has not been acted upon by the U. R.

COUNTY ROAD TO BE EXTENDED

Circuit Court Gives Permission to Memorial Park Association.

Permission to extend the Lucas and Hunt road north from its present termination at Natural Bridge road to Melrose road, where the Memorial Park Cemetery is located, was granted to the Memorial Park Association yesterday by the Circuit Court at Clayton. The association offered to continue the road at its own expense. The construction will cost approximately $16,000.

James T. McDermott, president of the association which controls the cemetery, said that Receiver Wells of the United Railways has under consideration an offer from the association to construct, at the association's expense, an extension to the St. Peters' line, which runs north on the Lucas and Hunt road from the St. Charles road to the Natural Bridge road. The extension would run to Memorial Park Cemetery, McDermott said, and would cost about $10,000.

MILK PRODUCERS' HEAD ASKED TO HEARING MONDAY

FEDERAL AGENTS SEEK EVIDENCE

Copy of By-Laws Obtained by Post-Dispatch in 1917 Told of Board to Establish Prices.

A questionnaire calling for information dealing exhaustively with the cost of milk production and distribution has been mailed to the St. Louis milk distributers by Park Commissioner Cunliff, who, with Associate City Counselor Griffin, has been designated by Mayor Kiel to conduct an investigation of alleged profiteering in milk following the increase from 14 to 15 cents a quart this month, and the threat to advance to 16 cents next month, and later to 18 cents.

Cunliff is conducting the investigation as Acting Director of Public Welfare, by holding a series of hearings, the next of which will be held Monday afternoon, when it is hoped to have Donley A. Brooks, president of the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association, present for questioning.

Seek Evidence of Agreement.

Department of Justice agents, assigned to investigate the food situation in St. Louis and run down hoarders and price fixers, are centering their energy on a plan to obtain evidence that prices are being fixed by the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association. The investigators are seeking tangible evidence that an agreement exists between the producers to fix and maintain uniform prices, and that penalties are assessed for failing to adhere to the agreement.

In September, 1917, a Post-Dispatch reporter obtained a copy of the printed by-laws of the Producers' Association, one paragraph of which said:

"The duties of the Milk Board shall be: (1). To establish prices for milk for the members of the association; (2) It shall be empowered if they cannot make satisfactory agreement with the dealers, to refer the matter back to the Board of Directors."

Expelled in Ten Days.

A. W. Gehrig of Alhambra, Ill., member of the Milk Board, stated at that time that any member of the association who did not adhere to the price fixed by the Milk Board was penalized with a fine of 50 cents a day, and if he should continue the violation of the agreement for 10 days the supreme penalty was invoked—expulsion from membership in the association.

This association has never made a secret of the fact that its Milk Board and Board of Directors meet regularly to fix the prices which shall be paid by the St. Louis distributers. The Southern Illinois producers are not alone in this work, as nearly all the large producers in Missouri who supply milk to St. Louis are members of the Illinois association.

The producers meet every Tuesday at the Railroad Y. M. C. A., in East St. Louis, and the Milk Board meets regularly to tell the milk producers of Southern Illinois and those in the vicinity of St. Louis, in Missouri, what their prices shall be.

Strong Enough to Get Prices.

Last Sunday, at his home in Marine, Ill., President Brooks remarked to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the producers' association and the labor unions had the distributors in a bad way and that any pressure brought to bear by newspapers to reduce prices might drive the distributors to the wall. He stated that the Illinois producers now had 4600 members and were strong enough to say what the price shall be and to get it.

The text of the questionnaire sent by the city officials to distributors follows:

"At the recent hearing before the undersigned you volunteered to permit us to examine your books, and to furnish us any facts connected with the cost of production and distribution of milk. After consideration of the matter, we would appreciate it if you would furnish us with the following items of cost:

"1. Do you operate a farm at which milk is produced? If so, kindly give the average cost of production of said milk for 100 pounds at the farm for July, 1919.

"2. What is the cost to you for 100 pounds of milk received by you at your receiving station or stations in the State of Illinois for August, 1919?

Any Other Stations.

"3. Have you any receiving stations other than those in Illinois, either in Missouri or elsewhere? If so, what is the cost to you for each 100 pounds of milk at those stations for August, 1919?

"4. Is any milk delivered to you in St. Louis either at the railroad station or at your plant? If so, what is the cost of that milk to you for 100 pounds for August, 1919?

"5. What is the cost for each 100 pounds of operating your receiving stations in Illinois or elsewhere for July, 1919, and August, 1919, to date? Give itemized statement, if possible.

"6. What is the cost of transporting the milk from the receiving stations in Illinois or elsewhere to your plant in St. Louis for each 100 pounds for July, 1919, and August, 1919, to date Give separate items of cost per hundred pounds.

"7. What is the cost for each 100 pounds for operating your plant in St. Louis for July, 1919, from the time that the milk is received at your plant to the time that it is bottled and ready for distribution to the customer? Give itemized statement.

"8. What is the cost of distributing the milk to the customer for each 100 pounds for July, 1919, and for August, 1919, up to date?

"9. In addition to the sale of milk, please state what other products you deal in, such as butter, cream, cottage cheese, ice cream, buttermilk, certified milk and cream, etc.

"10. In giving the cost for each 100 pounds of milk as aforesaid, do you deduct the proportionate cost of transportation, operation of plant, distribution etc., of cream, butter, ice cream, buttermilk, cottage cheese, certified milk and cream and other products obtained from whole milk or which you deal in?

What Is Margin of Profits?

"11. What was your margin of profit for each pound of milk in July 1919, and what do you figure your margin of profit for August, 1919? Does this margin of profit include profits in butter, ice cream and other by-products mentioned in question No. 10?

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Note How the Essex

In Speed, Hill Climbing, Comfort and Reliability It Has Won 10,000 Owners

Proves Endurance

The 10,000 Essex cars already in service have been so distributed that every community now knows their distinctive performance.

Here for instance are people who have had wide motor car experience. They will tell you how they esteem the Essex. Its economy of operation and the fact that practically no attention is required to keep it in prime operation appeals to all.

As For Its Performance

If you haven't ridden in the Essex take the first opportunity to do so.

Come to us and we will give you the same kind of demonstration that has caused thousands to acknowledge Essex supremacy. Watch the way in which Essex cars perform on the road. If it is at a street crossing when traffic is signaled to go ahead, observe how quickly the Essex jumps to the lead. The only car that beats it is another Essex with a better driver.

If you are on a narrow country road where an Essex signals its intention to pass another car, you will see how easy with its acceleration it can jump to the lead.

And It Will Do That Whenever Called On

Essex performance is acknowledged by everyone. No one classes it with any but the largest and more costly cars—never with cars of its weight or price class.

Now that thousands of Essex cars have been driven more miles than is usually rolled up in a season by the average automobile, owners are realizing Essex endurance.

That is why they tell you about the small upkeep expense of the Essex. They tell you about the way in which it retains its power and wanted qualities even after the hardest service. In every endurance run entered, the Essex has made perfect scores.

Such Is the Car You Should Have

It gives dependable service. It is the new day car, the type to which all moderate priced cars must come, for in addition to light weight and low operating cost, men now demand performance, luxury, comfort and endurance. The Essex is easy to drive. It turns in a short radius. It steers easily. It can be parked in spaces too small for the average car. It has many qualities you will like.

Ask yourself what car is so modern, what is the type of the future, what light car can match its performance. It is exclusive in many particulars and no other car built has all the features of the Essex.

3 MEN SOUGHT FOR ROBBING PAYMASTER

Motorist Tells of Suspicious Actions of Auto Party Near Scene of $753 Holdup.

Three young men between 19 and 24 years of age are being sought by detectives following a robbery of Paul Schmitt, 25 years old, 4843 Nebraska avenue, paymaster for the More-Jones Brass and Metal Co., 3000 North Broadway, who says he was held up at noon yesterday and that pay envelopes containing $753.75 were taken from him on Dock street between Broadway and Ninth street.

At the time of the robbery Schmitt reported two men had stepped from a hallway where they apparently had waited for him, and while one pointed a revolver at him the other took the money and both fled through the hallway.

Later information was given the police by Robert Johnstone, 2328A North Union avenue, a meter inspector for the Union Electric Light and Power Co., which led to the search for the trio in the automobile.

Johnstone said he was driving his auto south in Ninth street, a few seconds after the robbery, and saw the Oldsmobile containing one youth at the wheel with the engine running and standing, facing south in Ninth street at Dock. As he neared the corner, he said, two others described as the robbers ran from an alley nearby and jumped in the machine. The man at the wheel started the auto and made a half circle, turning north in Ninth street, and speeded west.

The action was taken so quickly, Johnstone said he did not have an opportunity to see the license number on the machine. All three youths wore caps and two were in their shirt sleeves, he said.

Schmitt told policemen he had drawn nearly $3000 from the bank yesterday morning and had proceeded first to the main plant of the company at Broadway and Dock street, where he paid off the employes. From there he started alone to the machine shop at Ninth and Dock streets to pay off the employes there. He had the envelopes tied in a bundle. He told policemen that the men appeared familiar with his movements and apparently had hidden in the hallway to await his coming.

He did not see the automobile at Ninth street, as buildings obstructed it from his view.

VIGILANCE BUREAU IS INVESTIGATING DELAYS IN COURTS

Report in Fleischman Burglary Case Is Striking Example of How Criminal Trials Drag Along.

JUDGE HAS GRANTED FOUR CONTINUANCES

Attorney for Man Arrested Dec. 28, 1918, Has Succeeded in Delaying Trial Until Oct. 17 Despite Protests.

The Courts Committee of the Vigilance Bureau has under investigation a report made by one of the delegates to the bureau, John F. Peters, head of the Peters Dry Goods Co., 2600 North Fourteenth street, which is a striking illustration of the manner in which many trial cases drag along for extended periods of time in criminal divisions of the Circuit Court.

The case in point is that of Joseph Fleischman, proprietor of a general store at 1207 North Thirteenth street, who is under indictment for burglary and receiving stolen property. It has been pending in Circuit Judge Taylor's court since April 28.

Fleischman was arrested Dec. 28, 1918, following a burglary at the Peters store in which $10,000 worth of stock was stolen. When city detectives searched Fleischman's store they found cloth valued at $276 which had been stolen Dec. 10, 1918, from the dry goods store of Patrick T. McGovern, 3914 West Florissant avenue.

Case Was Called Jan. 13.

On Jan. 13 last the case was called for a preliminary hearing before Judge Krueger in the Court of Criminal Correction, and, at the request of the defendant, was laid over to Jan. 17, on which day Fleischman was ordered held for the grand jury.

The witnesses, including McGovern, Peters, several detectives, a patrolman and two civilians, appeared before the grand jury and on Feb. 18 Fleischman was indicted. He was at liberty under a $2500 bond.

When the case was called in Judge Taylor's court, April 28, Fleischman was represented by former Circuit Attorney Thomas B. Harvey. The defense was not ready for trial and the case was continued to May 1. On the latter date the witnesses again appeared and the State announced ready for trial. Harvey asked for a continuance on the ground that process servers had been unable to reach certain witnesses whose testimony, he said, was material to the defense. The case was laid over to June 9.

Witness Protests at Delay.

On June 9, after the witnesses for the State had responded, Judge Harvey requested another continuance, on the plea that an important witness for the defense had not been found. He asked that the case be laid over to the next term, saying that the witness was out of the city. The State objected to that and Judge Taylor passed the case to Aug. 4.

McGovern, the State's chief witness, who was sitting near the Circuit Attorney's table, protested to Assistant Circuit Attorney Verne R. C. Lacy, who had charge of the prosecution of the Fleischman case.

"We are wasting a lot of valuable time, it seems to me," he said. "What is the idea of continuing this case so often?"

In a voice above the ordinary tone, Assistant Circuit Attorney Lacy turned and addressed Judge Taylor.

"This man wants to know what we mean by postponing this case," he said.

Judge Taylor summoned McGovern to the bench and asked him what complaint he had to make.

"I was inquiring as to why this case is being continued so often," said McGovern. "My time is valuable and I cannot afford to be coming to court so often. This case has been passed down three times."

"You are mistaken," said the Judge. "It has been continued but twice."

"I am not mistaken," said McGovern.

Continued Again to Oct. 17.

Judge Taylor ordered the clerk to produce the record and found that McGovern was correct.

"You are right," Judge Taylor said to McGovern. "This case will have to go to trial at the next setting. Judge Harvey is being indulged too much by the courts."

Judge Harvey had left the courtroom.

When the case was called off on the docket Aug. 4 there was another trial in progress and the witnesses in the Fleischman case were informed that they were excused until 2 o'clock in the afternoon. As there were two other cases on the docket ahead of the Fleischman case, Peters arranged with a policeman to be summoned by telephone from his store in the event a jury was selected in the afternoon to try Fleischman.

The following day, having heard nothing from the policeman, Peters called up McGovern and asked about the status of the case.

"Oh," exclaimed McGovern. "It was continued again; this time to Oct. 17. I'm through with it. What's the use of me running down there so often. I'm tired of it."

"No, you are not through with it," said Peters. "We'll see this thing through to the finish. I'll see that you are in court if I have to drive out to your store and take you down in my car."

Peters made inquiry concerning the fourth continuance of the Fleischman case and learned that Judge Harvey had filed an affidavit that a material witness for the defense was out of the city, and, as provided by statute, where an affidavit of that kind is filed, the case had been continued to the succeeding term of court.

Nothing Unusual About It.

When Peters had concluded narrating the history of the Fleischman case to the Vigilance Bureau, William H. O'Brien, president of the bureau, announced that the matter would be referred to the courts committee for investigation.

"It is just such cases as this which discourage people from wanting to serve as witnesses or jurors," he said.

Judge Taylor said, regarding the Fleischman case, that there was nothing unusual about it.

"The law requires that where a defendant has statutory grounds for a continuance, the Court must grant it," he said. "In the event that such a continuance were refused and the defendant convicted the Supreme Court would hold the verdict reversible. My allusion to Judge Harvey was not meant as a reflection on him. He is retained in a large number of cases, and I was referring to the volume of his business."

Leifield Whips Red Sox in First Game; Robertson and Austin Kick Off the Second

"Lefty" Surprises Rail Birds by Holding Champions to Five Meager Swats While Jacobson Clubs Ball—Infield Errors in Eleventh Frame Cause Shocker's Downfall.

BOSTON, MASS., August 9.—"You'd naturally think that the Browns never would lose another game after they went and supported the ancient Albert "Lefty" Leifield to a 5 to 3 victory over the fast traveling Red Sox in the first game of today's double-header before more than 24,000 fans. Anything ought to be possible for Jimmy Burke's lads after "Lefty" had won a game.

But the evil, leering little gods, or devils, who run baseball, started to laugh and they giggled themselves silly in the second game, which the confident, cool, collected and courageous Urban Shocker is credited with losing, 4 to 3, in 11 red-hot frames.

There was very little wrong with that first game. The Browns went out and hit Allan Russell hard enough to win any ordinary game. But Lefty made it an extraordinary affair by his remarkable pitching. Here he had not gone through a big league game this year. Burke was admittedly hard up for pitchers. In went Lefty, sort of a sacrifice, we suppose, but he surprised everyone by holding the Sox to five hits, every one of them singles.

"Lefty" Wild at the Start.

If it had not been for a little wildness in that get-away frame, Lefty might have had an easier game of it. He gave three passes, his only walks of the game, in that first frame, and "Stuffy" McInnis inserted an infield single which scored two runs. The other Sox counter was the result of an error by Bill ("Baby Doll") Jacobson in left field.

Of the second game's finish little pariseworthy for the Browns can be said. Gene Robertson, then Jimmy Austin, dropped perfectly fielded and thrown balls in the last of the eleventh and Shannon, who had opened the frame by singling to left off Shocker, got to third. With the bases full and none out, Hooper sent a long fly to Left Fielder Jacobson and after the catch Shannon romped home, and let the big crowd go home happy, for beating the Browns these days is no merry-go-round sinecure.

Jacobson kept up his terrific hitting streak. He hit safely three times in the first, including a double and pasted out a timely double in the second game, so timely that it worked into the tieing run for the Browns in the ninth. This makes, then, 16 consecutive games in which the dangerous Doll has hit safely.

Shocker's Defense Crumbles.

Ernie Koob, Dave Davenport and Shocker all took part in that second game. It was tied up under Shocker's reign and it is not Urban's fault that his infield cracked wide open behind him in the eleventh, whereas the Red Sox inner cordon never played any better.

"Babe" Ruth hit safely in each game, but did not get his seventeenth home run. But the Colossus would have got a home run, almost beyond question, if it had not been for a remarkable mitt hand side-leaping catch by Kenneth Williams in center field in the eighth, with a man on base. Williams was playing a very deep center for the big fellow. With the crack of the bat he was off. He seemed doomed to failure, for the ball was going with great speed. But it took a little curve in its career and he managed to nail it by that side leap, with one hand. The pill was headed for the deep center field fence. It would have bounded off the fence and would have rolled way out to the flagpole.

Kenneth Williams Shines.

Babe got a wonderful bit of applause for the crack and it must have made Kenneth feel very good indeed when he came back to the bench and got a wonderfully sustained salvo of applause from the big crowd. You see, the Browns always put up a derned good battle in this city, and they are popular. And now Boston knows why Burke put Williams in center field with Jacobson going to left field when Tobin was hurt. Kenneth is some outfielder and made Bobby Roth, one of the most overrated outfielders in the big leagues, look very ordinary indeed, as a midgardener.

In the second game, too, Kenneth chased right up to the far corner of the center field bleachers and got his hands on a Ruth smash, but crashed into the fence in the same stride and just naturally could not hold onto the apple, Babe getting a triple.

Waite Hoyt pitched the second game for the Red Sox. It was this lad's third straight victory in three starts. He is a cool customer. Hoyt gave the Browns but six in that 11 inning late matinee affair. But Waite received phenomenal infield support, particularly from McInnis, who single-handed knocked down what looked like five Brown hits and converted them into erasures. Shannon, Vitt and Scott were all prominent in stellar killings and Babe Ruth three times in the second game raced over toward center and made picturesque catches of low, hard-hit drives which appeared booked to go safely for extra bases.

As a Pitcher Waite Hoyt Must Be a Heavyweight

Does Ban Johnson Own Cleveland Stock? Dunn Answers, but Sidesteps

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 9.—President James C. Dunn of the Cleveland American League baseball club, referring to the recent statement of the New York American League team owners that B. B. Johnson, president of the American League, was a stockholder in the Cleveland team today issued the following statement:

"Since taking over the Cleveland baseball club in 1916, with my associates, I have been in complete control of the policies and business affairs of the club.

"At the time we made the purchase we assumed certain obligations, all of which have been met when due or prior to maturity. I do not believe the people of Cleveland are very much concerned as to who holds the stock in the club, as long as I remain in complete control of the policies of the organization and continue my efforts to give Cleveland a winning club.

"However, those who are asserting that B. B. Johnson is interested in th Cleveland baseball club are treading on very dangerous ground."

DODGERS BEAT PIRATES; STENGEL GOES TO PHILS

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 9.—Brooklyn defeated Pittsburg today, 2 to 0. Pfeffer held the Pirates to four hits and always was master of the situation.

Carlson was wild. Excellent fielding behind him saved several scores. The first run for Brooklyn came in the third inning on a pass to Johnston, his steal of second and Z. Wheat's single. Hamilton pitched the last inning for the Pirates. Two singles and a double off him scored another run for the visiting team.

It was announced that Outfielder Stengel had been traded to Philadelphia for Outfielder Witted.

PERRY'S WILDNESS HELPS TIGERS DEFEAT MACKMEN

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Four of Perry's bases on balls resulted in runs today and cost Philadelphia the opening game of the series with Detroit, 5 to 4. Errors were frequent and costly, each of Philadelphia's first two runs coming in on misplays. In the eighth with Kopp on base, Thomas' low liner shot past Cobb and rolled to the flagpole for a home run, after which Leonard tightened up, and retired the last five Athletic batters in order. Cardinals Get 14 Swats but Lose to Braves, 5 to 3

Boston Concentrates Fire on Doak and Jacobs in Seventh and Scores 3 Runs.

BREAKS FAVOR RUDOLPH

Two Double Plays, One in Ninth Inning, Stop Promising Rallies by Rickey's Clan.

The Cardinals lambasted Dick Rudolph for 14 blows, but failed to connect often at the proper time, and as a result were beaten in the second game of the series by the Braves of Boston, 5 runs to 3. In their last three games, the Cardinals have outhit their opponents, but have finished on the small end of the score in each case.

Twice yesterday, when Rudolph was on the verge of being annihilated his teammates pulled double plays that saved him from ruin. Once was in the opening inning, when four hits scored a run and left the bases filled, with only one out. This time Dilhoefer slapped into a twin killing. In the ninth, the Cards still had a chance to pull the game out of the fire, when, with one run in, the Rickeymen two runs behind and the tieing runs on bases, with only one out, Hornsby ended the rally by hitting into a double play.

At the start, Willie Doak, the blond spitter, was Manager Rickey's moundman. He had two bad innings, the fifth, when the Braves tallied a pair of runs, and the seventh when he exploded and had to be taken out in favor of Elmer Jacobs.

Cards Pound Rudolph.

The Cards lost no time in getting after Rudolph. Heathcote opened the home half of the first with a double to left and moved to third on Jack Smith's sacrifice. Stock then planted a clean single in right center that scored Heathcote. Singles by Hornsby and McHenry filled the bases and as only one was out at the time, a cluster of runs seemed on the way. However, Dilhoefer's best was a tap to Rawlings and a double play resulted.

It remained 1—0 until the fifth when the Braves got to Doak for a pair of markers. Carlisle Smith was tossed out by Lavan, but Holke bunted safely.

On the hit-and-run, Mann dropped a double in right and Holke chased over from first. After Lavan had chucked out Maranville, Gowdy shot a single to left that tallied Mann. Rudolph ended this round with a tap to Doak.

McHenry Thumps the Ball.

The sixth saw the Cardinals tie it up at 2 all. With Hornsby gone, McHenry got his third hit, a single to center, and went to second and third on Dilhoefer's grounder and a wild pitch. Roy Leslie, the new first sacker, then broke into the hit column with his first blow as a major. It was a single to center that scored McHenry and knotted the count. After Lavan singled, Rudolph cut loose with a wild pitch on which the runners advanced, but they perished when Doak struck out.

Doak's finish came in the seventh. Holke doubled and scored on Mann's single, Mann going to second on the throw home. On Maranville's attempted sacrifice, Mann went to third and Maranville was safe when Leslie dropped Hornsby's throw. At this stage Doak gave way to Jacobs. Gowdy greeted him with a single which scored Mann and sent Maranville to third. Rudolph also poled a base hit that tallied Maranville, with the third and final run of the inning.

With one gone in the ninth, Heathcote tripled to right and scored on Jack Smith's single. Stock also singled, putting the tieing run on first base. However, Hornsby's best was a grounder to Maranville and a double play followed, ending the game.

CARDINAL NOTES

The Cardinals will play their final game of the current stand at Cardinal Field this afternoon when they meet the Braves in a single game. Bill Sherdel, the young lefthander, likely will oppose the Redmen. Cecil Algernon Causey, who recently was traded to the Braves by the Giants in the deal for Artie Nehf, probably will be Manager Stallings' pitching selection.

Austin McHenry continues to murder the ball. He poled three hits out of four attempts off Rudolph. McHenry threatens to bob up as the National League's leading hitter. He is also proving a star as a fielder.

Bert Shotton laid off yesterday and Cliff Heathcote performed in his stead. The young Pennsylvanian got three hits off Rudolph, two being triples and one a double.

Lavan had a good day in the field. He turned eight fielding brilliant. He also got his daily hit.

Roy Leslie has gotten only one hit in the three games he has played since joining the Cardinals, but he takes a healthy swing at the ball and the indications are that he will live up to his Texas reputation as a slugger. He is unusually fast for a big man.

The main section of the Cardinals departs tomorrow morning for Harrisburg, Pa., where an exhibition game is scheduled, Tuesday. The team opens its third and final Eastern invasion in Philadelphia Wednesday when a doubleheader will be played.

Otto Sens, owner of the Houston (Texas League) team, saw yesterday's game. He is on his way to Chicago to compete in the Grand American handicap.

WRAY'S COLUMN

An Unspoiled Champion.

WHEN William Harrison Dempsey steps on the stage at the Highlands, next Sunday, and shows the St. Louis public just what a good tailor can do with a shapely bunch of raw masculinity, spectators will see a good looking, well groomed, upspoiled boy. From the time Dame Fortune took Jack into her chariot and stepped on the accelerator, nothing in the shape of publicity or new wealth has seemed to make the slightest difference in his open heartedness.

Of course, this sort of publicity stuff follows all limelighters about. The farm bought for Paw, and the $10,000 check for Maw and the college education for Freckled Sister Sue are inevitable pap dispensed when a boy becomes great.

But Dempsey is different. Not all his touches of humanity are those of finance or of two-handed scattering of largesse among a receptive set of relatives and friends.

One incident in particular shows that Jack has an original trend of thought as well as an appreciation of humor that can only go with a "regular guy." We have this one first hand:

When Dempsey dwelt in Chicago he resided at the house of a widow named Skelly, who eked out a living for herself and family by taking in boarders. "Ma" Skelly and Dempsey became fast friends, and her little daughter thought Jack was just about the greatest human being next to Gen. Foch and President Wilson that the world had given to mankind.

Another Frame-Up.

WHEN Dempsey left for Toledo he equipped himself with a handsome ring outfit to use for the state occason against Willard. But a few days before the big event came off, a package delivered at Dempsey's training camp proved, when opened, to be a finely made pair of white silk trunks, with red, white and blue sash, which had been made—every stitch—by Widow Skelley's little daughter.

When Dempsey returned to Chicago, some time after beating Willard, he sought out Ma Skelly and her family and was duly cuddled and made over. And on departing he left a gift for the little girl and made her promise not to open it until he left.

Guess what it was—but then you never could!

It was the pretty pair of trunks she had made for him and in which he had won the world's championship—FRAMED!

Look Out, Dempsey! Roper Is Coming.

CAPT. BOB ROPER, late of the United States army and later of Jack Johnson's private school for the development of world's champions, told Chicago interviewers that he would be ready, one of these days, to battle Jack Dempsey for the championship.

"One of these days" has an elastic meaning; but if Capt. Bob meant some time in the near future, his friends might as well be thinking up suitable things to tell the sorrowing Roper relatives, such as, what a nice disposition he had.

No gymnasium-built champion can hope to win from a battler who fought his way up, other things being equal.

The theory and the practice may be built up in a gymnasium; but, Bo, there's nothing can give a man poise in the face of danger like constantly facing it. A made fighter would not be of much use until he had gained confidence by actual fighting.

As a matter of fact, unless Capt. Bob is unique in pugilistic annals, the S. P. C. A. ought to take an interest in his case and enjoin him from boxing.

Can It Be True?

CAPT. BOB brings back the information that his coach, Jack Johnson, is high in spirits but low in spuds. In fact, contradicting more flattering financial reports, it appears that Johnson is bent all out of shape, if not actually broke.

This may account for the reported fact that Tom Cowler, one-time "hope" of James J. Corbett and the man who almost flattened Fred Fulton in a single round at the Coliseum here, is journeying toward the land of the maguey to fight Johnson 20 rounds, the latter part of the months. Roper says Johnson is in good condition.

Some match! Unless Cowler has quit training on corn juice and unless Johnson has shaken off about 35 pounds of fat he carried to Spain, both ought to melt away into helplessness from their own efforts, long before 20 rounds have passed.

As a fight, this ought to be a fine lard-rendering contest.

Pulling a Baron Munchausen.

HYPERBOLE is far from being a dead figure of speech. All fight managers and many news writers employ it effectively, as the following from an Eastern newspaper indicates:

"Battling" Levinsky, the light-heavyweight champion, and Harry Greb, of Pittsburg, have been matched again, this time at Wheeling, W. Va., where, on Sept. 4, they will FIGHT 10 rounds."

To those who know a good running match when they see it, the expression FIGHT is decidedly hyperbolical. Mr. Levinsky, however, can do some of the finest Parthian boxing known. He can pop the enemy with an accurate aim while in full gallop. He owns a fine fadeaway, when crowded, and the only man that has ever been able to overtake him was Jack Dempsey.

Levinsky is a great boxer, born without a kick. Dempsey handed him what he lacked.

The only time a boxer is eager to take the count is when it's a box-office count.

GEORGES CARPENTIER announces that he is now a motion picture actor. Naturally, when a fighter breaks into the "movies," he can't keep still about it.

Another One to Copper.

JAMES J. CORBETT opened up the throttle on Jack Dempsey, the other day, after having picked his usual loser in selecting Willard to win the July 4 fray.

"Dempsey is only a boy at the boxing game," Jim Corbett told a friend. "You know what I mean, just a natural fighter who shoots it all without thinking. Say, he's another McGovern or Ketchel. They were just like him. If either one of those fellows had been taught the finer points of the game he would have been rotten and Dempsey will be spoiled if they try to teach him.

"Kid McCoy or Joe Choynski would have given Dempsey a merry time if he had been around when they were good. They could hit hard and hit like lightning. They would have stalled him off for a few rounds and then you'd have seen a fight that would make two Kilkenny cats look as though they were stalling."

Meadows' String of Victories Broken

Cincinnati Reds Score Three Off Lee in First Inning and Trim Phils, 10-1.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 9.—Philadelphia was defeated today 10 to 1. Meadows, who had won six straight games since joining the Philadelphia team, allowed three runs in the first inning on hits by Rath Daubert and Kopf, with two passes and an error at the plate by Tragesser

Cravath batted for Meadows in the second inning with the bases full and two out, and drew a base on balls, which forced in the only run made off Sallee, who pitched effectively in the last seven innings. [illegible]

Cubs Give Giants Another Drubbing

Jim Vaughn's Quick Thinking on the Bases Nets Him Victory Over Douglas.

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Chicago made it two straight from New York today by winning 3 to 1, in a pitching battle between Jim Vaughn and Phil Douglas, recently traded to the Giants by the locals for Dave Robertson. About 20,000 saw the game.

Vaughn's quick thinking and daring base running gave Chicago the winning run in the eighth inning. He started the inning with a walk and Flack followed with a single to right. Young, thinking Vaughn would attempt to get back to second after rounding the base, threw to Fletcher, but the big pitcher continued to third. A double steal followed and Vaughn scored. Flack scored a minute later on Herzog's triple. Vaughn would have scored a shutout against the visitors if Killifer had not dropped Flack's perfect throw in the second inning.

Manion Outplays Kossman, Winning City Golf Honors

Third Annual Championship Over Public Links Sees Former State Titleholder Win 3 and 1.

LOSER THREE DOWN AT END OF MORNING PLAY

Squares Match at Hole No. 6 in Afternoon Round, but Is Unable to Pass His More Reliable Foe.

After two years of rather indifferent success in golf competition, James Manion, former State champion, regained the local titular pinnacle, yesterday, when he defeated Walter J. Kossman, a fellow member of the Forest Park Golf Club, in a 36-hole final match for the city amateur championship, over the municipal course. The score was 2 up and 1 to play.

Manion's victory signified a real return to Comebackville. In 1916 he was widely heralded when he annexed the State honors. The following season he won the municipal title; but since then he gradually lost prestige, until he was hardly considered as a possible finalist, at the start of last week's play. In battling his way to the city leadership, he defeated Frank Donovan, Paul Buesse, Louis Hamel, Clarence Wolff, the 1917 and 1918 champion, and Kossman.

There was nothing brilliant about yesterday's play, when the match is considered in its entirety. On the return journey of the morning round Manion made a spectacular dash which gave him a par 35, while at times there were super-shots which provoked applause from the large gallery. But even at best, play was spasmodic.

Both Players Begin Weakly.

In the morning Manion took a 44 on the first nine and it was only his 35 that gave him an under 80 total, 79. Kossman was also erratic going out, scoring 45 strokes, which with a 42 for the return gave an 87, his highest score for the week's play. In the afternoon, Manion had an 80, while Kossman took 71 up until the seventeenth hole.

Although these scores probably are disappointing to those followers of the game who look for brilliancy in championship play, it is certain that there was as much of the dramatic crowded into that double round of play as could be expected in the conservative royal and ancient pastime. Indeed, there were enough thrills and chills to furnish David Griffith with material for a four-reel "drayma."

As a matter of fact, four reels it was. The match might be divided into four periods. From the first to the tenth holes of the morning round, Kossman held the upper hand, being from one to two up at various stages. Then came the frenzied dash of the champion, overcoming the lead of his opponent by winning five and halving three of the remaining eight holes. This left Jimmie three up at the close of the morning round.

Kossman Squares the Match.

The outlook was dismal for Kossman as the players teed up for the afternoon round. Manion was in the lead and going like the hackneyed house afire. But the first hole saw the start of the third reel. Kossman took holes No. 1, 3 and 5, halving 2 and 4; and the play was all square as the finalists teed up at No. 6, for the fourth and climactic reel.

Six was halved in fours, disappointing the crowd which was looking for at least one bogey, three. On the next hole Kossman went one down, he played around the putting green taking five strokes to Manion's four. The lead was increased to two up, on No. 9, when Manion sunk a beautiful 25-foot putt for a three, just after Kossman had thrilled the crowd with a dandy approach.

Kossman had a bad break at the Crow's Nest, No. 10, when a long putt eased up to the cup, hit the lip and bounced out. Had the ball gone down he would have had a win, but had to be content with a half. The plot thickened when the runnerup lost the eleventh hole, which has been his big race throughout the earlier rounds. He appeared nervous at this stage and topped his tee ball about 90 yards down course, while Manion went to the break in the foliage. Jim was "on" in two and down in five, while Kossman needed an extra stroke.

Kossman Closes Gap.

For a while the tide was stemmed when Kossman took the two following holes. His drive on 12 rolled right over the cup, resting about 18 inches away, and he went down for a win. Both played slovenly at No. 13, Kossman driving into No. 11 fairway, while Manion rested in a gulley. Kossman's second was topped, while Manion just did niblic out. Manion went over the green on his third, while Kossman put a pretty iron on the velvet. Each took a pair of putts, and Manion now stood, 1 up.

Hole No. 14 proved the turning point of the day. Kossman was coming strong and the tee-box experts conjectured that if he got on even terms here he would win out. Manion's drive went in the rough, while Kossman was in midcourse. The champion then ironed a trifle hard and went over the green onto a hanging lie in some weeds. It appeared as if James had given the hole to his opponent.

Then Kossman tried a chip shot in order to land near the cup and hold there. He missed his shot and the ball ambled over the green into the rough, a position almost as bad as Manion's. Jim made a neat approach and went down in a four. Kossman's mashie was short and he required two strokes to sink, losing the hole and going two down, whereas he should have been even up. Here he lost his heart.

Manion Loses a Hole.

But Manion wasn't ready for his friend to lose yet. He sliced beautifully over into No. 5 fairway on the next hole, whereas Kossman was in the rough in front of the green. The ultimate winners' out was short and his next one was too strong. Kossman couldn't help winning the hole.

Then came No. 16 where Kossman found all the trouble that the course architects had provided. However, a niche iron shot gave him a life, but he "spilled the beans" with a short miss on the green. This hole is called Vista, but it should be labeled Cabbage Patch. The grass was atrocious.

In the morning round Kossman had met with difficulty on No. 17. His first mashie hit a tree and bounded in the lake; his second struck the stone coping and this ball also went in. He probably had some misgiving when he attacked the hole in the afternoon. His first ball struck the same tree and went in; he was disgusted; he topped the second into the lake; then he shook hands. Manion was champion.

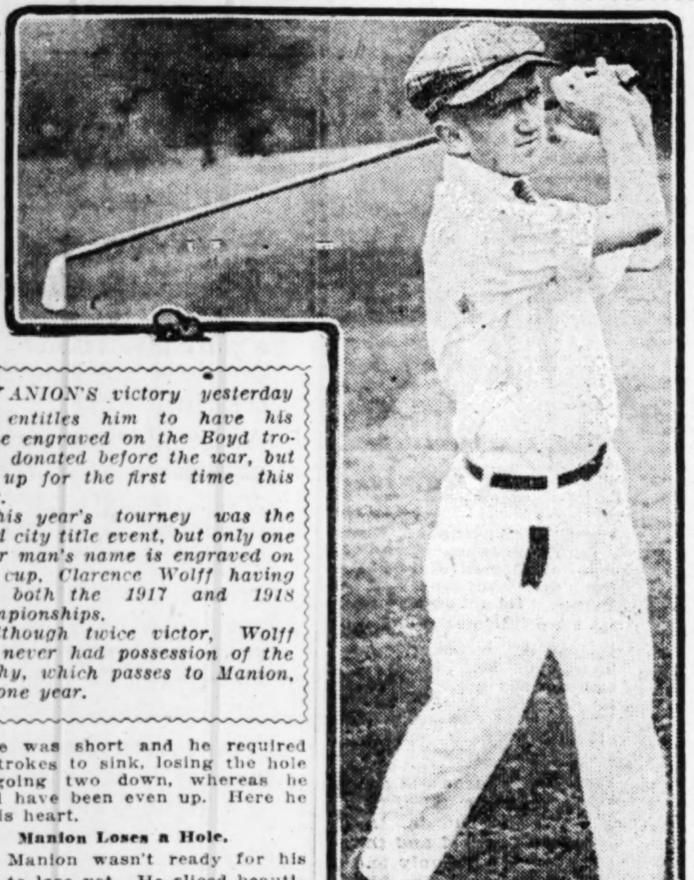
He Beat Kossman for City Title



MANION'S victory yesterday entitles him to have his name engraved on the Boyd trophy, donated before the war, but put up for the first time this year.

This year's tourney was the third city title event, but only one other man's name is engraved on the cup, Clarence Wolff having won both the 1917 and 1918 championships.

Although twice victor, Wolff has never had possession of the trophy, which passes to Manion, for one year.

Wray Brown and Bryant in State Tennis Tourney

Miss Corinne Gould Will Defend Her Title in Kansas City This Week.

St. Louis will have at least two entries in the Missouri State tennis tournament which opens tomorrow at Kansas City. They are Wray Brown and Herbert Bryant, of Washington University, who will compete in both singles and doubles. Bryant is said to be one of the most promising young players ever developed in St. Louis. He is 19 years old.

Ted Drewes, of this city, present holder of the State title, will be unable to defend his laurels owing to pressure of business. The women's State title, now held by Miss Corinne Gould of this city, will not be allowed to go by default. Miss Gould is now in Kansas City and will play not only in the Missouri tournament but in the Great Plains tourney which follows it.

Four Local Golf Stars to Attend National Tourney

Manion, Bockenkamp, Kossman and Limberg Will Journey to Oakmont.

Because of his splendid efforts in the city championship golf tournament, completed yesterday, Walter J. Kossman will be sent to Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburg, this week, to compete in the national amateur championships. Several local sportsmen, impressed by the 22-year-old youth's play, will pay his expenses.

This will increase St. Louis' representation to four golfers. Richard Bockenkamp, James Manion and E. A. Limberg are the other local players who will play. They will all represent the Forest Park Golf Club.

RUSSELL BOY, OUTSIDER, WINS FREE-FOR-ALL PACE

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 9.—The biggest upset of the Grand Circuit meeting came today when Russell Boy, an outsider, won the free-for-all pace, purse $2500, the feature of the getaway card at North Randall.

The contest was figured as a strictly two horse race between Miss Harris M. and Single G., but Russell Boy led all around in the first two heats, winning with plenty to spare. In the third heat, however, after leading most of the way, he succumbed to Directum J., near the wire and finished half a length back.

Neither Russell Boy nor Director J. were given much consideration by the speculators. They sold at $20 in the auction pools, while Miss Harris M. brought $300 and Single G. $250. Britton Forbes and Amardale were the only favorites to win.

Today's receipts, $4300, were given to charity.

BEZDEK ALLOWS SAIER TO QUIT FOR SEASON

PITSBURG, Pa., Aug. 9.—Vic Saier eliminated himself as a rival of Zip Mollwitz for first base honors on the Pittsburg club when he requested the Pittsburg management to allow him to go to his home in Lansing, Mich., for the remainder of the season. The request has been granted.

Saier stated that he did not feel as if he was doing either his club or himself justice by remaining on the payroll—that business affairs at his home demanded personal attention, and that he would like to be permitted to retire for the remainder of the season.

MUNICIPAL CENTER NET TOURNEY ENTRY OPENS

Entries for the Municipal center tennis tournament for juniors and boys open tomorrow and will be received here until Friday by the Forest Park Groundkeeper. Entrants should include in their application, name, address, telephone and age.

The event is open to boys who were not 15 last March 1 and to juniors who were not 18 on the same date.

The winners of the two divisions will play the victors in the recent Triple A tournament for the right to compete in the national boys and junior championships at Forest Hills, Long Island, late this month.

Youth Wins Net Title.

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 9.—Phil Neer, 18-year-old Portland youth, today won the Pacific Northwest Men's singles championship, defeating Wallace Scott of Tacoma in four sets on the courts of the Tacoma Tennis Club, 5—7, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

MEANWELL AGAIN AT HEAD

Gridiron Squad, Which Failed to Play a Game Last Year, Is Stronger Than Ever.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 9.—Indications today are that the opening of the fall term of the University of Missouri this month will mark the beginning of the greatest year of the school's history in athletics.

The school's coaching staff will remain intact this year, and will be strengthened by the return of Dr. W. E. Meanwell, director of athletics, who has been serving in the medical corps of the army for the past two years. Meanwell will take up his work at the head of the athletic department, and will probably coach the 1920 basketball team, with Coach John F. Miller, who piloted the team in Meanwell's absence at the head of the freshman squad.

H. F. Schulte will coach the Varsity football team, with Miller in charge of the freshman. Schulte will again coach track next spring. Miller will lead the baseball team.

Athletic Material Plentiful.

There will be no shortage of material for any sport this year at M. U. Coach Schulte has received a score of letters from Tigers of two and three years ago who are returning from the trenches to the gridiron and these veterans, allied with the men who trained last fall but failed to get into inter-collegiate competition on account of the influenza epidemic, will make up a strong squad.

In basket ball Missouri will walk away with the Valley title. "Our second team will be able to whip anything in the Valley next winter," says Coach J. F. Miller, who piloted the runners-up for the championship last year.

Strong Basket Squad.

Of last year's basket ball team, Capt. Ruby, Phil Scott—high score man of the Valley—Eric Schroeder, Paul Vogt, who scored more field goals than any man in the Valley, George Browning and Bull Sessions will be back. Lewis, Simpson and Coffey of last year's squad will also be out for places on the team. And in addition there will be Harry Viner, star guard of two years ago, and several other old men, back from the war, looking for berths on the team.

The return of Jack Scholz, one of the fastest dash men in the country, together with the coming eligibility of the squad of more than a hundred freshmen Schulte worked on the track, last spring, promises a bright season in track.

A resumption of baseball, discontinued this year on account of the financial condition of the athletic department, is promised for next year.

BARNES AND HAGEN TO MATCH THEIR PROWESS ON ENGINEERS' LINKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Professional Golfers' Championship on the Engineers' Links this month will definitely settle the vexing question whether Barnes is in the same class with Hagen. Since his brilliant victory in the Western open meet Long Jim has cut in Hagen's thunder. Friends of Barnes claim the tall Cornishman is just as nifty a player as the national and metropolitan champion. The rival rooting factions will have a fine opportunity to compare notes when the two leading "pros" clash at the Engineers' course.

As shot makers there's really very little difference between Barnes and Hagen. Both are tremendously long drivers, with Barnes possibly having the edge for better direction. Through the fairway it's a toss up. Hagen makes the best recoveries from trouble, but an analysis of the playing of both stars this season shows that Barnes doesn't get into so many traps as his chief rival, who delighted in taking long chances. Both are accurate putters.

In the matter of temperament one finds the biggest difference, and it is here that Hagen enjoys an advantage. The national champion has an ideal temperament, never worries and never fusses. Hagen is always pl[illegible] ing the next shot, a miscue is qu[illegible] ly forgotten. And with his careless style Walter has aggressiveness and nerve that stands up strongest when the going is the toughest.

Barnes by nature is a quiet unassuming chap, who golfs like a world beater when everything breaks right for him.

WINTERBLE AND KINYON WIN INTERSTATE TITLE

SIOUX CITY, Io., Aug. 9.—William Winterble of Richmond Center, Wis., and Sidney Kinyon of Owottanna, Minn., defeated Ralph Powell and Cleary Hannighen of Omaha in the doubles this afternoon and won the Interstate tennis championship.

New York Cricketers Win.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—The New York cricketers easily defeated the Germantown Cricket Club's eleven 287 to 166, in the play-off of the tie for the Halifax cup today at the Merion Cricket Club. The fielding of Harry Maxwell and E. M. Mann, featured for Germantown, while J. L. Poyer's batting was the high spot of the visitors' offensive.

Fight to Finish Against Johnson May Split League

FIVE OWNERS WITH BAN

Showdown Impending When American League Head Reaches New York, Monday.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—One of two developments is expected to come out of the Mays controversy. Either the potent influence which Ban Johnson, sometimes styled "the Czar of baseball," has wielded over the American League will be removed or there will be a new league, according to friends of the New York Yankees management.

No threat of a baseball insurrection has been made, but the owners of the Yankees, the Chicago White Sox and the Boston Red Sox have the money, the enterprise and the following for such a step, it is suggested by the belligerent ones.

Ban Johnson has been quoted as saying that the only club owners who will be present at the meeting called by Col. Ruppert will be the Yankees' owners, Charles Comiskey of the White Sox and Harry H. Frazee of the Red Sox. Evidently Johnson can speak authoritatively for the others.

All of which will make nice material for the attorneys who represent the Baltimore Federals in their contention that organized baseball is a "trust."

Johnson in New York Today.

The "Czar" is due here tomorrow. When leaving Chicago he announced that he would not attend the meeting. He will be in Justice Luce's court on Tuesday when the Yankee owners have him haled before the bar to show cause why the injunction restraining Johnson and the American League umpires from interfering with Mays.

The gathering at the Biltmore will be in the nature of a showdown. If it is evident that the Johnson has the whip hand on five club owners of the American League, the big three of the American League promise to lay out a campaign that could well develop into the most strenuous in baseball history. The two "Colonels," Comiskey and Frazee, will form a combination that will command respect and gather support.

An announcement purported to be from them has it that the fight against Johnson will be to a finish.

PHIL BALL STIRS YANK OWNERS WITH HOT REPLY TO THEIR INVITATION

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—P. D. Ball, president of the St. Louis Americans, today notified President Ruppert of the New York Americans that he will not accept his invitation to attend a meeting here next Monday to consider the Carl Mays case. Pitcher Mays was suspended by President Johnson, but an injunction obtained by the Yankee club officials has enabled the club to use him in the field.

Terming New York's stand in the matter as "bad sportsmanship," Mr. Ball declared: "Your business sagacity and acumen in Mays matter does not appeal to us."

President Ruppert replied that his refusal "was not unacceptable, in view of your gratuitous insult in response to a polite invitation."

The Cleveland, Washington and Detroit clubs have not yet answered the invitation. Boston and Chicago have accepted and Philadelphia and St. Louis have declined.

SALE OF STARS INSULT TO FANS, BROOKLYN OWNER TELLS HERRMANN

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Charles H. Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn National League Club, made public tonight a telegram he has sent to Garry Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Nationals, urging the latter to prevent further publicity concerning efforts to purchase Brooklyn stars and asserting that the Brooklyn management has no intention to "insult loyal patrons" by the sale of star players.

"It is not our policy to sell our rights to the services of our best players and you have no right, reason or foundation to presume we are foolish enough to do so," the message said. "We would preferably sell our entire base ball holdings rather than insult our loyal patrons by selling the release of our star players."

Publicity attached to the efforts of the Reds to obtain players Jimmy Johnston and Hy Myers inspired the telegram, it was stated.

Hermann Enters Denial.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—President Herrmann has received the telegram from President Ebbets of the Brooklyn Nationals, urging him to prevent further publicity concerning prospective purchases of players and enters a flat denial of giving out information and has informed Ebbets that all his official dealings for players are invariably with the officials of the club direct and not with the players, when they are under contract with another club. But he cannot prevent gossip as to players, Herrmann says.

Australians Beat Yankees in Newport Tennis Doubles; Tilden Conquers Johnston

Patterson and Brookes, of the Antipodean Squad, First Defeat Williams and Washburn, Then Johnson and Richards to Win Title—Singles Final Surprises Experts.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 9.—Steadiness, backed by clever use of speed on the part of William T. Tilden 2d, wrought the defeat of William Johnston, the Californian and former national champion in the final of the lawn tennis singles on the turf of the Casino courts here today. The score was 7-5, 8-6, 6-1.

Norman E. Brookes and Gerald L. Patterson, the Australian pair, won the doubles final. They defeated Vincent Richards and W. F. Johnson after four spirited sets. The score was 6—1, 6—3, 3—6, 7—5. In this contest it was evident that, with any strength on the part of his partner, Richards would have carried off the match. To the amazement of the followers of the game, Richards and Johnson repeatedly broke through the service of the hurricane Patterson and also that of Brookes. In the sharper rallies Johnson made poor returns and he was not dependable in the close games.

From the showing that the Australians made in the doubles, there appears no reason to be fearful as to the fate of the national doubles championship when the international pairs battle next week at Boston.

The singles final furnished a fitting climax to one of the most remarkable tournaments ever decided on the American courts. The champion, R. Lindley Murray, met defeat and three of the former national title-holders were bowled over. Maurice E. McLoughlin, R. N. Williams II, and lastly William M. Johnston going down in hollow fashion. It was the fantastic adventures of "Alice in Wonderland" being enacted on the lawn tennis courts.

Johnston's Errors Beat Him.

To sum up the cause of Johnston's defeat after his wonderful playing against Ichiya Kumagae in the semifinal round, it was due to his costly inaccuracies. The Californian played like one who had been up all night with the toothache. He repeatedly started brilliant rallies.

Then when he had paved the way to an opening, he changed his mind and his stroke so that the fall fell into the net or out of court. There were any number of occasions when Johnston had the game within his grasp, only to toss it away by attempting to execute a looking-glass shot. It was just these trifling unexplainable things on the part of Johnston, who had defeated Tilden in the match for the national clay court championship a month ago at Chicago, that turned the tide in favor of the tall No. 2 of the ranking list.

Only in the first set did Johnston force a lead that appeared to indicate that he might gain the trophy. He had Tilden at 3—1 on games shooting the ball deeply on his drives and forcing position with some slight effectiveness. Tilden began to find the range of the court, at this period. When he did it was the national clay court champion who had to do the running. In his effort to make up for lost ground Johnston became a bit careless being penalized for a foot-fault in one of the important games that he lost. He played desperately in the rallies at the end of the set so that he managed to pull the games level at deuce after Tilden had led him at 5—4. It was during these games that he displayed his lack of control and instead of the cool and calculating player he began to show the worrying of the man whose work is going wrongly.

Australians to Face Real Test This Week

NEXT Tuesday at the Longwood grass courts, Boston, the real mettle of the Australian teams will be tested, when they oppose the winners of the sectional tournaments throughout this country in a national title competition.

The Australians drew byes, for Monday. On Tuesday, however, they get into action. Lycett and Thomas meet Alexander and Voshell; while Patterson and Brookes will oppose the winners of the Kumagae and Throckmorton-Williams and Washburn contest. Later, they woll have to face Johnston and Griffin, former national champions, victors in the Northwest sectional tourney.

Tilden, after the tally had been called at 5 all, set himself for a net attack. His work was fine and he mastered Johnston in the rallies chiefly by directing the shots to his backhand. Johnston faded under the attack. He had to take the defensive in which he did not shine. The result was that Tilden took greater chances, to win the set at 7—5.

The effect of the errors of nets and outs is easily representative of the difference between steadiness and inaccuracy on the part of the two great players. Johnston's errors totaled 83 for the match, Tilden's only 72. On earned points the players were practically even, as Tilden scored a total of 37 placements and aces while the Pacific Coast star counted only 36.

Patterson Won for Visitors.

Brookes and Patterson began as if to make a runaway of the doubles. The service order was Patterson with his powerfully driven ball, Richards, whose work was remarkably brilliant, Brookes and lastly Johnson. The credit for the Australian victory lies with Patterson. His smashes to the sides, he practically never drove straight through the court, and his hard-hit volleys always had the Americans upon the defensive. His total of earned points was practically that of all of the other contestants on the court combined.

Brookes' playing was interesting, as it differed so greatly from any of the others. So far as his racquet work was concerned there was none of the cloud dusting lobs, the smashes that sent the ball bounding over roofs and trees. He played a soft game. He did well with it until the Americans began to take the ball carefully. Brooke's crossing shots were prettily timed and he exhibited crafty tactics, although he did not always achieve his object. After deuce had been called in the third set it was Paterson's smashing that pulled the pair through to the victory.

One Australian Team Beaten.

Perhaps the semifinal doubles match, in which the Australians conquered the really classful team of Williams and Washburn might be a better measure of their strength. In the morning play the Australians won the semifinal, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4. However, Williams and Washburn are not on the top of their game as yet.

To reach their place in the final, Richards and Johnson had also won a morning round, defeating the remaining Australian pair, R. V. Thomas and Randolph Lycett, 6—4, 6—4, 6—4.

Jacobson Climbs as Sisler Falls in A. L. Batting; Thorpe Heads N. L.

Unofficial averages, including games of last Thursday, show that Bill Jacobson is climbing rapidly to the top of the batting heap, his record for the last 15 games giving him an average of .565 for that period. Sisler has dropped slightly, due to a slump. Cobb is again in front.

Jim Thorpe is still leader in the National.

Kabakoff Faces Former Sparring Partner Friday

McMullen Has Improved Since Serving as Punching Bag for Ghetto Champion.

4 BOUTS ON RIALTO CARD

Outdoor Show at Cardinal Field Next Friday Promises Interesting Boxing.

Not so many months ago Harry Kabakoff usd to perform fistic tatoos on his punching bag—and Joe McMullen. At that time Joe could retaliate about as effectively as the bag, for the elusive Ghetto champion was as hard to locate as a 3000 barrel gusher.

But times have changed. Today we find McMullen and Kabakoff matched to fight in the fistic featude of the Rialto Athletic Club's outdoor show at Cardinal Field, next Friday night. More important still there is every probability that a very determined mill will result from the matching of the skillful boxer and the rugged featherweight.

McMullen is a hard-hitting, game, aggressive fellow, not so fast as he should be to cope with Kabakoff successfully, but a dangerous lad who is not disturbed by thistle down taps. He has faced the best men of his weight in town and has nothing to be ashamed of in his record, so far as we know. He is a glutton for punishment. It is our belief that he could sit through a wrestling match or a tail-end ball game without wincing.

Kabakoff Has Filled Out.

Kabakoff has grown and strengthened. Passing into the featherweight class has taken something of that will-o'-the-wispness out of his once phantom-like motions. If Kabby could carry his present heft around the ring as fast as formerly, Frankie Burns couldn't catch him with a motorcycle. To offset his tardiness Harry has gained in power and ruggedness.

The match shapes up well and will be worth seeing if no unforeseen circumstance ruins the morale of either boxer in the meantime.

The other features for Friday are:

Eddie Meier vs. Patsy Flannigan, 116 pounds; Kid Mathews of Chicago vs. Young Leach Cross of St. Louis, 130 pounds; Sammy Sherman vs. Willie Neela, 120 pounds.

All of these boxers give their best and all ought to furnish excellent entertainment. In fact, the best fighting seen at any of the local clubs, in the past six months, has been done by St. Louis boxers. And this may be said without prejudice.

The Rialto A. C. has issued the following statement regarding arrangements:

"Heretofore persons not entitled to reservations took possession of seats already sold and caused considerable complaint. The club has made arrangement to deal effectively with fence jumpers and those who avoid the payment of war tax. All reserved seats will be properly protected. Every person entitled to a close-up reserved seat will be provided with same. This is ABSOLUTELY ASSURED."

Tomlinson Wins Swim Title.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9.—Gilbert E. Tomlinson of the Meadowbrook Club, Philadelphia, won the 440-yard Middle Atlantic A. A. U. swimming championship today in Broomall's Lake, Media, Pa., in 6 minutes and 23 seconds. Charles W. Cronover of Girard College, Philadelphia, was second, two-fifths of a second behind the winner. W. H. Ralston of the Germantown Boys' Club was third.

PAT MORAN SAYS, "I USE SLOAN'S!"

JUDGE NEVILLE, CANDIDATE FOR SUPREME BENCH, DEAD

Expires at Springfield Hospital After an Illness of Several Weeks.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Aug. 9.—Judge James T. Neville, Republican candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court in the last election, and who was defeated by Judge Graves, Democrat, by only 678 votes, died in a Springfield hosiptal last night after an illness of several weeks.

He was Judge of the Circuit Court in Springfield for 18 years and was a candidate for Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals in 1902, being defeated by a small majority. He was widely known in Republican politics.

Stomach is Quick to Upset When School Children Are Idle

VACATION days are days of over-eating and under-exercising for most boys and girls. They loll around nibbling at light food, unconcerned whether the fruit is green or ripe.

The result is cramps, skin eruptions, pimples, "summer colds," constipation and diarrhea. The basis of such trouble is an upset stomach, and nothing will give safer and quicker relief than the well-known Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is just a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, a formula evolved some 30 years ago by Dr. Caldwell himself. Syrup Pepsin is now used by millions of people and is today the largest-selling liquid laxative in the world.

It is the mildest and gentlest of laxatives. It regulates the stomach and bowels so well that they can soon work normally again without the aid of medicine. And unlike the harsher physics and cathartics, Syrup Pepsin does not gripe or cause discomfort, even to a tiny baby.

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. A free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

WALSH CALLS ON BRITON TO PROVE DENIAL OF ATROCITIES

Cablegram of Irish Chairman Raises Point of Veracity With Chief Secretary.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Frank P. Walsh, chairman of the American commission on Irish independence, today sent a cablegram to Ian McPherson, chief secretary for Ireland, in which he raised the point of veracity with the English official. McPherson had denied the truth of some of the charges made by Walsh and Edward F. Dunne, former Governor of Illinois, relating to English atrocities in Ireland. The report was made June 3 following personal visits to Ireland by the members of the commission. The cablegram says:

"Am forwarding you by mail today reply to your statement denying facts set forth in report of American commission on Irish independence dated June 3, 1919, so that you may be advised. Meantime I cannot overlook the issue of personal veracity and honor which you have injected into the controversy. This is to inform you that unless you immediately join in request for appointment of impartial committee of inquiry by the peace conference I shall publicly stigmatize you as a falsifier and your answer to our report as a piece of wilful mendacity on the part of a high official unparalleled in the field of crooked politics."

FAMED CONFECTIONERY HOUSE TO BE WRECKED

Leonhard's Establishment at 320 Market Street Interestingly Linked With Early Life in St. Louis.

Within a week or two wreckers will begin razing the three-story building at 320 Market street, completion of which work will mark the removal of another of the city's landmarks. Leonhard's Confectionery, which has occupied the site for 75 years, surviving the decline of what was once St. Louis' main thoroughfare, will be transferred to Eighth and Pine streets, and a large warehouse for the Funston Brothers Fur Co. will be erected in place of the old structure.

Four generations of St. Louisans have known the old place intimately. Great-grandfathers of the present generation knew it as a coffee house where beaux and belles with ruffled shirts and hoop-skirts used to "kaffee-klatch" in the days when Eighth street was the western limits of the town and when steamboat men and cotton dealers were the predominating elements of the city's industrial and commercial life. Market street in those days was what Washington avenue and Olive street now are—the city's retail center. It was then undergoing transformation from a fashionable residence district.

The first white man ever tried in St. Louis for killing a negro was one of many who formerly played dominoes at the marble-top tables—tables which are still in service at the confectionery; for, in order to preserve the pioneer-day atmosphere of the place, the owners have from time to time, in replacing worn-out fixtures, sent to New Orleans or California to get articles matching the originals, which are to be found in no other part of the United States in these times.

River Captain First Murder Defendant.

Capt. Donaldson—no one could be found who recalled his first name—who was the owner of the Great Republic, the largest steamboat of its time on the Mississippi River, shot and killed a negro roustabout in 1867 or 1868. He was indicted for murder and the case attracted considerable attention, for it was shortly after the abolition of slavery, and the slave pen on Elm street and the auction of negroes at the east door of the courthouse were still fresh in the minds of St. Louisans. Charles P. Johnson, then Circuit Attorney, prosecuted the case.

The courthouse was not large enough to hold the crowd which attended the trial and hundreds stood on the lawn. There were frequent demonstrations, and when the jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty" a brass band, engaged for the occasion, struck up a lively march and Donaldson was carried on the shoulders of his friends to Leonhard's Confectionery, where he was "toasted" with coffee. Nothing stronger was ever served there and that policy has been continued up to this time.

In those days Broadway was Fifth street, Market street was Main street and the Planters Hotel was the Planters House. The names of the hotel and the Boatmen's Bank serve to remind present-day St. Louisans of the character of people who were most influential here in the early days.

Two weeks ago a Mrs. Taylor, who said she was 96 years old and resided in one of the suburbs, visited the confectionery, and as she took a seat at one of the familiar tables and gazed about the room she smiled reminiscently.

"It hasn't changed a bit," she said to the proprietor. "It looks the same as it did 69 years ago when my sweetheart, later my husband, brought me here for ice cream. I came to St. Louis in 1848 and this place was here then. My wedding cake was baked here in 1854. It was four stories high and decorated with ornaments."

Dr. F. Kolbenheyer, now a resident of Oklahoma and who formerly lived at 2012 Lafayette avenue, when here visited the place every week-day afternoon and read books or chatted with cronies as he sipped his coffee. He always took a seat in the southwest corner of the room. His table was pointed out yesterday. He used to say that he liked the place because it reminded him so much of his former home in Austria, where coffee houses were popular. Sometimes he played dominoes. That was the main pastime of men who spent their recreation hours at Leonhard's Confectionery.

Coffee and Coffee Cake Only.

When Conrad Leonhard founded the establishment in the early '40s he served nothing but coffee and coffee cake. He did the baking, his wife cooked the coffee and a Miss Hildebrand served the customers. When he died in 1903 his will was found to contain a provision that his widow was to sell the place within two years after his death.

In 1905 the place was purchased by H. G. Goerner and today it is managed by two of his sons, Bates J. and H. G. Goerner. Their brother, F. N. Goerner, will be associated with them in the management of the new Leonhard's Confectionery. The name is not to be changed.

The business today is conducted the same as it was before Conrad Leonhard's death. In the later years of his life he had extended the business to include the making of high-class bakery goods and the serving of dairy lunch. The modern waitress with high heels and coquettish smiles never did fit into the scheme of things at Leonhard's Confectionery and never will, according to the present management. Following out the ideas of the founder, the owners today still employ girls whose domestic ways indicate that they are just what their qualification demands—girls who live at home with their families.

Conrad Leonhard many years ago occupied the second and third floors of the building as living apartments. Later the second floor was converted into a smoking room, so that judges, lawyers and others who wished to indulge in a cigar could enjoy the pleasure without annoyance to the women customers on the first floor. The smoking room today is precisely the way it was when Leonhard lived. The same furnishings and decorations are still there. The third floor is used as a storage place.

Scene of Receptions to Celebrities.

The confectionery was the scene of reception in honor of Adelina Patti, Jennie Lind and other celebrities who appeared at Bernstein's Theater in the block west of Leonhard's. The theater was on the secon floor of the building at 414 Market street, occupied by Speck's bakery and restaurant. The structure orginally was a residence and Frank Wyman, a former Postmaster, was born there something like 65 years ago.

Gov. Johnson was a bundle boy in a dry goods store on Fifth street when he began taking lunch at Leonhard's. When he was sent out to the "West End," now Eighth street, to deliever a parcel he would run the distance so that he could spend time listening to trials in the courthouse. The time that he spent in drinking in the speeches of lawyers caused his employer to write a letter to his father saying that he did not believe "Charley is adapted to the dry goods business." Johnson then took up the study of law.

The building at 320 Market street still is in a good state of preservation. Some idea of how substantially it was constructed may be had from the fact that the joists in the foundation are of solid oak and black walnut.

Use O-Cedar Polish the O-Cedar Polish Way

First, remove mud, dust, etc., from your car by washing with water in the usual way.

If you have used oils, or wax, it is best to use Ivory Soap to remove them.

Pour about 4 ounces of O-Cedar in a pan and add a quart of warm water. Saturate a clean cloth in this and go over the body of the car. Do not attempt to clean too much at a time—take one side of the body or a fender first. Follow by rubbing with a dry cloth. But little rubbing is required to produce a hard, dry, lasting lustre.

RENTAL INCREASE 10 TO 20 PER CENT

Upward Movement Declared to Have Been Forced by Higher Cost of Various Things Pertaining to Building Ownership.

Among the reiterated complaints of the rising cost of living there are found many against the advances in rents. In order to show this matter in its true light, Maj. Price, editor of "Commerce and Finance," New York City, and widely known as a financial writer and statistician. This shows a rise of 244 per cent since 1896, with many prices still advancing.

What Builders Have Faced.

"It will be seen that the cost of building and repairs was not in the mind of Price," said Barngrove, "and therefore it gives but a partial indication of the increases being paid by owners. In addition to the items listed which affect them, owners are called upon to pay increased national, State and local taxes, both general and special, and for greatly advanced prices of roofing, guttering, downspouts, plumbing, coal, glass, painting, lime, cement, lumber, paperhanging, hardware, electrical work, collection of rents, commissions and fees of many kinds, and interest on loans. It is estimated that from 75 to 90 per cent of all realty is carried under mortgage and at higher rates of interest than formerly. It should therefore be realized that the 244 per cent advance shown by the table, if the figures should be extended through all expenses of the realty owner, would remain quite similar.

"The cost of labor is not even alluded to here, but it is only necessary to read the demands of strikers, daily set forth in the newspapers, to see the position owners and agents are facing.

"Now, when advances in rents of dwellings have so far amounted to only 10 to 20 per cent, with perhaps some exceptions, as compared with 244 per cent average of everything else, it is unfair to accuse landlords of profiteering.

Realty Last to Advance.

"It has always been an axiom in realty circles that in great business booms real estate rises last, and this it is now proceeding to do. In other cities it is reported to be much worse for tenants. Small houses, flats and apartments are now selling well, simply because of scarcity caused by greatly increased cost of building. The loaf of bread formerly costing five cents now sells for 10; meats in still higher proportion; clothing is at least 100 per cent higher. The owner pays these prices likewise. A curious fact also is that fully half of the realty agents and operators are not owners and pay rent on the same basis as other tenants.

"In commenting on his statistics Price adds: 'No statistics as to rents paid throughout the United States are available, but I am inclined to think that rents will have advanced fully 200 per cent on the average before the present cycle of high prices has been completed.' This is a quite weighty prophecy, but when we realize that there was a great national panic in 1907, followed by business depression and declines in values lasting for over 10 years through Mexican troubles, the Balkan war, and finally more than four years of the greatest of all wars, must not some great change come? Wars are always accompanied and followed by fluctuations in prices and eras of inflation of the values of property and labor, and by depreciation of the worth of money."

According to an advertisement that appears in today's Post-Dispatch, placed by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, a large Eastern chemical company is seeking a site of 40 to 100 acres in St. Louis for a plant for the operation of which 1500 men and women will be required.

The advertisement specifies that the site must have adequate rail facilities, be accessible by street cars and not require extensive grading. This is regarded as of more than passing interest in view of the fact that deals were recently conducted by which the General Motors Co. and the United Drug Co. will erect major plants in St. Louis. It is significant as showing the trend and substantial character of the city's growth, according to A. R. Schollmeyer, a former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange.

MOTORS PLANT CONTRACTS LET

Contracts for the construction and equipment of the General Motors Co. plant at Natural Bridge road and Union boulevard were awarded yesterday on a "cost plus" plan. A total of $5,000,000 will be spent in construction, it is expected.

The general contract was awarded to the George A. Fuller Co. of Detroit. Plumbing and mechanical equipment will be installed by the Thomas J. Sheehan Co. of St. Louis. The plant is to be one of the largest automobile assembling factories in the United States and 10,000 or more workers will be employed.

JULY PARALLELS HEALTHY BUILDING ACTIVITY IN JUNE

Big Gain Shown Over Figures for July, 1918, Only Seven Cities Showing Loss—St. Louis Increases Given as 184 Per Cent.

July activity closely parallels June activity as indicated by comparing building permit statistics for the two months. Reports from 145 cities to The American Contractor for July give a total estimated valuation of $130,746,609, an average of approximately $900,000 per city. June totals from 158 cities indicated a $134,726,715 valuation, or slightly less than $900,000 per city ($85,270).

Increases over June activity exist in 83 cities, and recession in 58 cities.

Some of the more important cities showing marked increase are Akron, Atlantic City, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Minneapolis, Borough of Queens, Springfield, Ill., and St. Paul.

Decreases from June activity obtain in all the boroughs of New York except Queens; and in Baltimore, Chicago, Kansas City, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Seattle and Tulsa, Okla. The Chicago decrease is very marked, from $11,415,600 for June to $7,714,700 for July. Labor disputes contributed to this slump.

The building permits for St. Louis in July, 1919, numbered 784 and aggregated in value $3,302,537, compared with 450 permits in July, 1918, aggregating $1,159,535, the gain in the 1919 period being 184 per cent.

Growth by Months Shown.

The growth of activity during the current year as contrasted with activity in 1918, is forcibly brought out by the following table showing permits by months for the two years:

Month.	No. Cities.	1919 Value.	1918 Value.
January	152	$ 23,869,215	$ 27,291,218
February	153	32,058,628	21,680,314
March	169	64,884,325	36,529,620
April	165	84,914,008	44,516,828
May	168	112,678,640	51,764,746
June	158	134,726,715	47,793,182
July	145	130,746,609	39,850,626

Gain over 1918 values has increased steadily month by month. A comparison of July figures for the past six years is as follows:

Year.	No. of Cities.	No of Permits.	Estimated Value.
1919	145	34,738	$130,746,609
1918	145	18,523	39,850,626
1917	119	18,590	58,726,904
1916	119	24,375	115,813,797
1915	110	22,948	67,062,722
1914	76	......	70,368,500

In 1916 and in 1914 estimated value of permits per city slightly exceeded the $900,000 mark per city for the current July. Allowing for the depreciated buying power of the present-day dollar would make July figures look still less optimistic when compared to those of previous years.

July Values of Permits.

The average value of permits for July is $3760, as compared to an average value of $3375 for June, $2600 in May and $1700 in January. This would indicate that less of the July work is for repaairs.

Gain in activity over 1918 is practically universal, only seven cities out of 145 reporting less amount of estimated value.

Reports from the following cities arrived too late to be incorporated in the analysis:

GRAND-LEADER TO INCREASE HEIGHT TO 11 STORIES

Plans for Remodeling Store to Add to Its Accommodations Are Disclosed by Company.

WORK AWAITS NEW BUILDING ORDINANCE

Growth of Washington Avenue as Retail Mart Receives New Impetus With Construction Programs.

By Berry Moore.

Plans were disclosed yesterday for increasing the height of the Grand-Leader block extending from Washington avenue to St. Charles street and from Sixth to Seventh streets to 11 stories and for other improvements which will add to the accommodations of the store.

Preparatory to the execution of these plans the Leader Building Co., a holding corporation of Stix, Baer & Fuller, operators of the Grand-Leader, recently purchased through the Mercantile Trust Co., the main Grand-Leader Building at the northwest corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue, an eight-story structure occupying the entire east half of this block, facing Washington avenue, Sixth and St. Charles streets.

The grantor was the Emporium Realty Co., of which Lorenzo E. Anderson is president. The sale was made subject to a loan of $1,050,000 on the building, executed 10 days ago in favor of the Mercantile Trust Co.

Building 15 Years Old.

The building was constructed about 15 years ago for the Grand-Leader's use by the Emporium Realty Co., and Lorenzo E. Anderson, who at that time was vice president and real estate officer of the Mercantile Trust Co., promoted the building project.

The Grand-Leader also controls and occupies the west half of this block, through the Arthur Realty Co., also a holding corporation of Stix, Baer & Fuller. This is improved with a five-story building which occupies the northeast corner of Seventh street and Washington avenue and with a seven-story building embracing the southeast corner of Seventh and St. Charles streets. These structures are known as the Grand-Leader Annex, forming virtually part of the main Grand-Leader Building.

Awaits New Law.

The extension of the height of the block to 11 stories awaits only the building permit, which cannot be issued except by a special law, owing to the fact that the plans for the enlarged structure do not conform with the new zone ordinance. Modifications in this law are being brought about by the Board of Aldermen, which will permit the proposed increase in the height of the block, and which will give the department store rank with the largest in the United States.

The growth of this section of Washington avenue as a retail mart has received added impetus recently with the launching of several stores on a new and larger scale on this thoroughfare, including notably that of Kresge's at the southeast corner of Sixth street and Washington avenue and that of Woolworth's at the southwest corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, five and 10 cent stores, which have tended to heighten traffic on this thoroughfare.

Bungalows Being Built on Neosho Street.

The Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co. sold to M. L. Schilli, building on the South Side, 150 feet on the north side of Neosho street, west of King's highway, on which Schilli is erecting five bungalows. One of these bungalows has been sold from the plans.

KENT JARVIS.

JOHN C. GREULICH REALTY CO.

A 34-foot lot on the west side of Queens avenue, one-half block south of Florissant avenue, in North St. Louis Heights, for Robert Albrecht and wife to Charles Boehne.

CHARLES GUNDLACH.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

A Maryland Terrace Suggestion.

Build your home in deep lot, wide lot Maryland Terrace. Get a home suited absolutely to your needs and ideas. Have a lot big enough to give the home the right setting. Your home can be ever so well built, but if the district is congested THAT HOME will not be attractive or saleable. Your architect designs the home. We will build it for you, relieving you of all care, or you can build it yourself. If you make $400 a month you can own your own home in Maryland Terrace—have an asset instead of rent receipts.

Build In Maryland Terrace

Your Business Is Established. You Have Made Money.

Let Your Family Enjoy the Advantages of This Wonderful Residence Park, the Center of the Social and Educational Centers of St. Louis

Maryland Terrace Lots, now selling at pre-war prices, will soon advance $50 to $75 a front foot. That is a profit of $3000 to $4500 per lot. That's what you save by buying now.

These lots will advance simply in answer to the law of supply and demand. In other cities, similar property is now selling at almost double our present prices.

Maryland Terrace is the last of the deep lot, wide lot properties adjoining the Campus of Washington University.

Generously laid out and developed by the best landscape and civil engineers. Comprising as it does 100 acres, the street improvements alone costing $250,000.00, it is without doubt one of the finest residence parks in any American city.

The lots are 190 to 219-feet deep and face wide drives. The building lines hold the homes back 62 feet from wide drives, permitting wonderful perspectives and vistas.

In most of the homes, the garages are made a part of the house, leaving the yards open. What is more uninteresting than short lots, with eight-room residences covering the front and square garages the rear of the lots? That's the trouble with too many sections of the city.

Visit Maryland Terrace in the Cool of the Evening

See how really beautiful the property is. See the wonderful homes, how even the modest homes in Maryland Terrace, setting well back from the street, look more beautiful than more expensive homes in the congested portions of the city.

See the families enjoying their yards. See "Dad" there at play. He has room out in his own yard to play ball with his children. They are getting acquainted with their "Dad," too. Some way or other "Dads" living in Maryland Terrace want to get away earlier in the afternoons. Their deep lots, their flowers, shrubs, their rosy-faced, happy children form an attraction that makes a man hurry his work in the afternoon. See Everett Davis, President, living at N. E. cor. Williams and Westmoreland Drives for full particulars. He will tell you the cost of building. We are organized to do this.

Maryland Terrace lots are selling. Your friends are buying. Why not solve the home question now for all time. When you build in Maryland Terrace you know you will never need to move, because you will never be crowded. Maryland Terrace starts at Pennsylvania Av., the west boundary of the Campus, and extends west on both Maryland and Westmoreland Drives. The University car direct to the property.

A Maryland Terrace Home

Showing rear elevation. Note the windows and French Door looking south from the Dining Room, the wide Hall going through the house and the large Living Room. All lead to a beautiful grassy Terrace. The lot is 219 feet deep, permitting the Owner to indulge in any landscaping he cares for.

CONSTANT READER. — The Franco-Prussian War of 1870 came about through the natural racial antagonisms of the French and Germans. The culminating cause was the pretentions of a member of the Hohenzollern family to the throne of Spain. The French protested against this and demanded that the King of Prussia undertake to withdraw the candidate and never mix in the affair again. Bismarck's famous dispatch was in answer to this demand of the French and was so worded as not only to give offense to the French, but to leave open as well the position of Prussia in the controversy.

ARE you one of these "outs," "drag-out," "work-out," "blow-out," "sell-out," "knock-out," "played-out," also "down-and-out?" This grind-of-life is a grand and glorious thing if you don't "weaken." We are "making" the game "easy," so you don't "weaken." We are "calling you" to keep "abreast of the times;" don't go around with that distress signal look on your face. "Dress up." Hundreds of the real hot-weather clothes: Palm Beach, mohair, cool cloths and crash suits, $3.95 to $8.75 "now on sale." There is no time in life that you get so "down and out" that you can't get into the "Land of Beginning Again;" "Start anew;" we "Are Calling You" with our 5 large stores, 120 feet, filled with "bargains galore." If we don't get your "money for clothes here you don't spend your "dough" right. What you "save when you spend your dough is your profit." "Install the Abrams' System" of clothes-buying and save. Dress up, look prosperous. Don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. Be "awake" to the "fact" your personal appearance "must count." We have "placed on sale" hundreds of suits, pants, coats and vests, which means a big saving to you. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers. Can you wear 34, 36, 38, 43, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models, $7.50 to $15. Vests, 25c; pants, $2 to $3.95; coats, $3 to $6.50; mohair suits, $10; Palm Beach suits, $3.95, $5 and $7.50; mohair cool cloth suits, $7.49 to $9.98; uncalled-for Stetson hats, 95c. Open Sundays until 6 p. m. Abrams Cleaners and Dyers, 926 S. Vandeventer, near Chouteau. Mail orders filled. Both phones. Liberty Bonds accepted.

WE'RE "lowering" the "high" cost of "living;" we're in a "class" by ourselves; we claim with our "5 big stores" and "our policy of close-to-the-shore profits," "out-of-the-high-rent-district," eliminating all unnecessary expense. "Oh Boy!" our place to "Spend your dough." We have the goods now on hand at the old prices; buy now and "save yourself" 25 to 50 per cent. Never in the "history" of these "United States" will you "see prices" as "high" as this fall. The "Drummer Sample" Clothes Shop is warning you. The sky is now the limit for prices. We have "hundreds" of suits now on hand at the old prices. Don't "tread the old beaten path," where you have spent your money for "friendship" and not for "clothes." We'll sell you clothes "at the price, not friendship." Play the "new game." At our "close-to-the-shore profits" policy; if your "dough counts," all we ask of you, "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." We are the only store in St. Louis showing "real" plain and silk-lined $30 and $35 blue, green, brown flannel waist-line suits at these prices: $19.98, $21.98, $22.98, $24.98 and $27.98. Don't spend "a dollar for clothes" until you see our "spring line." "Pay less; buy more." To the "Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop." Five big stores in one; [illegible] fare saves you $5 to $7.50; Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. "We've got the place, the goods at the price." A "price concession to our returning soldiers." "Sample suits," $13.80, $14.44, $16.66, $18.89, $19.45, $21.89, $24.85. Mohair suits, $12.98, $14.98; Palm Beach, $8.98 and $9.98. What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you: These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you $5 to $7.50. Sample pants, $2.48, $2.58, $3.46, $4.98; tailor-made suits cost up to $35; our price, $19.50, $22.50, $26.75. We again announce our "Trade-in-Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "The place to buy clothes." 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. Liberty Bonds accepted. (c)

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STOCK MARKET SHOWS STRONG UPWARD DRIFT AT CLOSE OF SESSION

Violent Price Swings Mark Trading for the Week, but Bulls Check Selling After an Early Panicky Decline.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"Even people familiar by long experience with the Stock Exchange might be pardoned for bewilderment over the market's performances this week. On one day Wall Street, taking its cue from the course of prices, would be assuring everyone that nothing could stop such a 'bull movement' as this season's. The next day the same Wall Street (again with its eye on the movement of the market) would be plunged in the blackest pessimism over the future, not only of the speculation in stocks, but of the railways, the country's industries and American liberties themselves.

"In so far as the stock market's alternate violent collapse and violent recovery reflected sentiment on the attitude of labor, as described with what might be called a Trotzkyque precision in this week's daily proclamations at Washington; it may be supposed that two opposite temperaments in the financial community were in evidence. On one of them the threats and demands of the labor chiefs, their predictions of 'revolution,' had the effect of producing outright consternation. If it was not Lenine or Bela Kun at the gates of the White House, it was at least the confiscation of the railways, to be operated hereafter Russian fashion, or else it was the 'firing squad' in the offices of industrial corporations.

"But investors of the other temperament recalled that they had heard such things from excited labor leaders, long before the war, and that the republic had survived. They also probably observed that the brotherhood commanders at Washington always struck their highest note in the first manifesto, and that each subsequent outgiving was progressively further down the scale of violent speech until eventually the familiar threat of a strike unless wages was advanced was the main burden of the declaration.

The Market Movement.

"The stock market alternately responded to the panicky stampede of the first of the two financial groups, only to respond, when prices were sufficiently inviting, to the cool judgment and self-possession of the second. But it will none the less be observed that the series of spasmodic fluctuations left the general level of prices lower. The more sagacious judges of the political and labor situation were apparently also reserved on their judgment of a market which was passing into the always difficult period of an autumn of active business and high demand for money.

"So far as concerns the plan for future administration of the railways, formulated by an ambitious Chicago lawyer, that is in some respects pathetically naive. The employes are to run the railways, are virtually to decide on their own pay, and are to get whatever surplus remains of earnings and expenses after they are paid.

"This plan, so the brotherhood chieftains informed the public in their first proclamation, would not result in unfairly high wages, because labor would be looking for its dividend, and would be looking solely for a share in the saving 'from economics we ourselves introduce.'

The Question of Labor.

"One does not have to argue that to believe this professing of the uncertainty to the certainty is to take a very unusual view of labor's instincts. It is enough to say that granting such an arrangement it is scarcely compatible with human nature.

"It is noticeable that the week-end reviews of trade by the mercantile agencies unite in testifying to some reaction in business activities and this is readily enough ascribed to the week's early demands in political and labor circles, for a crusade against what was declared without specification or qualification to be unscrupulous 'profiteering' in view industrially naturally felt disposed to pause a moment until it could take the reckoning more clearly as to what conditions were likely to result.

"The relief from extreme misgiving which the stock market has reflected at the end of the week, would necessarily be displayed more slowly in the domain of production and trade. Meantime, we have in the week's news two interesting sidelights on the general situation—one, the report on business failures in July, which in number were much the smallest of any month on record; the other, the fact that exchange of bank checks in the United States last month similarly broke all precedent."

HOGS ARE UP SHARPLY IN TRADE AT NATIONAL YARDS

Top at Close of Week Is $23; Cattle Market Is Steady With Receipts Lighter.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill., Aug. 10.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Last Year.
Cattle	21,729	28,403	31,595
Hogs	36,316	45,399	43,691
Sheep	16,794	19,376	10,758

Regardless of the fact that last week's receipts of cattle were close to 7000 head smaller than the week before, there was no general change in the price basis on killing steers or the good classes of butcher cattle, these showing a uniformly steady basis for the week. However, common to medium grades of killing steers showed an advance of 25c to 40c at the close of business Friday over the Tuesday market, but this price improvement only offset a similar decline at the outset.

The feature of the week's trade was the strength in the market for common classes of cattle, such as canners, good Southern yearlings and the trashy grass mixed stuff, these advancing 50c to 75c per hundredweight.

Fancy heavy beef steers are selling at $17.50 to $18.50; prime beef steers, $16 to $17.50; choice to prime, $14.75 to $15.50; good to choice, $13.25 to $14.50; medium to good $12 to $13.25; common light fed steers, $10.50 to $12. Good to choice heavy fleshy feeders, $11 to $12; good to choice feeders, $10 to $11; common to medium, $9 to $10. Good to choice stockers, $9.50 to $11; common to medium, $7 to $9. Choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $15 to $18; good to choice, $12 to $15; common to medium, $8.40 to $12. Choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $11 to $13.50; good to choice, $9.50 to $11; medium cows, $8.50 to $9; cutters, $6.75 to $7.50; canners, $6 to $6.50; good to choice stock heifers, $7.50 to $8; stock cows, $6.50 to $7.25. Fat bulls, $10.50 to $12; heavy sausage bulls, $8 to $9; light sausage bulls, $6.50 to $7.50. Common quality fleshy yearlings, $6.50 to $7; same quality thin yearlings, $6 to $6.50.

Since week before last the hog trade has been of a very spasmodic turn, working downwards until during the early part of the week the very best heavy Northern hogs were selling at $22.10, but since that low spot was reached, receipts became lighter, as the week's total of 36,300 is 9000 head smaller than the week prior. Improvement followed, resulting in the general market averaging 75c to 90c higher than the low point.

The labor situation and the problematical strike of packing house employes, besides the railroad situation, were all factors in the irregularity of this trade, more so than in any other department, due to the fact that the Eastern order demand was virtually eliminated.

The big packers took decided advantage of the situation at the beginning of the week, though after receipts diminished so materially in later days, local trade requirements were ample to care for the smaller supply. The marked improvement that followed was, therefore, not due to the fact that demand had increased, but solely to the falling off in receipts.

Yesterday the market opened active and 10c to 15c higher than Friday's best time. Top was $23 for a few loads of fancy butcher hogs. Receipts were very light here, and city butchers and local packers bought all the good hogs offered. The close was steady with the best time and clearance good.

Bulk of the good hogs weighing 180 to 250 pounds, $22.50 to $23; choice pigs, 120 to 140 pounds, $20 to $21; light pigs a little more active and prices about a quarter above Friday, with 80 to 110 pound pigs at $12.50 to $18. Best roughs, $20.25.

In the sheep department the receipts were lighter also, falling below a normal run for this time of the year, and trade was quite active, particularly so on lambs, which show an advance of 50c to 75c for the week. Fat sheep, however, have been eagerly taken, though there has been no change in the price basis. Extreme top on lambs for the week was $16.50, while fat sheep netted top of $9. Bulk of the good to choice lambs are quoted at $15.75 to $16.25; medium flesh lambs, $13 to $15; bulk of the cull lambs, $9; little skippy kind of cull lambs, $7 to $7.50; choice breding ewes, $12.50 to $13.50; plain breeding ewes, $11 to $12.50; fat sheep, $9; choppers, around $6; bucks, $6; bulk of the canners, $3.

COTTON IS UP 59 POINTS IN NEW YORK TRADING

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—There was a further sharp rally in the cotton market this morning, on covering for over the week-end, stimulated by rather an unsettled weather outlook and the opening strength of the stock market. October contracts sold up to 32.40c, or 182 points net higher, and 180 points above the low level of yesterday morning, but at this level there was considerable realizing and later fluctuations were irregular.

October closed at 32.12c, with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 48 to 59 points.

The market opened firm, at an advance of 17 to 40 points on overnight buying orders and covering. There was some irregularity right after the call, but prices soon firmed up again and advanced rapidly toward the middle of the morning, with December selling at 32.63 and January at 32.50c, or about 80 to 88 points net higher on the general list.

The opening firmness of stocks was supposed to reflect increasing confidence inspired by the President's message taking a stand against any radical overnight change in the economic structure, and evidently contributed to a more optimistic tone in cotton.

The proposal to extend Government control to textiles attracted considerable attention, but was generally commented upon as designed to prevent undue profits in manufacture and distribution of goods, should such action be necessary, rather than to curb raw material values.

There was some trade buying on the advance, but the demand was attributed chiefly to covering, and after the advance of about $4 per bale, the buying was less active, with last prices showing reactions of about 25 to 35 points from the best. The Weather Bureau reported indications of a tropical storm in the East Carribean Sea, which led to apprehensions of an unfavorable weather map on Monday.

CORN JUMPS 6 CENTS IN WEEK-END TRADING HERE

Market Is Influenced by Bullish Crop Report and Wilson's Speech Before Congress.

Whirlwind changes of prices, extending to bewildering limits and accompanied by alternate general stampedes to sell or to purchase, made last week on the Merchants' Exchange as full of excitement as any equal period during the world war. The strain was severest immediately before and after the decision reached by President Wilson, and National Wheat Director Julius Barnes, that the Government would not be justified in selling the 1919 wheat crop at a sacrifice to be met from the Federal Treasury. Compared with a week ago the corn market ranged in price at the close yesterday from 1¼c decline to 6¾c advance. Oats were steady to a fraction lower.

Widening agitation against high cost of necessities kept the corn market on the downgrade until holders of all grain and provisions were in a state of semipanic, and there had been a shrinkage of 32c a bushel in the value of corn. Frantic buying ensued the instant that opportunity offered after the announcement that the Government policy as to wheat would no be altered, except by selling flour for domestic use at a reduction of $1 a barrel.

Railroad stock troubles, which to a large degree brought the movement of cereals to a halt, were responsible for much of the subsequent tension in the corn market. Yesterday's corn market advanced 6c to 6¾c owing to the bullish Government crop report and a favorable construction placed on President Wilson's address to Congress on the high cost of living.

In oats the governing factors were nearly identical with those which ruled corn. Oats were strong and about 2c higher in yesterday's trading.

The Government crop report was one of the most sensational ever issued. There was a loss of 130,000,000 bushels of grain during the month of July, or 7.5 per cent. Total showing of the five crops is 5,283,000,000 bushels, or 100,000,000 short of last year's. A wheat crop of 940,000,000 bushels, like all the other estimates, was relatively lower than generally expected. The only showing that came near the proper estimate was corn and oats. Losses on wheat were 222,000,000 bushels for the month, making the crop only 23,000,000 more than last year's, and nearly 300,000,000 short of the June showing.

There was a loss for the month of 125,000,000 bushels winter and 97,000,000 spring. Loss in spring wheat for the month were 32 to 37 points, with a condition of 53.9 per cent. A corn crop of 2,788,000,000 bushels is about an average, with a loss of 27,000,000 for the month. Oats lost 137,000,000 bushels and is 12,666,000,000, and 65,000,000 below the five-year average.

GOVERNMENT REPORT IS BULLISH CARD ON CORN

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Sensational crop losses shown in the Government report brought about a big advance today in the price of grain and provisions. Corn closed strong, 4c to 6¼c net higher, with September $1.94 to $1.94¼ and Dec. $1.56¼ to $1.57. Oats finished 1⅛c to 2½c up and provisions at a rise of 40c to $1.50.

Aside from an extraordinary general reduction of 7.5 per cent of grain crops during July, the corn trade was especially affected by official announcement that the probable yield of corn this season would be 27,000,000 bushels less than had been predicted a month ago. This cut appeared to mean that during 1919 not enough corn would be raised for domestic consumption and that short supplies would therefore continue to be the rule.

Bullish significance of such feature of the Government report seemed to become more and more evident as trading went on. Accordingly the chief new crop month, December, took the lead in the price advance and closed at the topmost point of the day.

President Wilson's speech did not operate as an offset and was even construed in some quarters as an encouragement for buying. Oats descended for the same reason as corn.

Provisions were strengthened by the upward swing as grain and hogs and by British Government commandeering of all available stocks of bacon, lard and ham.

There were acceptances by the Grain Corporation, however, of straight flour at prices ranging from $10.10 to $10.25 jute Baltimore so far as could be learned, but wires came late and 2000 barrels at $10.25 jute the only acceptance actually reported.

Hay Market.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Graham & Martin Grain Co., Merchants' Exchange.

Timothy hay market continues to rule active, with an excellent local demand for the better grades of hay on local account. The medium grades still continue to drag and are slow to move. The shipping demand is retarded to some extent by the embargoes on the different roads, still there is no congestion and while medium grades are slow to sell, they are working off to fair advantage.

The Nurse Who Walked. Rode and Flew Across the Continent in 28 Days at a Total Cost of Only $23

HERE is how Mrs. J. M. Franklin, a graduate of the Bellevue (N. Y.) Hospital training school for nurses, looked on her cross-country trip, recently completed.

No wonder—it has been remarked—that lots of people offered her a lift. They ranged from mule drivers, autoists and motorcyclists up to an aviator. They had to ask her twice, according to the conditions under which Mrs. Franklin made the trip—and it is said most of them did.

Mrs. Franklin was living at Seattle. Everybody was talking about how expensive it is to get East, and for Eastern tourists to go West—where tourists and their money are greatly appreciated. Mrs. Franklin thought she could make the trip to New York without using the railroads at less cost than if she used them.

All of which resulted in a wager. If Mrs. Franklin made the trip in a specified number of days and at less than the railroad fare, she was to be the winner of $2000.

The trip was to be made from coast to coast, without the use of a railroad under any circumstances. She was not to accept food without paying for it either in cash or services. She was to report at the Chamber of Commerce of each city through which she passed. And she was not to ask for a ride nor accept one if proffered unless she were asked twice. The proof of the pudding is that she walked only about 432 miles.

Mrs. Franklin completed her trip in 28 days at a cash expenditure of $23. The wager of $2000 therefore became hers. It is stated that she will give the money to the Red Cross.

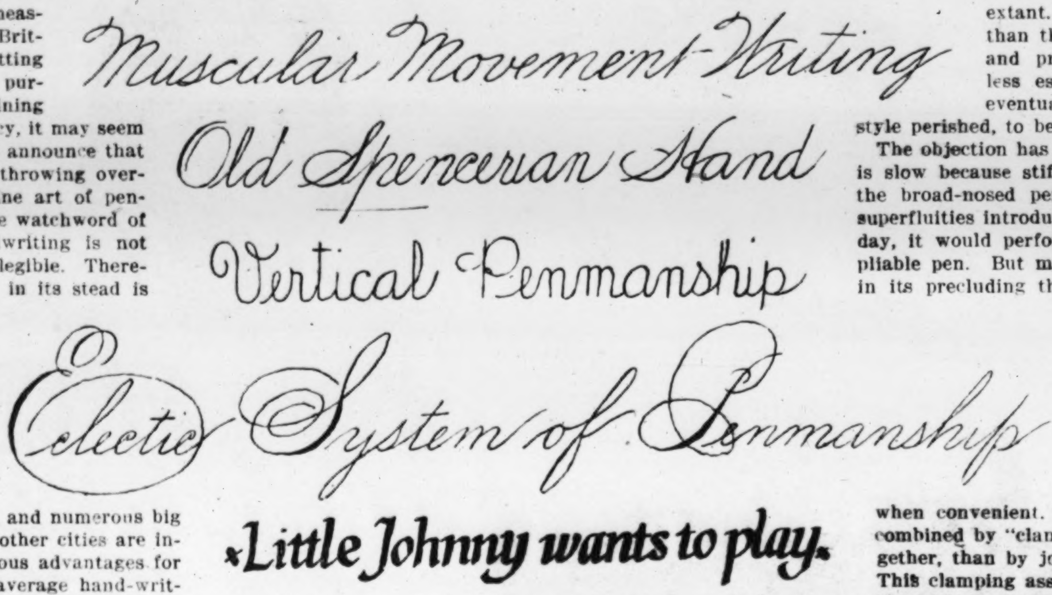
Shall We All Return to Print Writing?

British schools and business houses take lead in reviving legible "cursive" script of XVth century monks, to supplant undecipherable penmanship of present day—Special pen, with broad, stiff nub, is classic stylus used by great calligraphers of Middle Ages—Children, instead of dreading writing lessons, take pleasure in forming simple, artistic characters.



Muscular Movement Writing
Old Spencerian Hand
Vertical Penmanship
Eclectic System of Penmanship
Little Johnny wants to play.

Four systems of penmanship which have had a vogue in America, and, print writing, which experts say will relegate the others to the museum.

AMONG all the great measures which Great Britain is quietly putting into effect for the purpose of maintaining her trade supremacy, it may seem a minor matter to announce that she is well on the way toward throwing overboard completely the whilom fine art of penmanship. Efficiency is to be the watchword of the post-bellum era, and handwriting is not efficient because it is so rarely legible. Therefore, handwriting must go, and in its stead is being resurrected a system of print writing, which had its heyday in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Print writing is no longer a fad in England, but has attained the proportions of a movement. Thousands of school children are being taught to write in that manner, and numerous big business houses in London and other cities are introducing it because of its obvious advantages for commercial purposes over the average hand-written scrawl. There is little doubt that the method will soon gain a foothold in the United States.

Just what print writing is may be judged better from the example given on this page than by any attempted description. The chief essential is the abandonment of the fine-pointed, pliable pen, with its aptitude for Spencerian flourishes, and the adoption of an instrument with a broad, stiff point. When a child first begins to write in the new style, he is supplied with a pen the stub of which is nearly a quarter of an inch wide. Without pressure, such as must be exerted with the usual pen, it makes bold, broad strokes, and finer lines are made by simply changing the direction of the pen. So that the writer need pay no attention to pressure and may concentrate his attention upon guiding the pen. The advantages are increased legibility and uniformity. This is merely a revival of the classic pen wielded by masters of print writing 500 years ago.

Also, a different kind of ink must be employed, because the thin and fluent inks used with the pliable pen will blur and blot with the broad-nosed pen. Beginners in school use India ink, diluted with water.

Enthusiasts for the new—or old—style of writing declare it spells the doom of the various schools of penmanship which have flourished in the last half-century. Men and women of today may well have bitter memories of their studies in calligraphy when children. Very likely they were first initiated into the loops and slants, the florid decorations, the coloratura technique, so to speak, of the Spencerian system. Then came the vertical writing craze, sweeping over the copybooks of the country with its rigid, upright characters. Others may remember sitting at their desks and describing rolling circles and spirals, as a preliminary to acquiring the "muscular movement" method of chirography. Still others may have spent tortured hours in attempting to penetrate the mysteries of the "eclectic" system. And whatever the ordeals of childhood, it is rare to find a grown person today able to write a letter which the recipient can read without numerous pauses to decipher the hieroglyphics. We may have been able at one time to make perfect copies of "copperplate" mottoes at the head of our exercise books; most of us have by now declined to an enigmatical scrawl. There can be no doubt that penmanship is generally in a state of extreme and deplorable decadence.

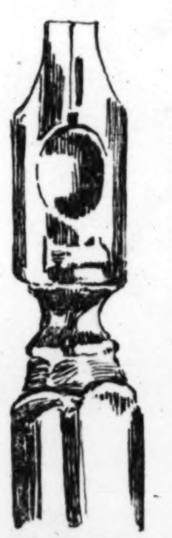
With the universal spread of typewriting and stenography, there are thousands of business men at present who never take pen in hand, from one year to another, except to sign letters and checks. And they take pains to make their signatures as intricate and indecipherable as possible, in the mistaken hope that thus the possibilities of forgery may be reduced. There are many others who use the typewriter so habitually that they have literally forgotten how to write, and can scarcely unpuzzle their own penmanship.

In addition, many who use pen or pencil frequently have been so inoculated with the speed habit that they rarely write a word as a whole, but leave out letters and abbreviate suffixes to mere dashes. The extreme tendency is illustrated in men like President Wilson, who has abandoned penmanship almost altogether and habitually employs shorthand.

Yet there are still multitudes of instances in which the typewriter cannot be employed, out of social courtesy. There are certain letters of an intimate and personal character which even a business man hesitates to intrest to a machine. Most of our social and family correspondence is confided to the fair sex, which still adheres to conservative pen and ink. And yet many of these correspondents find it difficult to indite a letter which does not call imperatively for an interpreter. Some even pride themselves upon the eccentricity of their penmanship.

It is for the benefit of such persons, and also for those branches of business, such as bookkeeping, in which handwriting still keeps a foothold, that the system of print writing has been revived.

Back in the fifteenth century, before the printing press came into general use, handwriting had undisputed possession of the field of literature. It developed two styles—a stately one for books, and a quicker one for everyday use. They were called respectively "formal" and "cursive" writing. They were not different in kind, but in the degree of care and detail. The cursive" was merely the "formal," made with less detail, a quicker representation of the same traditional shapes, modifying these shapes inevitably as time went on, but never independently.



The blunt pen (slightly enlarged) used by pupils while learning the art of print writing.

"Formal" writing was destroyed by the printing press, but the good types used in books and newspapers today are themselves derived from old pen-made ancestors. But "cursive" writing, bereft of the steadying, standardizing influence of the "formal" alphabets, fell a prey to all sorts of degradation and caprice, in the heedless fists of the uneducated on the one hand and on the other the irrelevant dexterities of experts.

So far has the latter process gone that in present-day script not a few of the letters—for instance, small and capital "S"—retain scarcely any recognizable semblance to the printed characters. Corrupting influences were the pliable pen and glazed paper, which tempted the writer to all sorts of needless and extraneous flourishes. Print writing is a revival of the "cursive" script of fifteenth century Italy.

This is the second time that this style of writing has been introduced into England. During the sixteenth century Roger Ascham, the celebrated scholar, led a movement which ended in an acknowledgment by the court and the universities that the Italian Renaissance script was superior in beauty and legibility to the so-called "Tudor" script then in use. Examples of Queen Elizabeth's handwriting in both styles are extant. The difference is even greater than that between Spencerian script and print writing today. But the less esthetic and lucid handwriting eventually prevailed, and the Italian style perished, to be resurrected 400 years later.

The objection has been made that the broad pen is slow because stiff. There is no doubt that if the broad-nosed pen were to attempt the facile superfluities introduced into letters since Ascham's day, it would perform less slowly than the fine, pliable pen. But much of the former's value lies in its precluding these ornaments. It can write fast enough a plain, simple hand. But it must dispense with loops and flourishes, as well as that connecting stroke between letters which has become a fetish.

In old Italian hands the connecting stroke was certainly employed, but only when convenient. The letters were more often combined by "clamping" or "bunching" them together, than by joining them one after another. This clamping assists legibility, for we read the "bunch" or shape of a word, rather than the individual letters forming it. This principle is followed in print writing as it is in print, where all the letters stand unjoined except in such combinations as "fi" and "fl."

It will be noted that print writing, while not so slanting as Spencerian script, is still not quite vertical. Modern authorities declare that upright characters are not quite so easily and naturally formed as those with a slight slant. It is as if rapid writing finds a line of lease resistance at an angle of from five to 10 degrees from the perpendicular. If the fingers and thumb, which are to do the work, are supported by the side of the wrist and hand in such a position that the eye can easily see what the pen is doing, the pen's easiest direction will be found in a line slightly inclined to the right.

"This copy book," say the directions in the exercise book used in English schools, "is an attempt to recommend a 'hand' taught in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, when handwork was still employed for the finest books. It is derived from the writing books chiefly of F. Lucas of Madrid and Giovan Batista Palatino of Venice."

The copybook itself is unusual in that the words and characters which the children are required to copy are far from perfect. They are reproductions of actual print writing, photographed on stone, and printed without any attempt to touch them up.

The blunt end of the pen really determines the position which the youngster's hand takes in beginning to write. Much of the old trouble is done away with over the right way to hold a pen, such as tormented the young idea when it set out to emulate Mr. Spencer. Every line in the copy book which the child is supposed to imitate begins with a little cross. This cross is really a guide. The child is asked to hold the pen so that it would make the cross at the beginning of every line, just as shown in the book—a thin upward stroke crossed by a thick downward stroke, made without pressure upon the pen. Thereafter, the upward and downward strokes of the line must be made parallel with the strokes of the cross. The cross, in other words, establishes the pose of pen and hand at the beginning of every line.

One of the chief recommendations of the new system is that with it learning to write has lost most of its terrors for the young. Mrs. Harriott Stanton Blatch, the suffragist leader, recently returned from England a convert to print writing. Her conversion occurred after seeing a class of English schoolgirls learning to write and enjoying it hugely.

"It was a treat to watch them," she says. "There they sat with their copybooks, patiently tracing the characters before them and getting real pleasure out of it. There was no evidence that they were going through the old grind that we and our parents went through trying to fashion words and letters that looked as if they had just stepped out of a steel engraver's establishment."

Mrs. Blatch brought home with her a copybook and samples of the stubby pens used in the English schools, and her 7-year-old granddaughter is now being initiated into the mysteries—or should one say the beauties?—of print writing, by way of improving a summer vacation.

pushed home a fresh cartridge, and the smoke cloud lifted just enough to permit them to perceive the farther doorway. A Mexican lay curled up in the center of the floor, his gun a dozen feet away; another hung dangling across an overturned stool, but the opening was vacant. Just outside, a fellow, wounded, was dragging himself out of range.

"Great Scot!" exclaimed Cavendish, excitedly. "Every shot counted. Here, load up quick. They'll try the window next. Get down!"

The warning was not an instant too soon, the hasty volley largely thudding harmlessly into the thick mattress, although a bullet or two sang past and found billets in the logs behind. Cavendish returned the fire, shooting blindly into the smoke, but the girl only lifted her head, staring intently into the smother, until the cloud floated away through the door. The attackers had again vanished, all semblance of them, except those two motionless bodies.

She had not before been conscious of any feeling; all she had done had been automatic, as though under compulsion; but now she felt strangely sick, and faint. An unutterable horror seized her and her hands gripped the edge of the bed to keep her erect. She could seem to see nothing but the ghastly face of that dead man hanging over the stool, and she closed her eyes. Yet this reaction was only momentary. She had fired in defense; in a struggle for the preservation of life and honor. Under spur of this thought she once more gained control.

But how still it was! Even the sound of voices had ceased; and out through the open door there was no sign of movement. The light seemed dimmer, also, as though the sun had sunk below the opposite cliffs, and night was slowly descending upon the valley. What could be happening out there? Were those men planning some new attempt? Or had they decided it was better to wait for a larger force? The silence and uncertainty were harder to combat than the violence of assault; she struggled to refrain from screaming. Cavendish never moved, his gun flung forward across the improvised barricade, the very grip of his hand proving the intensity of nervous strain. Something caused him to glance toward her.

"Looks as though they had enough of it," he said, grimly, "and had decided to starve us out."

"Oh, do you think so? I heard a noise then."

He heard it also, his glance returning instantly to the front, his form stiffening into preparation. For a moment neither could determine the meaning of the sounds. Then he cocked his gun, the sharp click echoing almost loudly in the stillness.

"Trying the window this time," he murmured. "Do you hear that? Be ready."

Nothing happened; even the slight noise in the outer room ceased; there was not a sound except their own breathing. The two knelt motionless, peering over the edge of the bed into the dim twilight, seeing nothing, each with finger on trigger—tense, expectant. Then, without warning, the flying figure of a man leaped across the doorway into the security of the opposite wall. It was done so quickly neither fired, but Cavendish licked his parched lips with a dry tongue.

"I'll get the next one who tries that trick," he muttered. "It will be easier than partridge shooting."

A minute—two passed, every nerve on edge; then a second flying form, almost a blur in the gathering gloom, shot across the narrow opening. The shotgun spoke, and the wildly leaping figure seemed to crumble to the floor—its lower half had reached shelter, but head and shoulders lay exposed, revealing gray hair and a white moustache. Cavendish sprang erect, all caution forgotten.

"It's Mendez," he cried. "I got the archfiend of them"——

A rifle cracked and he went plunging back, his body striking the girl and crushing her to the floor beside him. There was no cry, no groan of agony, yet he lay there motionless. She crept across and bent over him, almost dumb with fear.

"You—you are shot?" she made herself speak.

"Yes; they've got me," the utterance of the words a struggle. "It's here in the chest; I—I don't know how bad; perhaps if you tear open my shirt, you—you might stop the blood."

She could see nothing, not even the man's face, yet her fingers rent the shirt asunder and searched for the wound. It was not bleeding greatly, and she had no water, but not knowing what else to do, she tore a strip from her skirt and bound it hastily. He never moved, or spoke, and she bent her head closer. The wounded man had lost consciousness.

Alone, in the dark, she crept back on her knees to her place behind the barricade. Her hand touched the empty gun he had dropped, and she reloaded it slowly, only half comprehending its mechanism. The revolver, every chamber filled, rested on the upturned edge of the bed; her lips were firmly pressed together. Quietly, she pushed forward the barrel of the shotgun, and waited.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A NEEDLE IN A HAYSTACK.

THE little Marshal of Haskell had the reputation of being as quick of wit as of trigger finger. Startled as he was by that sudden apparition appearing before them in the dark road, and at being addressed by a woman's voice, the mention of the name Cassady gave him an instant clew. There was but one Cassady in the camp, and that individual's reputation was scarcely of a kind to recommend him in the eyes of the law. If any woman sought that fellow in this out-of-the-way spot, it was surely for no good purpose. Brennan caught his breath, these thoughts flashing through his brain. He leaned forward over his saddle horn, lowering his voice confidentially, and managing to achieve a highly meritorious brogue.

"Sure, Oi'm Cassidy," he admitted, grouchily. "How iver come yer ter guess thot?"

"I was sent here to meet you," she explained hurriedly, as though eager to have her task done. "I though maybe it wasn't you, with another man along. Who is he?"

"His noime's Crowley; just a friend o' moine; mebb yer know the lad?"

"No; certainly not. Does he go along with you?"

"Fer only a bit o' ther way;" he lowered his voice to even greater intimacy. "Shure, it's a perfectly still tongue the b'y has in the cheek o' him."

She laughed nervously.

"Well, I'm glad of that; and we'll not stand here discussing the matter. Do you know who I am?"

"Divil a thought have Oi."

"You were expecting to meet Mr. Enright, weren't you? That was what Bill Lacy told you. He was to explain to you just what you were to do."

Brennan mumbled something indistinctly, now thoroughly aroused to the situation.

"Well, Mr. Enright couldn't come, and Lacy is over across the creek yet, hunting down Ned eaton's murderer. I am Miss La Rue," she hurried on, almost breathlessly, "and I've brought you Lacy's note, which you are to give to that Mexican—Pasqual Mendez. You understand? You are to give it to him, and no one else. Lacy said you could kill your horse if necessary, but the note must be there by daylight tomorrow. Here—take it."

Brennan thrust it into an inner pocket and cleared his throat. There was no small risk in asking questions, yet, unless he learned more, this information might prove utterly useless. The note to Mendez meant little until he discovered where that bandit was to be found. He felt his flesh prickle in the intensity of his suppressed excitement.

"Shure now, Miss," he said, insinuatingly, "Mr. Lacy must hev sint more insthructions 'long with ye then them. All ther word thet iver come ter me wus ter saddle oop, ride down here an' mate this man Enright. I don't aven know fer shure whar ol' Mendez is—likely 'nough he be in Mexico."

"In Mexico!" indignantly. "Of course not. Lacy said you knew the trail. It's a place they call 'Sunken Valley'—out there somewhere," and Brennan could barely distinguish the movement of her arm desertward. "It's across that sand flat."

"Shoshone?"

"Yes; I couldn't remember the name. That's all I know about it, only Lacy said you'd been there before."

"Shure, miss," assured the Marshal, softly, clearly realizing that he had already gone the limit, and that any further questioning must lead inevitably to trouble "If it is Sunken Valley I'm ter ride ter, thet's aisy."

"Then it's good-night."

She vanished up the side trail, as though the wind had blown away a shadow. Except for the slight rustling of dried leaves under her feet, the two men, staring blindly through the darkness, could not have told the direction in which she had gone. Then all was silence, the mystery of night. Brennan gathered up his reins, straightening his body in the saddle. He glanced back toward the dim shade of his companion, chuckling.

"Some bit of luck that, Jim."

"Doesn't seem to me we know much more than we did before," Westcott answered gloomily. "Only that this chap Mendez is at a place called Sunken Valley. I never heard of it; did you?"

"No; I reckon it's no spot the law has ever had any use for. I've supposed all along them Mexican cattle thieves had a hidden corral somewhar in this country; but nobody has ever found it yet. Right now, thanks to this Miss La Rue, I've got a hunch that we're goin' to make the discovery, and put Bill Lacy and ol' Mendez out of business. But there's no sense of our gassin' here. We got a right smart bit o' ridin' to do afore daylight."

They advanced cautiously as far as the bridge, but at that point Brennan turned his pony's head southward, and spurred the reluctant animal up the steep bank. Without question Westcott followed and the two horses broke into a trot as soon as they attained the more level land beyond. They were slightly above the town now, and could gaze back at the glittering lights in the valley below. The sound of men's voices failed to reach them over the soft pounding of the ponies' hoofs on the prairie sod, but suddenly the distant crackling of a half-dozen shots pierced the silence, and their eyes caught the sparkle of the discharges, winking like fireflies in the night. Before they could draw up their mounts, the fusillade had ended, and all beneath them was unbroken gloom.

"Must be rushing the rock," commented Westcott.

"More likely saw something and blazed away at it, just as they did at that log," and Brennan laughed. "Anyhow, they haven't discovered we have vanished yet. With an hour more we'll be where trails are unknown."

"In the desert?"

"That is the only safe hiding place around here. Besides, we are carrying a message to Mendez."

"Without the slightest knowledge of where that party is."

"Well, hardly that, Jim. I may not know exactly, but I've got a glimmer of a notion about where the cuss hangs out, an' I'm going to have a hunt for it. There's $5000 posted down in Arizona for that fellow, dead or alive; an' I need the money. Besides, I reckon this yere Miss Donovan, an' yer ol' partner—what's his name?—sure, Cavendish—will be mighty glad to see us."

There was a few moments of silence, both men evidently busied with their thoughts; then Westcott asked:

"What is your idea, Dan?"

The Marshal rode steadily, humped up over his saddle horn, his eyes on the uncertainties in front.

"I ain't really got none," he admitted, doggedly, "less it be a blind trust in Divine Providence; still I got a medium strong grip on a few things. That Capley girl told you that Matt Moore drove out on the ridge road?"

"Yes; I asked her about that twice."

"Well, he likely has headed for this yere Sunken Valley. That's point number one. But he never followed the ridge road very far, for it skirts the desert. He must have turned off south—but where?"

"Near the lone cottonwood is my guess."

"Why?"

"Because there is a swale there of hard sand, which is easily followed, and leaves no trail. On either side for miles the sand is in drifts, and no two horses would ever pull a wagon through it. This hard ridge, which is more rock than sand, goes straight south to Badger Springs, the only place to get water. I was there once, three years ago.

La-May Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. Save this notice.

SIX-YEAR-OLD ST. LOUIS CHILD ACTRESS BECOMES THE FAMILY BREADWINNER

Little Sarah Muirhead, who hopes to become another Mary Pickford, plans to enter the "Big League" of the movies at Los Angeles — Promises a big cherry-colored auto to her mother when she reaches the star class in reward for parent's sacrifices in developing her talent — Versatile child has had much success here and many predict for her a successful career -:- -:- -:-

WITHOUT drawing on the imagination in any way, little Sarah Muirhead, who has just gotten a good start in her sixth year, may well be considered the breadwinner of her family, and despite her few years she philosophically grasps the situation and looks forward to the day that she will rival "Baby" Marie Osborn and the Lee sisters in the motion picture world. She has laid her plans so well that she has already picked out the automobile she intends to buy for her invalid widowed mother when she attains the goal that lures her on to Los Angeles.

It is to be a large limousine, of cherry color, and is to be driven by a careful chauffeur, who will add as much weight and dignity to his profession as his brethren who perform like service for Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charley Chaplin and the other stars who have been filmed into the Midas class.

Little Sarah has received so much encouragement from her teachers and some of the St. Louis movie exponents that she sees only the pot of gold that lies beyond her long journey to California, and to her childish, optimistic view, there is no chance whatever that it will turn out to be a rainbow pursuit.

To execute her program of taking care of her mother and two of her sisters in befitting style, it will be necessary that she obtain an engagement without an exasperating delay, as the family surplus will be sadly shattered by the time the expedition reaches California; hence, this dainty worshiper at the shrine of Thespis is pulling hard for action, quick and satisfactory.

Mrs. Muirhead is in ill health and has been ordered to leave this climate by the physician who has been attending her, and as she has daughters 8 and 13 years of age respectively, in addition to her little actress, she will have to take them along, even though the expense will be great. She also has a daughter 17, who was married a few weeks ago, and a boy of 15 who will be able to care for himself. She has disposed of her furnishings at the family home at 1712 Glasgow avenue and has Sarah's many costumes packed away, ready for the long journey that means so much to the precocious child-actress. Her last engagement was at the Chautauqua, where she earned as much as $35 for a single appearance in character songs, dances and impersonations.

Sarah began her professional career at the age of 4, when she played the part of a lost child in a dramatic performance given by the students at the Yeatman High School. She played it so well that her mother, despite her very limited means, was induced by friends to send the child to a dancing school and later to an establishment on King's highway where acting and expression are taught. Sarah liked it so well and injected so much zeal and effort into the whole scheme that she made very fast progress and in time her services were frequently called at various entertainments, where she was received with much favor. The Children's Loyalty League, which was very active throughout the war, made many requests for this versatile youngster, and her next advance along the highway of fame came from various motion picture theaters, which took a fancy to her songs and characterizations.

As a "rich little girl" Sarah feels very much at home, as she can see nothing but success in her "movie" plans.

In the role of the Italian child she finds a splendid field to introduce her great, brown eyes —a real asset in the motion-picture art.

As just a romping lassie in the six-year-old class, this precocious kiddie is childish simplicity and innocence personified.

She showed by her ability to register expressions and interpret the varied emotions called for in her songs and recitations that she was far beyond the usual type of child prodigies, and when it was suggested that she would be a success in screen acting, plans were formulated for the trip to the city of gelatine stars.

When the motion picture men held their State convention here about six weeks ago, Sarah Muirhead was one of the attractions staged for the entertainment. It was after getting the severe judgment of some of those men that the mother made her decision to dispose of her possessions and make the effort for the ambitious child who has always been sure. Mrs. Muirhead was hastened in this determination by the advice of her physician, who told her it would be absolutely necessary to leave St. Louis, and when she suggested California, he said it was just the right place.

Of course, little Sarah, who had been giving much of her childish thoughts to the same place on the map, acquiesced in this conclusion. Then she told her mother of a wonderful dream that had given her much happiness, and as she had the same vision three times she knew it would come true. She saw herself in a real moving picture play and noticed the people were crowding the theater to see the show, which they all enjoyed very much. The dream progressed to the stage where little Sarah was getting such a nice salary that she was able to buy the big cherry car she had promised her mother.

While Mrs. Muirhead has many letters testifying to her child's natural ability and remarkable facility of expression, she has no assurance that her quest will be a success. She is hopeful that Sarah will win her way deservedly to an engagement. She has an uncle in the Fox studios who will give all the help he can, but she realizes that the material that offers in such marts will have to undergo a severe test. From her own knowledge of her little girl's gifts she is hoping for the best and that in the end the aspiring child will gain a place among the foremost in the juvenile class. She understands, as well, that the new plays are calling constantly for clever children who know how to act difficult parts, and she has unlimited faith in Sarah's self-confidence and resourcefulness on the stage, or before the camera.

"She has never known the meaning of stage fright," the mother says, "and no matter how large a crowd is in front of her, she goes on with her song, recitation or dance, as the case may be. If she forgets a line, nobody in the audience is going to notice it, as she runs along with something else to fill the gap. One night she sang a negro song at a prominent picture house on Grand avenue, and the management, without letting her know, hired a real darkey to sit in the balcony and furnish the echo, and the colored person was the possessor of a powerful and melodious voice. When he broke in, Sarah just gave one look in his direction and then went on with her song as though nothing had happened. She was then just a few months past her fifth birthday. It was the same way

Bringing Waters of Missouri River Under Control

Thus is the first great obstacle to harnessing the river overcome. An effective means has been found of placing piling. That affords a foundation from which to work. Heretofore the foundation has been impossible of attainment, and naturally a superstructure has been also out of the question. George Fitch, the noted humorist, who gained his first widespread fame by writing funny things about the Missouri, remarked something to the effect that while there might be other rivers fully as long and just as wet as the "Old Muddy," none other could equal it for dissipations and infinite caprice. He dressed it up with a personality, outlined for it a set of habits and declared it to be equipped with a sense of humor.

As to this last, it doubtless seemed rather grim humor to the many farmers whose property has been swallowed up by the stream. For instance, there was James Love, who, it is related, some years ago refused $80,000 for his farm of 320 acres on the banks of the Missouri, near Randolph, Mo. Since that time the farm has been completely washed away by the river. Then there was the town of Barney, Neb. Thirty years or so ago, it was a prosperous place, with a bank, a railroad station, many comfortable residences and roseate hopes. Gradually the river encroached and the houses that could not be readily removed to the bluffs were swept into the river. Various towns along the Missouri have either been moved back or the stream has moved away from them.

There are numerous instances of farmers suffering smaller losses than that of Love. Bites of 10, 20 or 40 acres often have been taken out of an individual's holdings during a flood period. Much litigation has resulted, and numerous conferences between officials of the different states. For oftentimes the "bite" taken out by the river on one side may be added on at the other, and only a short distance away. Close enough, in other words, that the farmer who has lost it can, or believes he can, identify it. But since the river forms the boundary lines along most of its course, the result is that the land clipped off in Nebraska, say, is added unto a farmer's possessions in Iowa. That complicates matters when the Nebraska farmer sets out to fetch home his errant farmland.

Near Wellington, Mo., it is stated that the river took a sudden notion, some four or five years ago, to change its channel. Many suffered, but, as usual, some gained. One woman in the district, the story goes, owned an island in the river. It consisted of about 500 acres—quite an important holding in itself. The river began to build out into the stream until it formed 1200 acres of new land, separated from the island by only a small slough. This intervening water prevented her from claiming the land, but it was surveyed by Lafayette County and sold to the woman for $1.25 an acre.

The hollow piling, sunk into the river bed by means of the hydraulic stream which forces a place for it in the sand, is, of course, only the beginning of the new harnessing and reclamation process. But, as before stated, it is the foundation and therefore primarily necessary to the success of the work. In the past piling has been sunk in some places and local results have been satisfactory. But oftentimes the river has cut in above such work and at a point where pilings could not be sunk, and then all the work that looked so secure has gone for nothing. The method of utilizing the piling placed under the new conditions is as simple as the method that solved the problem of getting the piling into place.

Before the piling are put down heavy steel cables are attached to them. To the other end of these cables are fastened objects that will float—trees, boards, old gates, logs and similar material. This catches not only the sediment that is blown out of the four-inch pipe through the vents, but all sort of material that comes along. The result is that a sandbar soon forms, reaching the surface and in time becoming a part of the banks. If the stream rises the floating obstructions rise with it, and the sandbar grows in size. If the river starts cutting at another point a similar obstruction is placed there—since it is quickly and inexpensively done—and presently, by something like a jetty system composed of these various made sandbars, the river is trained to go where it is wanted.

Engineers who for years unsuccessfully tried one experiment after another for controlling the ravages of the Missouri were at first skeptical about Bignell's device. It is stated now, however, that they have become convinced and are recommending the method. As a result of various satisfactory experiments with the work, land prices have advanced greatly in the districts along the Missouri that previously were subject to flood. Thousands of acres are being bought up and quite a fever of speculation is reported to have set in particularly along the banks where the stream flows between Nebraska and Iowa.

21 Years' Sequel to "Carrying a Message to Garcia"

Hernandez has had a career of notable efficiency since the independence of Cuba. As Postmaster-General he has virtually built that department from the ground up. It controls also the Government-owned telegraph and wireless. There are 15 substations in Havana alone, and the system has been extended to the most remote districts of the republic.

Hernandez and Menocal were friends long before the days of Garcia. That friendship has extended over a period of more than 40 years—from the days of political slavery in Cuba to freedom and the republic, through exile, in camp and field, through battles and defeat and starvation to victory and prosperity. Hernandez has been chairman of the Conservative party of Cuba, and his wide acquaintance and popularity and recognized political sagacity are credited with having had much to do with Menocal's nomination and election to the presidency.

Neither Menocal nor Hernandez were "headquarters heroes" in the savage warfare of the Cuban rebellion that preceded the Spanish-American War. They fought bravely, even desperately, and oftentimes side by side. Funston, in his "Memories of Two Wars," speaks of them, giving high credit to the present President, and reciting in one instance the details of a daring charge in which Hernandez led a little band of 150 men against a Spanish stronghold—and took it. Friendship thus cemented is a tie that binds, and President Menocal is noted throughout Cuba for his loyalty to his friends.

Two candidates are in the field for the Conservative nomination for the presidency of Cuba. Neither of these is Hernandez. The elections take place contemporaneously with those in the United States. Menocal's indorsement is regarded as the deciding element as to who is nominated. But would his indorsement gain the election for the nominee? Would the supporters of the one not indorsed be piqued and sulk in their tents? It is conceded that the Conservatives need all the strength they can rally if they would win the next election. The opposition party, many believe, is numerically superior. But it also faces a possible breach.

What more likely—the question is on many lips in Havana these days—than that Menocal may bring out his old-time friend and lieutenant, Hernandez, as a candidate, rather than risk a division by supporting either of the others, and on the theory that the Postmaster-General's personal popularity would draw sufficiently from among dissatisfied Liberals to win for the Conservatives? There, and on his own record, rests the case for "the man who answered the message to Garcia."

Child Actress Becomes Family Breadwinner

when, at 4, she made her first appearance with her doll in her arms at the Yeatman High, in the part of a lost child. She never faltered and needed very little help from anyone. The people who have encouragd us set a great deal of store by her capacity for interpreting a song or recitation. She can portray the emotions of sorrow, surprise, anger, joy, and through the medium of her big brown eyes give a most vivid life and character to the parts, and, best of all, she does it all so easily, without ever a suggestion of work or effort. It does not interfere with her school duty a particle. She has been attending Elliott School and has kept well up with her studies. She has been trained at Madame Cirode's dancing school and Mrs. Wientge's dramatic institution, besides giving afternoon and evening performances quite frequently, and has never shown the fatigue that might be expected from such a litle girl. I have never permitted this program to retard her other school instruction."

There is a theatrical history in the Muirhead family, furnished by Sarah's mother, who played juvenile parts with Lawrence Hanley and Marie Wainwright years ago at the old Suburban Garden, under the stage name of Gertrude Mansfield. Her maiden name was Leona Banxson and she has lived in St. Louis all her life. When she married Muirhead, she gave up the stage entirely to devote all her time to her children. When he died Sarah was only a few months old and the mother was left on her own resources and performed employments of different kinds in the task of keeping her little colony together. When she decided on the Los Angeles venture she was attending to a doctor's office at 1712 Glasgow avenue, receiving free of rental for herself and family the remaining rooms in the house.

tle financial poultices on other people's ills," returned Hamilton. "No, thanks; it's not enough good. They can have the money just the same. That can be amputated with profit to all concerned. I'll leave it to hospitals and homes for the helpless, especially for fractional humanity—needy remnants. But I decline absolutely, once and for all, to accept the noble future you have outlined. I grant you it would be heroic. But have you ever heard of great heroism with no stimulus to arouse it?"

He raised his hand as he spoke, and brought it down with a gesture of finality. As it fell, it dropped on the little letter. Mechanically, his fingers closed on it.

His boy! His brave little boy, who had not flinched or cried, because he meant to be just like Capt. Hamilton. What would he think when the truth came to him years hence, as it must do? What would she think now, the mother who was glad that her son should "love and admire a brave man"? The small missive was a stimulus.

Hamilton turned to Van Buren again, checking with a little shake of the head the impetuous speech that rushed to that gentleman's lips.

"Just wait one moment," he said, thoughtfully.

He leaned back and shut his eyes, and as he did so the familiar scene of months past came suddenly before him—the quaint old foreign rooms, the carved mantelpiece, with full-length portraits on each side, the mother, the curly-haired boy. His life had been a lonely one, always, Hamilton reflected. Few, pathetically few, so far as he knew, would be affected by its continuance or its end. But the manner of its end—that was a different matter. That might touch individuals far and wide by its tragic example to other desperate souls. Still, he was not their keeper. As for Charlie——

Ah, Charlie! Charlie, with his childish, but utter hero worship; Charlie, with his lighted candle; Charlie, with his small-boy love and trust—Charlie would be told some little story and Charlie would soon forget. But—what would Charlie think of him some day when the truth was out—Charlie who at 5 could set his teeth and bear pain stoically because his hero did! Because he was "His Boy"!

Hamilton's mind returned to that problem and again lingered there. No, he could not disappoint Charlie. Besides, Van Buren was right. There was work, creditable work to do. And to be plucky, even if only to keep a brave little chap's ideal intact, to maintain its helpful activity, was something worthy of a stanch man. Would he wish his boy to go under when the strain against the right thing was crushing?

He laid the letter down gently, deliberately turned to his friend, and smiled as Van Buren had not seen him smile since their ingenuous boyhood days. There was that sweetness in the smile which homage to woman makes us dub "feminine," and something of it, too, in the way he laid his hand upon his chum's shoulder.

"All right, old sawbones," he said, slowly. "You may do whatever has to be done. I'll face the music. Unbuilding one man may build up another."

A TWENTY-ONE YEARS' SEQUEL TO "CARRYING A MESSAGE TO GARCIA"

Previously untold story of Lieut. Rowan's perilous trip—How "The Man Who Answered the Message" may become a presidential possibility in Cuba—Energy and efficiency in "The Land of Manana" :: ::

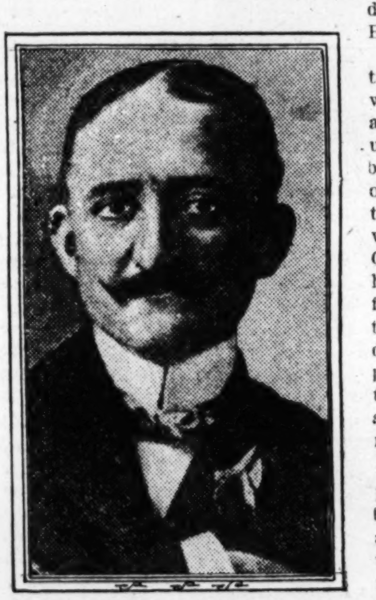
WHEN Elbert Hubbard wrote his brochure, "Carrying a Message to Garcia," he gave world renown to a daring performance, efficiently carried out. A sequel to the Master Roycrofter's story bids fair to be written into the annals of Cuban history within the next year. Its opening chapters are drafted even now.

Hubbard's booklet had to do with the manner in which Lieut. Andrew S. Rowan, an American officer, went to Cuba, found Garcia and delivered to him a message from President McKinley. The message, among other phases, carried a request that Garcia send to Washington a reliable man who knew Cuba thoroughly and who could advise and assist the United States War and Navy Departments in plans for going to the aid the island's insurgents in their contest with Spain. Rowan went to Jamaica, crossed to Cuba in an open boat, found Garcia in the all but impenetrable Cuban jungles and delivered the message.

Now, one of the men who answered the message to Garcia—who was, in fact, himself that answer—may become President of Cuba. Hubbard's story—briefly told, gaining quickly a circulation of millions and later being translated into a dozen or more languages—barely refers to Rowan's actual experiences in carrying the message, and not at all to the men who responded to it. It is the manner in which Rowan did what he was told to do that is celebrated in Hubbard's preachment: the efficiency and intelligence he displayed.

Efficiency and intelligence combine, also, in the sequel. In this sequel, too, are glimpses of the same quality of courage that carried Rowan so successfully on his perilous mission, glimpses also of honesty tried in the fire of Latin-American politics and of friendship put to the test.

Rowan, a Virginian by birth and a Kansan by adoption and marriage, attached in 1898 to the Army Intelligence Division, took ship for Jamaica, thence by night relays of carriages furnished by the Cuban junta at Kingston to the coast, by boat past the Spanish naval patrols to Cuba and three days interior on horseback to Gen. Calixto Garcia's camp. The feat was perilous; Rowan while carrying it out, was a spy, from a military standpoint, subject to execution if captured. He was made a Lieutenant-Colonel in the volunteer army upon his return and was highly praised by Gen. Miles in a letter to the Secretary of War.



Lieut. Andrew S. Rowan, celebrated by Elbert Hubbard in "Carrying a Message to Garcia," as he appeared in 1898, when he made the perilous trip to see the leader of the Cuban insurgents.

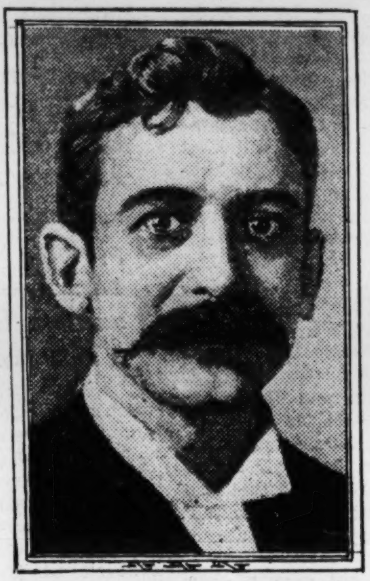
Col. Charles Hernandez, Postmaster-General of Cuba during the American occupation; under Palma, first President of Cuba; again under the American interventional government, and at present holding that office for the second four-year term under President Menocal; personal friend of McKinley and Roosevelt and of Gens. Wood, Funston, Crowder and many other prominent Americans, is the man who answered the message to Garcia.

Hernandez was a Colonel serving with Gen. Mario Menocal, now President of Cuba, then commanding a brigade under Garcia, leader of Cuba's rebellion against Spain. When Rowan delivered his message Garcia sent for Hernandez and two other Cuban officers and told them to report at once to Washington.

When McKinley gave Rowan the message to Garcia Rowan did not ask, "Where is he at?" according to Hubbard. Neither did he inquire as to Garcia's initials, or whether the message could not as well be sent by mail. He took the letter, we are told, sealed it in an oilskin pouch, which he strapped over his shoulders, landed on the coast of Cuba, and, making his way through the jungle, presented the message to Garcia.

No more did Hernandez and his associates ask questions. But Hernandez carried no return message in his poncho; he had no poncho, nor scarcely any clothes. A man who was present when he got the command to report to Washington, recently described his outfit. It consisted of a badly frayed straw hat, a shirt, roughly patched until little of its original material remained, a pair of trousers worn off a foot at the bottom from contact with brush and briars, but relieved by being stuffed into the tops of heavy boots, a pistol and a machette.

Rowan reached Garcia's camp in what is so often called "the land of manana." But "it was evident that Gen. Garcia was a 'today' man," Rowan wrote afterwards, in describing the meeting. "No 'manana' man was he." Rowan reached Garcia's headquarters at noon. "Gen. Garcia asked me if I could leave that night, and I answered in the affirmative. In an hour our mounts were standing before the door."



Postmaster - General Hernandez of Cuba, "the man who answered the message to Garcia," as he appeared at time of the Spanish-American War, and who is spoken of as a presidential possibility in his country.

Selected to accompany Rowan on the return with the amazingly quickly arranged reply to his message were Gen. Enrique Collazo, Hernandez and a physician, Dr. Bieta, celebrated for his familiarity with the diseases that ravaged Cuba in those days. With them were sent three privates. Collazo was an artillery officer, a graduate of the artillery school at Segovia, Spain, highly recommended by Garcia. "The more I knew of Collazo the more I liked and admired him," Rowan says.

The party rode until midnight, had a supper "captured from the forest," slept a few hours and continued their trip towards the coast. They forded the Cauto River, then at flood stage, riding all of that day and the next and two thereafter, reaching the coast May 5, having left Garcia the afternoon of May 1, the day Dewey was sailing into Manila Bay, on the other side of the world.

Of Hernandez, companion on the trip, Rowan said at the time: "He was educated in the United States, and his service to Cuba has been unflinchingly loyal. His health has been ruined, and he bears the marks of Mauser bullets that passed through his right lung. He it was who planted the mines along the Cauto, and lay in ambush on the high banks back from the river for the Spanish lanchas, bearing troops and supplies for the Bayamo district. His knowledge of the topography and his acquaintance with the geological and botanical resources of the country I found a never-ending source of instruction."

A week or so before Rowan reported to Garcia, Hernandez and two or three companions had cached a small boat at a certain point on the coast. The day thereafter Hernandez had returned and recached it, as one might say, in another place. Not that he suspected his companions—but he wanted to be sure of a boat in case of need, and there were many lurking Spaniards thereabout and not a few renegades among the Cuban forces. So he led Rowan and his companions to the point where he knew the boat would be found, threw into it some tent flaps, designed for sails, and, with water and a scant supply of provisions aboard, they prepared to start on the sea leg of the trip to Washington. There was room for only six men, so Bieta had to be left behind.

Five days later they hailed a fishing boat filled with Nassau negroes and were taken aboard. But in those five days they had passed through the hell of a tropical hurricane at sea and lived on a scant three-day supply of food and water. Also, on the third day out, one of the Cuban oarsmen had suddenly crouched lower in his boat and whispered: "See, Colonel, a smoke—another smoke—more smokes." One, two, three, five, eight, twelve "smokes" they counted as they dropped their tent flap sails and made themselves as inconspicuous as possible in the little boat.

It was only after they reached the United States that the messengers from Garcia learned that it was not a Spanish fleet they had eluded, but that the "smokes" which presently transformed themselves into a line of warships, was Sampson's fleet.

Hernandez had no money when Garcia ordered him to report at Washington. Garcia had none to give him. They had been for three years or more in the Cuban mountains and jungles, fighting Spain. So when Hernandez reached Nassau he was, of course, without funds. He borrowed $15 of a friend, spent $10 for a "hand-me-down" suit and made for the west coast of Florida. Reaching Tampa, almost the first man to grasp his hand was Fred Funston. Hernandez and Funston had fought side by side in Cuba when Funston was there as a filibustering commander of artillery.

"Here, Charley"—then, as now, almost everybody called him "Charley"—"here," said Funston, "is some money," and he produced a roll of bills, undoubtedly suspecting his friend's needs. "I expect to be sent into Cuba, and I'll have no use for this money. Take it, and when we meet again—if we do, and you have the money—you can give it back to me." But the Cuban was proud; he refused the money.

His transportation and meals to Washington were taken care of by the army people, of course, and when he got there he was put up at the Army and Navy Club. There he worked literally day and night. He knew Cuba as possibly no other man knew it, and he does today. Every town, every Spanish post of importance, every mountain range, every valley, it is said, he was able to locate for our army—and more. Cuba's coast has a literal thousand bays and bights and inlets and harbors; down almost to the least important he was able to put these on the Navy Department maps. And so the days and nights passed. The picturesque Cuban received much publicity and his name and the fact that he was in Washington on an important secret mission became widely known.

In the meantime he was quartered at the Army and Navy Club—luxuriously quartered as compared to what he had experienced in the field, even as the food there was as of a feast to the gods when he recalled his fare for four years past. But of money he had not a sou—and he still wore the $10 hand-me-downs bought at Nassau. There seemed no way for him to get money or clothes except to appeal to his new friends at Washington, and pride and a fear of prejudicing the cause of Cuba and his old friends in the jungle kept him from doing that.

Then one day came an invitation—which, under the circumstances, was virtually a command—to appear at a review of troops at Washington by Gen. Nelson A. Miles. Gay days, those. Khaki was not the rule in the United States army, and dress uniform was not in the discard. And, there were birds of brilliant plumage from abroad to be encountered on every hand. Especially did these show forth at general reviews—attaches of the then great military Powers of Europe, resplendent in brilliant uniforms, with cockade and feathered headdress, many of them; stiff, rigid, unapproachable except from their own classes.

What was to be done? Well, it had to be faced. So the Cuban rode forth, on review day, on a huge American cavalry horse—twice the size, it must have seemed to him, of the wiry little pony he rode in the field—his hand-me-down trousers drawn halfway to his knees, disconsolate, humiliated. But compensation hovered near.

At the parade grounds he stood somewhat aside—and longed for the jungles. Presently there was a blare of trumpets and up the field rode Miles and his staff at a gallop. And when they came to the group Miles rode straight ahead, past them all—and up to Hernandez, to whom he extended his hand.

The crowd knew who he was and appreciated what had happened, and a great cry went up. "The Cuban!" "The Cuban!" they shouted, and a few ventured "Viva Cuba Libre." Later, when Hernandez accompanied Miles in his private car to Tampa, he heard the cry many times at way-station stops—sometimes even before the name of Miles was heard. And when he went back to Cuba, he, too, carried a message—and it also was to Garcia. It was the necessary information to co-ordinate the attack of the Cuban forces and those of the Americans on Santiago.

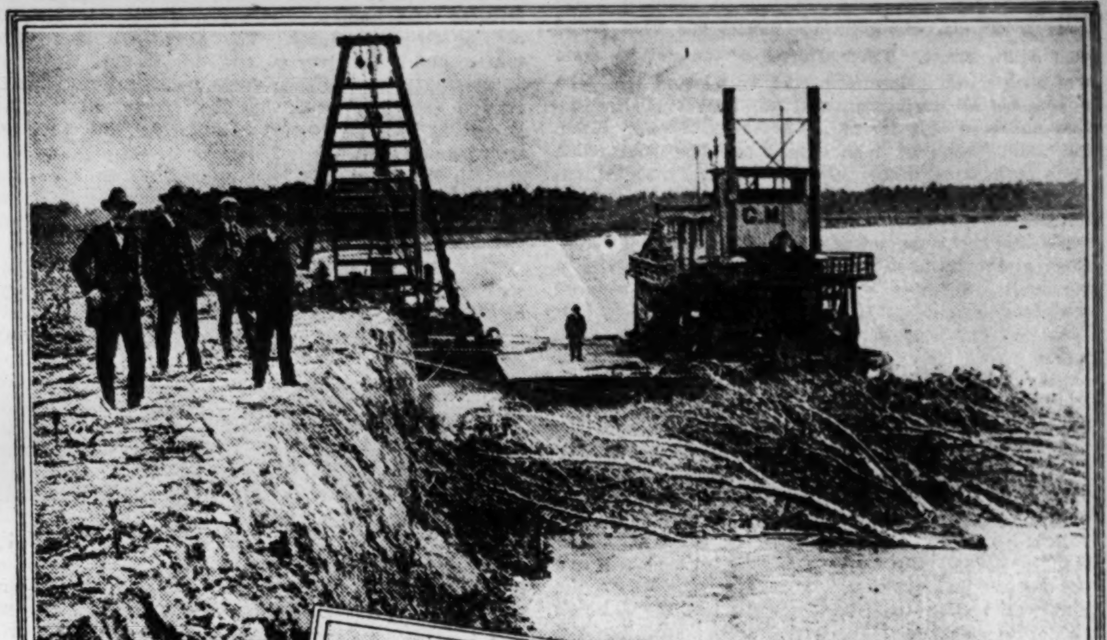
Bringing Waters of the Missouri River Under Control

How a simple engineering device, just recently applied, forms a basis for keeping the rampageous stream within its banks where heretofore it has erratically changed its channel without warning, oftentimes taking away areas of valuable farm lands in a night -:- -:-



Machinery for sinking specially constructed piling and first stage of obstructions designed to build up new land which serves to hold the Missouri River within its banks.

THE Missouri River is being brought under control. By a simple mechanical device, tried out long enough to apparently make certain that it is effective, the rampageous stream is being harnessed at certain points in Nebraska, with good prospects that it ultimately will be made into a mild and peaceful citizen along its entire length. It is rather widely known that such has not been its characteristics in the past.

Between Iowa and Nebraska, particularly, the stream has caused trouble. It flows there through a broad valley, and at flood time it has times without number changed its channel without giving notice of its intent. Soil along the river is composed of silt washed down from the adjoining hillsides for centuries past, and the farm land in these days of big prices for corn, wheat, cattle and hogs, is therefore of almost fabulous value. But the situation has had its seamy side for the land owner. Many a man has gone to bed happy over the possession of broad acres, only to awake next morning and find them gone down the river in a flood or transferred across to his neighbor on the other side.

Efforts without number have been made to force the Missouri to stay within a fixed channel, but they have never been successful until now. Citizens, railroads running along the banks of the river and the Federal Government all have experimented in this direction, spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in the work, but without permanent effect. The method now being used was invented by Edward Bignell of Lincoln, Neb., a railway superintendent. It is very simple.

Its basis is a concrete piling, into which two pipes running its entire length, are inserted. The ordinary piling cannot be hammered very deeply into the river bed because of the pressure of the sand at the bottom. One of the pipes in the Bignell piling is two inches in diameter, the other four. Hydraulic pressure, applied from a steam-driven barge through the two inch pipe, bores a hole into the river bottom. A hydraulic-pressure stream is played at the same time through the four-inch hole, but with the jets shooting upwards. Vents are provided along the side of the piling, and the upward pressure of the four-inch stream forces out the sediment that has been dislodged by the two-inch stream. So effectively are these two operations performed that it is said to be the work of from only six to 10 minutes

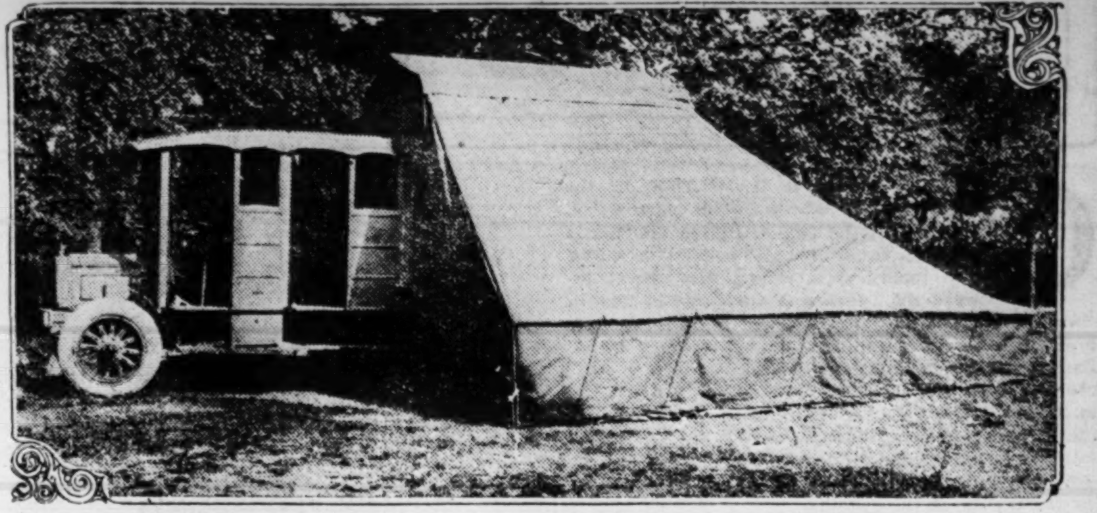
"Made land" resulting from silt and other deposits above obstruction, thereby diverting river from possible change of channel and the carrying away of valuable farm land likely to result.

Filling in on the foundation of sand and silt that has formed above an obstruction made possible by use of the new piling.

Off For a Land Cruise in the "St. Louis"

A cross-continent motor tour as a health measure — Specially built car furnishes "all modern conveniences" — Hawaii ultimate destination — How a St. Louis business man and his friends prepared for the long journey :: :: :: ::



How Myerson and his party camp at various places en route to the coast. There is ample room for 6 or more persons.

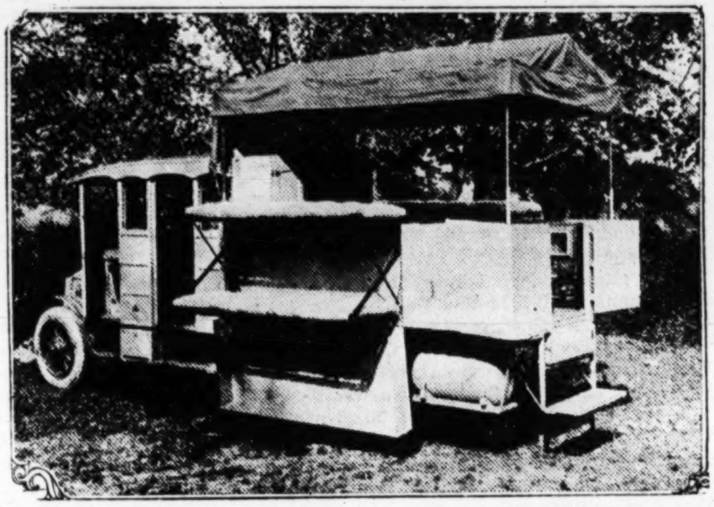
SOMEWHERE in Minnesota, the good car "St. Louis," a specially constructed combination of the arts and utilitarian aspects of motor car production, is pursuing a leisurely transcontinental journey to Seattle. Its passengers, seven in number, are captained by Sam F. Myerson, for many years prominent in the printing business and the various activities of the Republican political organizations of St Louis.

Myerson and his companions have Hawaii as their ultimate destination. They purpose taking ship at Seattle, carrying the "St. Louis" with them, and will tour the Hawaiian Islands to their hearts' content before returning to the mainland of the United States.

It was Myerson who originated the idea of a de luxe car embracing everything that promised to lend comfort and pleasure to the "long, long trail" from St. Louis to the Pacific. The motive was recreation and life in the open, that would aid in rebuilding a constitution weakened by ill health and too close application to business. Myerson at the age of 58, active since his boyhood, sold his business and prepared to try the virtues of the therapy of the open air. Then he organized his expedition and ordered the style of car that would stand the rough usage of a cross-country marathon, and at the same time supply the conveniences of the home.

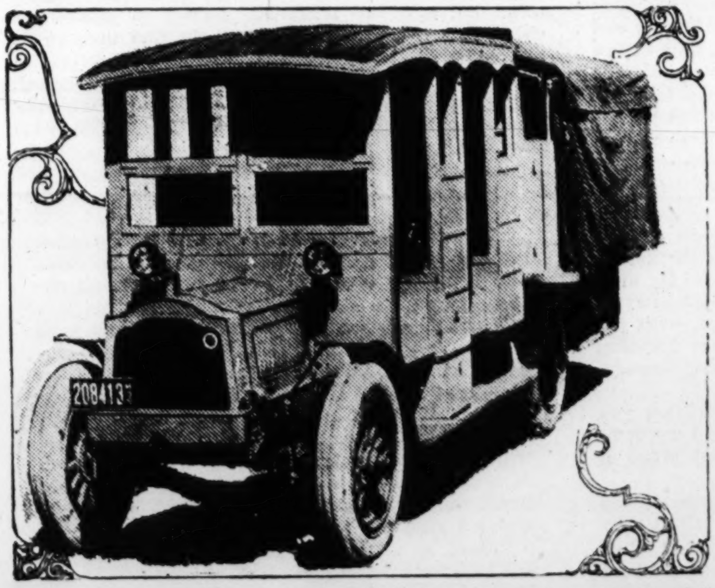
When the car was designed the builders were told that strength, durability and comfort in travel over even the roughest places were expected, and they were also informed that the men who intended to take the trip wanted the same sort of accommodations and even luxuries that would be looked for in a private car built to run on rails, or in a yacht planned for a long sea trip. With all these directions to guide, the "home on wheels," as it was termed by Myerson, was finally given its finishing touches. Then Myerson discovered that the detail of getting away was no small undertaking. Every time a "hop off" was arranged something intervened. There were numerous compartments to be filled with supplies, and there was the all-important matter of getting a dependable person who could combine all the qualifications of chauffeur, guide and mechanician. Such a superman was found, since the development of the motor trade has brought about even more astonishing results; hence, at last, Skipper Myerson gave the word, "Let's go."

And this time he meant it, since the expedition was ready to the last can of milk and cartridge for the long roll over prairies, mountains and streams. No truck of commerce was ever turned out with any keener regard for the elements of endurance and power than was the "St. Louis." Its great tires are said by experts to be the largest and heaviest ever manufactured for such a purpose. Despite the prediction that the tires would go the entire route, a reserve supply was placed aboard, as the tourists do not care to be held up while the factory is turning out reinforcements. These same experts, after going over the many dust-proof lockers, provision containers, cooking outfit, folding tent, sleeping berths and the many other conveniences incorporated in the traveling hotel outfit, agreed that no facilities previously provided for a run of such proportions were quite as elaborate as those supplied for Myerson's expedition.



The berths are let down from either side and are as comfortable as the best in the Pullman service. With this arrangement the sleeper gets an abundance of air.

Every compartment was arranged for some specific purpose, from the folding bath tub down to the medicine chest for emergency remedies. Since the trail leads across vast desert stretches, particular care was shown in the selection of medicinal supplies, so as not to bring the enterprise within the scope of the "search and seizure" end of the bone-dry enforcement law. There is also a drawer for such articles as needles, thread, buttons and many other ready aids to men, when they are far from home and placed entirely upon their own resources.



All the accessories are properly placed and the "St. Louis" is on the road hitting it up for the next stopping place.

In the party with "Captain Myerson, as he was designated at the start, were J. A. Bartlett, Harry C. Stewart, Sam F. Myerson Jr., Gus Huebner, Leslie Blackmore and D. H. Champlin. At Chicago they picked up W. S. Thompson, who will accompany the expedition part of the way, and other friends will be added at various points along the trail for a few days of touring. At Seattle the car will be loaded on a ship for Honolulu and the tourists will spend a season motoring over the Hawaiian group of islands.

The tentative itinerary calls for a stop of three weeks at Alexandria, Minn., where Blackmore owns a large ranch on which he maintains a well-stocked lake, not to speak of a hunting preserve where the succulent prairie chicken has not yet perished from the earth. At Alexandria they will hunt, fish and live in the large tent which is part of the car's equipment. They will do their own cooking and stop remote from telephones, telegraphs, newspapers and the other institutions of the up-to-the-minute civilization, since they want to commune with nature without interruption or restraint of any kind. When they reach Yellowstone, they plan another stop for a long visit at the park, and a study of the game and geysers. As they are not seeking to make a record of any kind involving speed, they will tarry whenever and wherever they please.

When they get to Duluth, their course will take them west over the Blue Book route, touching at such points as Fargo, Miles City, Yellowstone Park and Billings. They are not seriously concerned whether they get their ship in September or October, and as the car is going aboard the vessel, they are not fearful of missing their stateroom reservations. If there is a scarcity of cabin accommodations, they can sleep in the berths of the "St. Louis" while making the ocean run of 2600 miles to the land of the ukelele and the la-al.

Myerson is confident that his outing will so thoroughly reconstruct him physically that he will be able to return to work when he feels in that humor; but he proposes to avoid confining employment in the future. He intends to spend a long season in Southern California and may locate there if his open-air therapy plan is vindicated after his strenuous demonstration. The other members of the expedition are expected to return in the late fall.

The actual mileage represented in this tour, including the return to St. Louis, is estimated at 11,000 miles, but it is not fully decided that the return from California will be made by motor. When the party returns after exploring all the islands in the Hawaiian country and lingering long at Waikiki Beach, where surf bathing is always in season, the tourists may be in a mood to contribute to the Government in the form of tribute to the United States Railroad Administration, war tax and all, as even such a good thing as a transcontinental motor tour is liable to become wearisome, when pressed too far. The supplies loaded aboard the mammoth car included a stock of "official" stationery, which the married members of the expedition were instructed to use with the utmost freedom. There will be days and perhaps weeks, however, when they will be out of range of even the most distant of the postal routes.

Tidings thus far sent back tell that the only warm weather experienced was on the way through Illinois to Chicago. After crossing into Wisconsin a delightful run of weather was encountered, and at night blankets were brought into use, and very appropriately, as there was a decided tang in the air. In filling up the clothing compartments the travelers stored a supply that would answer in almost any zone, and when they pulled out they announced that they were ready for the extremes of heat or cold. Only a limited stock of gasoline and oils was taken, as they have fuel stations marked on their maps which will safely supply the needs of the "St. Louis" at all stages of the long journey.

Every man in the party has been on fishing trips at various times, and consequently has had experience in simple cooking, such as making coffee or broiling a fresh jack salmon, bass or trout. They have tackle that is guaranteed to land any kind of fish they may discover on the long trail. The tourists took pains before leaving to see that their old kit bags containing all their troubles were left behind.

but to secure Mendez, to make it impossible for him to raise an alarm. If he could be bound and locked into that rear room. She looked at the two men—the Mexican had slouched down into a chair, apparently having abandoned all hope of escape, his chin lowered on his breast, his eyes hidden beneath the wide brim of his hat. He was a perfect picture of depression, but Cavendish appeared alert enough, the deadly knife still gripped in his hand, a motionless, threatening figure. Feeling no trepidation, she crossed toward the other room, noting as she passed that Mendez lifted his head to observe her movements. She paused at the door, turning suspiciously, but the man had already seemingly lost interest, and his head again drooped. She stepped within.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

WITH BACK TO THE WALL.

IT WAS dingy dark once she had crossed the threshold, yet enough of light flickered in through the doorway to enable her to perceive the few articles of furniture. The room itself was a small one, but contained a roughly constructed wooden bed, two stools and a square table of unplaned boards. A strip of rag carpet covered a portion of the floor, and there was a sort of cupboard in one corner, the door of which stood open, revealing a variety of parcels, littering the shelves. Against the wall in a corner leaned a short-barreled gun, a canvas bag draped over its muzzle.

She had no opportunity to observe more. To her ears there came the sound of a blow in the room she had just left, a groan, the dull thud of a body striking the floor, accompanied by a Spanish oath, and a shuffling of feet. She sprang back into the open doorway, startled, certain only of some catastrophe, her fingers gripping hard on the revolver.

Cavendish lay writhing on the floor, the chair overturned beside him, and the Mexican, with one swift leap forward, cleared the body and reached the window. Even as she caught this movement, too dazed for the instant to act, the injured man struggled up on one elbow, and, with all the force he possessed, hurled the knife straight at the fleeing figure. It flashed through the air, a savage gleam of steel, barely missing Mendez's shoulder, and buried itself in a log, quivering from the force of impact. With a yell of derision, his hands still bound, the desperate fugitive cast himself headfirst through the opening. Without aim, scarcely aware of what she did, the girl flung up her weapon and fired. With revolver yet smoking she rushed forward to look without. Rolling over and over on the ground, his face covered with blood, Mendez was seeking to round the corner of the cabin, to get beyond range. Again she pulled the trigger, the powder smoke blowing back into her face and blinding her. When she could see once more, he was gone, but men were leaping out through the door of the bunkhouse, shouting in excitement.

One of these caught sight of her and fired, the bullet chugging into the end of a log, so closely it caught a strand of her hair, but, before another shot could follow, she had seized the shutter and closed the opening, driving the latch fast with the revolver butt. She was cool enough now, every nerve on edge, realizing fully the danger of their position. All the blood of a fighting race surged through her veins, and she was conscious of no fear, only of a wild exultation, a strange desire to win. As she turned she faced Cavendish, only vaguely visible in the twilight caused by the closed window. He was still seated on the floor, his expression betraying bewilderment.

"Are you hurt?"

"No—not—not much. He knocked all the wind out of me. I—I'm all right now."

"Get up then! There's fighting enough ahead to make you forget that. What happened?"

"He—he kicked me, I guess. I—I don't exactly know. I heard you go past us into that other room, and—and just turned my head to see. The next I knew I was on the floor, so damned sick—I beg your pardon—I thought I was going to faint. Did I get him with the knife?"

"No, it's over there, and I am afraid I didn't touch him either; it was all so sudden I got no aim. Do you hear those voices? There must be a dozen of the band outside already."

He looked up at her, his glance almost vacant, and she could perceive how his chin shook.

"What shall we do?"

"Do!" she gripped his shoulder. "Are you a man and ask that? We will fight! Did you imagine I would ever surrender myself into the hands of that devil, after what has happened? I would rather die; yes, I will die, before he ever puts hand on me. And what about you, Mr. Cavendish? Are you going to lie there moping? Answer me—I thought you were a man—a gentleman."

The words were like a blow in his face, and under their sting he staggered to his feet; scarlet blazed in both his cheeks.

"You have no right to say that to me," he said angrily. "I'm not that kind."

"I know it," she admitted, "but you lose your nerve; this isn't your game. Well, it isn't mine, either, for the matter of that. Nevertheless it has got to be played, and we're going to play it together. Those fellows will be at that door presently—just so soon as Mendez tells them who are inside here. They'll try us once, and, if we can beat them back, that will give us a breathing spell."

She paused, glancing swiftly about, listening to the increasing hubbub without.

"There is no other way they can break in except through this door, unless, perhaps, they smash that shutter. Two of us ought to hold them for some time."

"But we have only one weapon—that knife is no use."

"There is a sawed-off shotgun back yonder; go get it, and hunt for some cartridges. They may be in the cupboard—quick now; that's Mendez's voice, and he'll be savage."

There was a shouting of commands without in Spanish, punctuated by oaths, the meaning of which the girl alone understood. She leaned forward, her eyes on the door, the cocked revolved held ready. She had meant what she said to Cavendish; to her mind death was far preferable to any surrender to that infuriated Mexican; she expected death, but one hope yet buoyed her up—Westcott. Odd that any memory of him should have come to her at that moment—yet it did; as though he spoke, and bade her believe in his coming. She had thought of him before, often in the past two days, but now he was real, tangible; she could almost feel the strong grip of his hand, and hear the sound of his voice. It was exactly as though the man called to her, and she responded. A dream, or what, it brought her courage, hope.

He would come; she had faith in that—and he would find she had fought to the end, even if he came too late. She buried her face in her hands, stifling a sob that shook her body, yet when she lifted her head again, there was no glimmer of tears in her eyes, and her cheeks were crimson. She waited motionless, scarcely seeming to breathe—the statue of a woman at bay.

All this was but for a moment, a moment of swift thought, of equally swift decision. The next Cavendish stood beside her, grasping the shotgun, no longer a victim of weakness, his eyes meeting hers eagerly.

He took a step forward and held out his hand.

"Forgive me, Miss Donovan," he pleaded. "Really, I do not know what makes me like that, but you would make a man out of anybody."

Her firm, slim fingers met his eagerly, her eyes instantly glowing in appreciation.

"Of course I forgive you," she exclaimed. "Your fear is no greater than my own. I am a woman, and dread this sort of thing. All that gives me courage is the knowledge that death is preferable to dishonor," her voice lost its firmness, "and—and my faith in a man."

"You mean in possible rescue?"

Her eyes lifted to his face.

"Yes, Mr. Cavendish. It may prove all imagination, yet there is one—a real man, I am sure—who must know of my plight before this. If he does, and lives, he will come to me. If we can only defend ourselves long enough there will be rescue."

He hesitated, yet something told him this was no time to fear asking all.

"Surely you are not married? Of course not; then he"——

"Is merely a friend; no, there has been no other word spoken between us, yet," her voice trembling slightly; "there are secrets a woman knows instinctively without speech. I know this man cares—enough to come. Isn't that strange, Mr. Cavendish, when we have only met three times?"

"No," he said, gallantly, "not to anyone who has known you. I believe you might even trust me. Where is this man?"

"In Haskell; but please do not ask any more—there! They are coming."

A blow struck the outer door, and was repeated, evidently dealt by the butt of a gun; then the two, standing silent and almost breathless within, heard Mendez's voice. There was no mistaking his slow, carefully chosen English.

"Senorita, and you also, Senor Cavendish," he called, his words intended to be conciliatory. "It is of no use that you resist. We are many and armed. If you surrender and not fight, I pledge you protection."

The girl glanced at Cavendish.

"You answer him."

He stepped closer to the door.

"Protection from whom?" he asked briefly.

"From my men; I am Pasqual Mendez."

"But you propose holding us prisoners? You intend delivering us up to the man Lacy as soon as he arrives?"

"Yes," he admitted, "but I hold no animosity—none. The senorita need not fear. I will intercede for you both with Senor Lacy, and he will listen to what I say. You may trust me, if you unbar the door."

"And if we refuse?"

"We shall break in, and there will be no promise. I ask you now for the last time."

Cavendish turned his head slightly to regard his companion.

"What shall I say?" he whispered.

"The man lies; he will keep no promise once we are in his power. Besides, they have not yet found Cateras. When they do there will be no thought of mercy."

"Then we fight it out?"

"I shall; I will never give myself into the hands of that creature."

"Senor," and Cavendish stepped aside to the protection of the logs; "we will not surrender. That is our answer."

"Fools!" he called back, his voice rising harsh above the growling of others. "We will show you. Silva, Felipe, quick now; do what I told you. We will teach these Americano dogs a lesson. No, stand back! Wait until I speak the word."

A faint glimmer of light through one of the log crevices caught Cavendish's attention, and he bent down, his eye to the crack, one hand grasping the barrel of his gun. Stella watched him, motionless and silent, her face again pale from strain. A moment he stared out, without speaking, the only noise the movement of men beyond the log walls, and the occasional sound of a voice in Spanish.

"I can count about a dozen out there," he said, finally, his words barely audible, and his eye still at the slight opening. "All Mexican except two—they look American. Most of them are armed. You must have pricked Mendez, for he has one arm in a sling, and the cloth shows bloody. Ah! Wait! The fellows have searched the cells and discovered Cateras. Do you hear that yell? It will be a fight to a finish now. Here come two men with a log—that's their game, then; they mean to smash in the door."

He straightened up, casting a swift glance about the apartment. All hesitancy, doubt, had left him, now that the supreme test had come. He was again capable of thinking clearly, and acting.

"Miss Donovan," he burst out, "we can never hope to hold back those men here—in this room. There must be 15 of them, and our ammunition is scanty. We shall be in bright light as soon as the door is battered down, and then, if they crush in the window also, we shall surely be attacked from two sides."

"What will be better?" she asked.

"The back room; it is dark, with no windows, and there are strips nailed between the logs. We can force that heavy wooden bed across the door, and hide behind it. We ought to hold them there as long as our cartridges last, unless they set the cabin afire. Good God! They have begun already. Three more blows like that and the door goes down. Come; it's our only chance."

It was the work of a moment; it had to be. The inner room was so dark they had to feel their way about blindly, yet those splintering crashes on the outer door, interspersed by the shouts of the men, spurred both to hurried effort. Nor was there much to be done. The heavy bed was thrown upon its side, and hauled and pushed forward until it rested against the door jambs, the mattress and blankets so caught and held as to form protection against bullets. Breathless, the two sank to their knees in the darkness behind, their eyes on the brightening daylight of the room beyond. Already a hole had been stove through the upper panel of the door, the surrounding wood splintered. Someone fired once through the jagged opening, and an exultant yell followed from without.

"No firing!" the voice was Mendez's, rising sharply above the other sounds. "I don't want the girl shot, you fools. Take that other log around to the window. They'll surrender fast enough once we're inside. Now, another one. Here, five of you swing her!"

Stella touched Cavendish's sleeve.

"Show me how to load, please," she urged feverishly. "I've fired two shots already."

His gun rested across the rude barricade, and he left it there, seizing the revolver from her hand.

"You have never handled one before?"

"No; not like this. Oh, I see; you press that spring. I can do that. You have the belt with the revolver cartridges—fasten it about my waist, quick! The door is almost down."

"Rest your barrel on the edge of the bed," he muttered, gripping the shotgun again, "and aim at that door. The instant you see one of those devils, give it to him."

With a crash the remaining wood gave way, the end of the log used as a battering ram projecting into the room. Over the shattered door, now held only by one bent hinge, a half dozen forms swarmed inward, the quick rush blocking their passage.

Cavendish pulled the trigger, the deep boom of his shotgun echoed instantly by the sharper report of the girl's revolver. She fired twice before the swirling smoke obstructed the view, conscious only that one man had leaped straight into the air, and another had sprawled forward on hands and knees. Cavendish

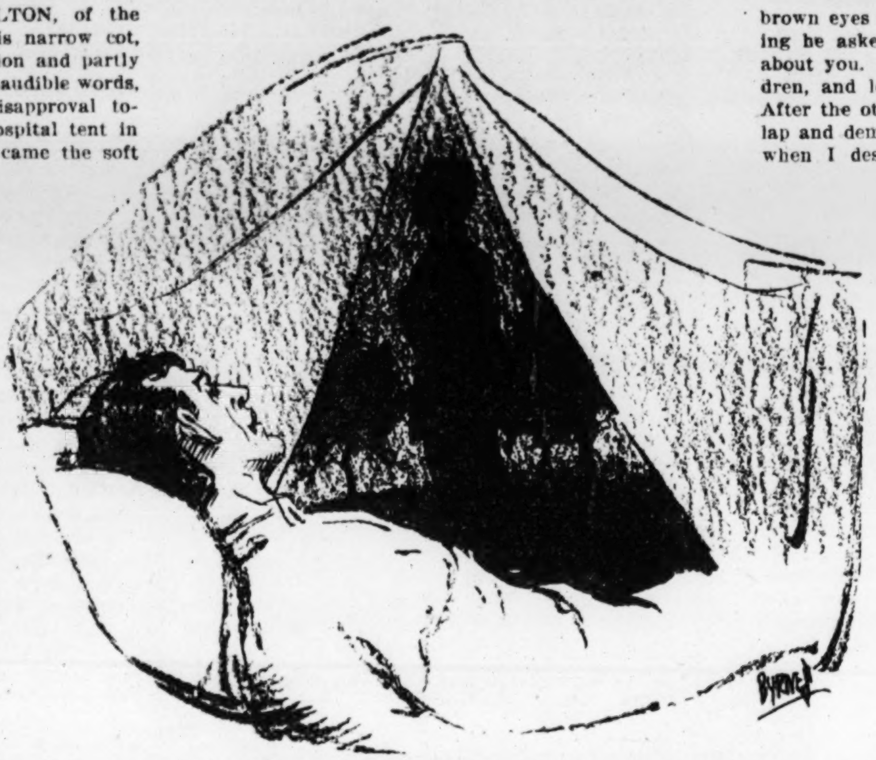
. . BY . .
ELIZABETH JORDAN



"Down the long, l-hong trail," caroled Kelly, in buoyant response to the beauty of the evening.

CAPTAIN ARTHUR HAMILTON, of the —th Infantry, moved on his narrow cot, groaned partly from irritation and partly from pain, muttered a few inaudible words, and looked with strong disapproval toward the opening of the hospital tent in which he lay. Through it came the soft breezes of the night, a glimpse of brilliantly starred horizon line, and the cheerful voice of Private Kelly, raised in song. The words came distinctly to the helpless officer's reluctant ears.

"'Down the long, l-hong trail,'" carroled Kelly, in buoyant response to the beauty of the evening.

Capt. Hamilton muttered again as he suppressed a seductive desire to throw something at the Irishman's head, silhouetted against the sky as he limped past the entrance.

Six weeks had elapsed since the battle, in which Hamilton and Kelly had been among the many grievously hurt. Kelly, witness this needless service of song, was already convalescent. He could wander about in well-meaning but futile efforts to cheer less fortunate mates. Baker was around again, too, Hamilton remembered, and Barnard and Hallenbeck and Lee, and—oh, hosts of others.

He ran over their names, as he had done countless times before in the long days and nights which had passed since he had been "out of it all," as he put it to himself. He alone, of his fellow officers in the regiment still lay chained to his wretched cot, a very log of helplessness, in which a fiery spirit flamed and consumed. His was not a nature that took gracefully to inactivity; and of late it had been borne in upon him with a cold, sickening sense of fear, new, like his helplessness, that inactivity must be his portion for a long, long time to come. At first the thought had touched his consciousness only at wide intervals, but now it was becoming a constant, lurking horror, always with him, or just within reach, ready to spring.

He was "out of it all," not for weeks or even for months, but very possibly for all time. The doctor's reticence told him this; so did his own sick heart; so did the dutiful cheerfulness of his men and his brother officers. They overdid it, he realized, and the efforts they so conscientiously made showed how deep their sympathy must be, and how tragic the cause of it.

His lips twisted sardonically as he remembered their optimistic predictions of his immediate recovery and the tributes they paid to his courage in the field. It was true he had distinguished himself in action (by chance, he assured himself and them), and he had figured as a hero in the subsequent reports of the battle. But the other fellows would hardly have bothered to have a trifle like that mentioned, he told himself, if the little glowing badge of fame he carried off the field had not been his sole possession. He had given more than his life for it. He had sacrificed his career, his place in the active ranks, his perfect, athletic body. His life would have been a simple gift in comparison.

Why couldn't it have been taken? he wondered for the hundredth time. Why could not he, like others, have died gloriously and been laid away with the flag wrapped round him? But that, he reflected bitterly, would have been too much luck. Instead, he must drag on and on and on, of no use to himself or to anyone else.

Again and again he contemplated the dreary outlook, checking off mentally the details of the past, the depressing experiences to come, the hopelessness of it all; and as his mind swung wearily round the small circle he despised himself for the futility of the whole mental process, and for his inability to fix his thoughts on things other than his own misfortune. A man paralyzed; a thing dead from the waist down—that was what he had become. He groaned again as the realization gnawed at his soul, and at the sound a white-capped nurse rose from a table where she had been sitting and came to his bedside with a smile of professional cheerfulness. She had a tired, worn face, and faded blue eyes, which looked as if they had seen too much of human suffering. But an indomitable spirit gazed out of them, and spoke, too, in her alert step and in the fine poise of her head and shoulders.

"Your mail has come," she told him, "and there seem to be some nice letters—fat ones. One from Spain, has a gold crown on the envelope. Perhaps I had better leave you alone while you read it."

Hamilton smiled grimly as he held out a languid hand. He liked Miss Foster. She was a good sort, and she had stood by the boys nobly through awful days. He liked her humor, too, though he sometimes had suspicions as to its spontaneity. Then his eye fell on the top envelope of the little package she had given him, and at the sight of the handwriting he caught his breath, and the blood rushed suddenly to his face.

He closed his eyes for a moment in an effort to pull himself together. Did he still care, after 10 years, and like that! But possibly, very probably, it was merely a manifestation of his wretched weakness, which could not endure even a pleasant surprise without these absurd physical effects. He remembered, with a more cheerful grin, that he had hardly thought of her at all during the past year. Preparations for war and his small part in them had absorbed him heart and soul. He opened the letter without further self-analysis, and read with deepening interest the closely written lines on the thin foreign paper, whose left-hand corner held a duplicate of the gold crown on the envelope.

"Dear Old Friend:—You have forgotten me, no doubt, in all these years. Ten, is it not? But I have not forgotten you, nor my other friends in America, widowed exile though I am and oblivious though I may have seemed. I do not know quite why I have not come home for a visit long before this. Indeed, I have planned to do so from year to year, but a full life and many varied interests have deferred the journey one way or another. I have three boys—nine, seven, and five—and it would be difficult to bring them with me and impossible to leave them behind. So, you see——

"But my heart often longs for my native land and in one tower of this old castle I have a great room full of souvenirs of home. It is the spot I love best in my new country. Here I read my mail and write my letters and follow American news in the newspapers friends send me. Here, with my boys tumbling over each other before the fireplace, I read of you, my friend, and your splendid courage, and your injury.

"No doubt by the time this letter reaches you you will be well again, and in no need of my sympathy. But you will let me tell you how proud of you I am.

"I read the newspaper accounts to my boys, who were greatly interested and impressed when they learned that mamma knew the hero. I was much amused by the youngest, Charlie—too small, I thought, to understand it all. But he stood before me with his hands on my knees and his big brown eyes on my face; and when I finished reading he asked many questions about the war and about you. He is the most American of my children, and loves to hear of his mother's country. After the others had gone he cuddled down in my lap and demanded the 'story' repeated in full; and when I described again the magnificent way in which you saved your men, he said, firmly, 'I am HIS boy.'

"I thought you might be interested in this unsought, spontaneous, tribute, and my purpose in writing is to pass it on to you—though I admit it has taken me a long time to get 'round to it!

"You will forgive this rambling letter, and you will believe me, now, as ever.

"Sincerely your friend,
"MARGARET CHALLONER VILLANEUEVA."

Hamilton slowly refolded the letter and returned it to its envelope, letting the solace of its sweet friendliness sink into his heart the while. She had not wholly forgotten him, then, this beautiful woman he had loved and who had given him a gracious and charming comraderie in return for the devotion of his life. He had not been senseless enough to misconstrue her feeling, so he had never spoken; and she, after two brilliant Washington seasons, had married a great Spanish noble and sailed away without suspecting, he felt sure, what she was to him. He had recovered, as men do, but he had not loved again, nor had he married.

He wondered if she knew. Very probably; for the newspapers which devoted so much space to his achievements had added detailed biographical sketches, over which he had winced from instinctive distaste of such intimate discussion of his personal affairs. The earlier reports (evidently the ones she had read) had published misleading accounts of his injuries. They were serious, but not dangerous, according to these authorities. It was only recently that rumors of his true condition had begun to creep into print. The Princess had not read these. Hamilton was glad of that.

He recalled dreamily the different passages of her letter, the remainder of his mail lying neglected on his bed. That boy—her boy—HIS boy. He smiled to himself, at first with amusement, then with a sudden tenderness that pleasantly softened his stern lips. He was weak enough, frightened enough, lonely enough, to grasp with an actual pitiful throb of the heart this tiny hand stretched out to him across the sea. He liked that boy—HIS boy. He must be a fine fellow. He wondered idly how he looked. "Three boys—nine, seven, five"—yes, Charlie was five and had great brown eyes. Like his mother's, the stricken man remembered. She had brown eyes—and such brown eyes. Such kind, friendly, womanly brown eyes—true mirrors of the strong soul that looked from them. Something hot and wet stung the surface of Hamilton's cheek. He touched it unsuspectingly, and then swore alone in deep, frank self-disgust.

"Well, of all the sentimental idiots!" he muttered. "My nerves are in a nice way, when I bawl like a baby because someone sends me a friendly letter. Guess I'll answer it."

Miss Foster brought him pen, ink and paper, and he began, writing with some difficulty, as he lay flat on his back.

"My Dear Princess:—Your letter has just reached me, and you cannot, I am sure, imagine the cheer and comfort it brought. I am still lingering unwillingly on the sick list, but there is some talk now of shipping me home next week, when I hope to give a better account of myself. In the meantime, and after, I shall think much of you and the boys, especially of the youngest and his flattering adoption of me. I am already insufferably proud of that, and rather sentimental as well, as you will see by the fact that I want his photograph. Will you send it to me, in care of the Layton Trust Co., New York? I do not yet know just where I shall be.

"There is a pleasant revelation of well-being and happiness between the lines of your letter. Believe me, I rejoice in both. "Faithfully yours,
"ARTHUR HAMILTON."

"Then it will be your own loss; for if there be a shot fired, you will get either a bullet or a knife thrust. I would try no sharp tricks, Senor Mendez. Now we go on."

Mendez smiled grimly in the dark, his mind busy. He had seen much life of a kind and felt no doubt but this young woman would keep her word. She had become sufficiently desperate to be dangerous, and he felt no desire to drive her to extremes. Besides he was helpless to resist, but would watch for opportunity, trusting in luck.

"I am to go first?" and his voice assumed polite deference.

"Beside Mr. Cavendish," she replied, "and I will be behind."

"This gentleman, you mean?"

"Yes; and there is no need for any more acting. This is the revolver pressing against your back, senor. I could scarcely miss you at that distance."

They advanced in silence, through the faint gleam of light which illumined the passage through the stone slits over the cell doors. Only then did Mendez venture to pause, and glance back at his captor.

"Pardon, senorita," he said gallantly, "but I would have view of the first lady who ever took Pasqual Mendez prisoner. The sight robs me of all displeasure. In truth it is hardly necessary for you to resort to firearms."

"I prefer them," shortly. "Go on!"

The darkness swallowed them again, but the way was clear, and, once around the sharp turn, a glimmer of distant daylight made advance easier. There was no sign of any guard visible, nor any movement perceptible in the open vista beyond the cave entrance. The girl touched Mendez's arm.

"Wait; I would ask a question or two first, before we venture further. I was brought in this way, yet my memory is not clear. There are two log houses before the cave?"

"Yes," he answered readily; "one somewhat larger than the other—the men occupy that; the other is for myself and my officers."

"Besides Cateras?"

"No, not at present; at times I have guests. It would be pleasurable to entertain you and your friend."

"No doubt. You expect Lacy?"

"You know that also? How did you learn?"

"I heard you talk to the men at the other end. It is true, is it not?"

"I have sent for him; it was yesterday."

"And he could be here now?"

"Not before night; it is a hard ride. Why ask all this?"

"I have reasons. Now, another thing; where are your men?"

His eyes wandered to the gleam of daylight.

"There will be one or two in the bunkhouse likely; the others are with the cattle up the valley."

"But none in your cabin?"

He shook his head.

"And you say Lacy cannot get here before dark? How late?"

He hesitated over his reply, endeavoring shrewdly to conjecture what could be the object of all this questioning, yet finally concluding that the truth would make very little difference.

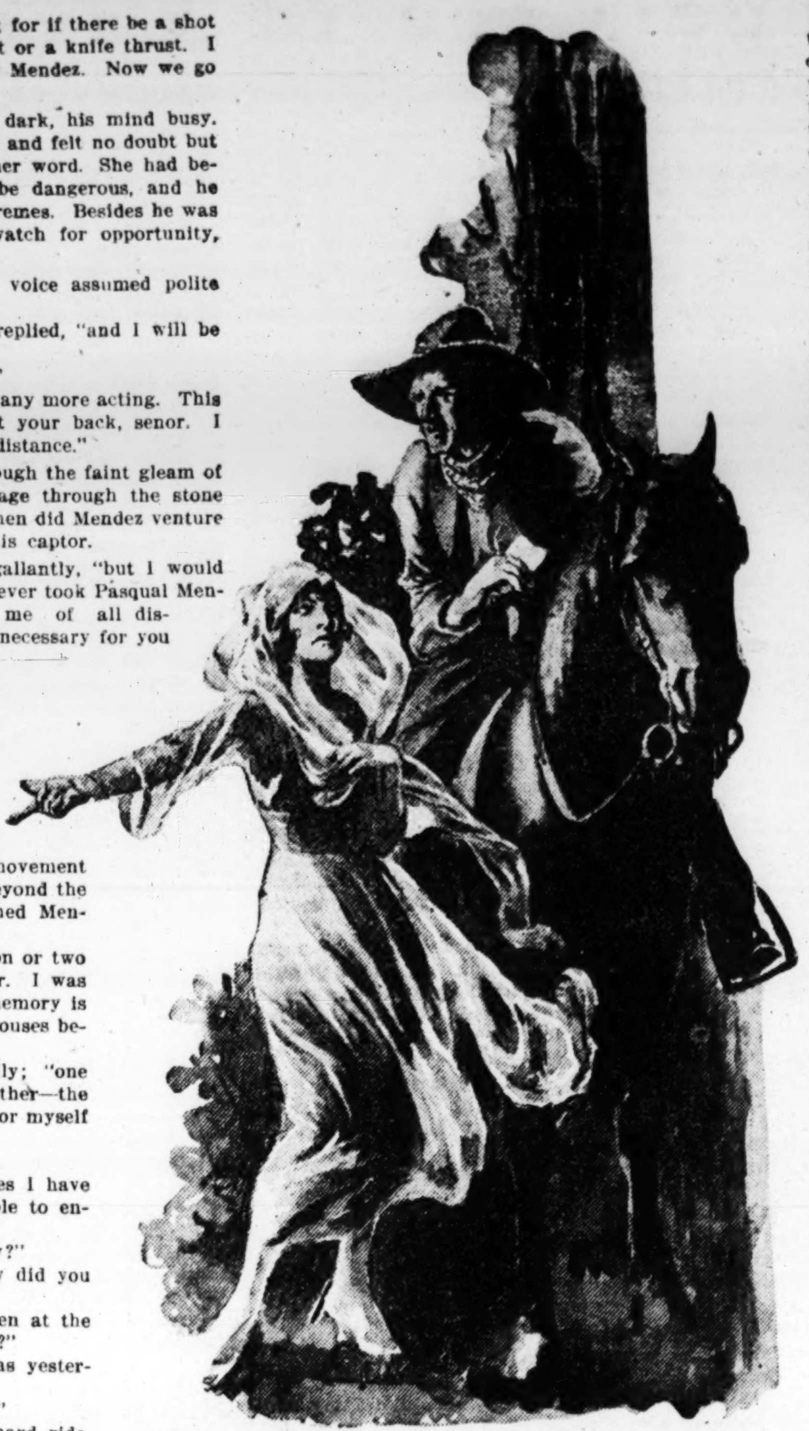
"Well, senorita, I may as well tell you, I suppose. It is the rule not to enter this valley until after dark. I expect the Americanos to arrive about 10 o'clock."

"The Americanos?"

"Si, there will be three in the party, one of them a man from New York, who has business with me."

Miss Donovan's decision was rapidly made, her mind instantly grasping the situation. This man would be Enright, and the business he had with Mendez concerned Cavendish, and possibly herself also. She glanced again into the stern, hawklike face of the Mexican, recognizing its lines of relentless cruelty, the complete absence of any sense of mercy. His piercing eyes and thin lips gave evidence enough that he was open to any bargain if the reward should be commensurate with the risk. The man's age and gray hair only served to render more noticeable his real character—he was a human tiger, held now in restraint, but only waiting a chance to break his chains, and sink teeth in any victim. The very sight of him sent a shudder through her body, even as it stiffened her purpose.

Her clear, thoughtful eyes turned inquiringly toward Cavendish, but the survey brought with it no encouragement. The man meant well, no doubt, and would fight valiantly on occasion; he was no coward, no weakling—equally clear his was not the stuff from which leaders are made. There was uncertainty in his eyes, a lack of force in his face, which told the story. Whatever was decided upon, or accomplished, must be by her volition; she could trust him to obey, but that was all. Her body straightened into new resolve, all her womanhood called to the front by this emergency.



"It's a place they call 'Sunken Valley'—out there somewhere."

"Then we will make no attempt to leave the valley until after dark," she said slowly. "Even if we got away now, we would be pursued and overtaken, for the desert offers few chances for concealment. If we can reach that smaller cabin unseen we ought to be safe enough there for hours. Cateras will not bother, and with Mendez captive, his men will not learn what has occurred. Is not this our best plan, Mr. Cavendish?"

"And at night?"

"We must work some scheme to get horses, and depart before those others reach here. There will be plenty of time between dark and 10 o'clock. If we leave this man securely bound, his plight will not even be discovered until Lacy arrives. By that time, with any good fortune, we will be beyond pursuit, lost in the desert. Do you think of anything better?"

That he did not was evidenced by the vacant look in his eyes, and she waited for no answer.

"Here," she said, thrusting the revolver into his hand, "take this and guard Mendez until I return. It will only be a moment. Don't take your eyes off him; there must be no alarm."

She moved forward through the gloomy shadows toward the light showing at the mouth of the cave. The rocks here were in their natural states, exactly as left by the forces which had originally disrupted them, the cavern's mouth much wider than the tunnel piercing the hill, and somewhat obstructed by ridges of stone.

Sheltered by these, Stella crept to the very edge of the opening and was able to gain a comprehensive view of the entire scene beyond. Within the cave itself there was no movement, no evidence of life. Quite clearly no guard had been posted here, and no precautions taken, although doubtless the only entrance to the deep valley was carefully watched.

A glance without convinced her that no other guardianship was necessary to assure safety. The valley lay before her, almost a level plain, except for the stream winding through its center, and all about, unbroken and precipitous, arose the rampart of rocks, which seemed unscalable.

She rested there long enough to trace this barrier inch by inch in its complete circle, but found no opening, no cleft, promising a possible exit, except where the trail led up almost directly opposite, and only memory of her descent enabled her to recognize this. Satisfied that the top could be attained in no other way, her eyes sought the things of more immediate interest. The two cabins were directly before the entrance, the smaller closely in against the cliff, the larger slightly advanced. Neither exhibited any sign of life; indeed, the only evidence that the valley contained human occupants was the distant view of two herders, busily engaged in rounding up a bunch of cattle on the opposite bank of the stream. These were too far away, and too intently engaged at their task, to observe any movement at this distance.

Her study of the situation concentrated on the small cabin immediately in front. It was low, a scant story in height, but slightly elevated from the ground, leaving a vacant space beneath. It was built of logs, well mortised together, and plastered between with clay. The roof sloped barely enough to shed water, and there were no windows on the end toward the cliff, or along the one side which she could see from where she lay. The single door must open from the front, and apparently the house had been erected with the thought that it might sometime be used for purposes of defense, as it had almost the appearance of a fort. The larger building was not entirely unlike this in general design, except that small openings had been cut in the log walls, and a rude chimney arose through the roof. Both appeared deserted. Confident there could be no better time for the venture, Stella signaled with her hand for the others to join her.

They advanced slowly, Cavendish holding the revolver at the Mexican's head, the latter grinning savagely, his dark eyes never still. Bitter hate, desperate resolve, marked his every action, although he sought to appear indifferent. The girl's lips were compressed, and her eyes met his firmly.

"The way is clear," she said, "and, listen to my warning, senor. We are going straight along the north side of your cabin there, until we reach the door. For about 20 feet we shall be exposed to view from that other cabin, if any of your men are there. If you dare utter a sound, or make a motion, this man will shoot you dead in your tracks—do you understand?"

His look was ugly enough, although he compelled the thin lips to smile.

"Quite clearly—yes, but pardon me if I doubt. You might kill me; I think that, yet how would it serve you? One shot fired would bring here a dozen men—then what?"

"I thank you, senor; there will be no shot fired. Give me the revolver, Mr. Cavendish; now take this knife. As we advance walk one step behind Mendez. You will know what to do. Now, senor, if you wish to try an experiment—we go now."

There was not a sound, not a word. Not unlike three shadows they crossed the open space, and found shelter behind the walls of the hut. The girl never removed her eyes from the other cabin, and Cavendish, a step behind his prisoner, poised for a quick blow, the steel blade glittering in uplifted hand, saw nothing but the back of the man before him. The latter shrugged his shoulders and marched forward, his eyes alone evidencing the passion raging within.

Without pausing they reached the door, which stood slightly ajar. Stella pushed it open, took one swift glance within and stepped aside. The other two entered, and she instantly followed, closing the door, and securing it with a stout wooden bar. Her face was white, marked by nervous emotion, her eyes bright and fearless. With one swift glance she visioned the interior; there were two rooms, both small, divided by a solid log partition, pierced by a narrow doorway.

The back room was dark, seemingly without windows, but this in which they stood had an opening to the right letting in the sunlight. It was a mere slash in the logs, unframed, and could be closed by a heavy wooden shutter. She stepped across and glanced out. The view revealed included a large portion of the valley, and the entrance to the other cabin. There was no excitement, no evidence of any alarm—their crossing from the mouth of the cave had escaped observation. Thus far at least they were safe.

Her heart beat faster as she turned away, satisfied with the success of her plan. Nothing remained now

As he read it over the letter seemed curt and unsatisfactory, but he was already exhausted and had not the strength to make another effort. So he wearily sealed and addressed it, and gave it to Miss Foster for the next mail. Her tired eyes widened a little as she artlessly read the inscription.

During the seemingly endless days and nights that followed, Hamilton battled manfully but despairingly with his sick soul. Wherever he looked there was blackness, lightened once or twice, and for an instant only, by a sudden passing memory of a little child. It would be too much to say that the memory comforted him. Nothing could do that, yet. All he dared hope for was for the strength to go through his ordeal with something approaching manliness and dignity.

The visits of his friends were a strain to him, as well as to them, and it was sadly easy to see how the sense of his hopeless case depressed them. He could imagine the long breath they drew as they left him and found themselves again in the rich, warm, healthy world.

He did not blame them. In their places, he would no doubt have felt just the same. But he was inevitably driven more and more into himself, and in his dogged efforts to get away from self-centered thought he turned with a sturdy determination to fancies about remote things, and especially to imaginings of the boy—the little fellow who loved him, and who, thank God, was not as yet "sorry for him!" Oddly enough, the mother seemed to have taken her place in the background of Hamilton's thoughts. It was her son who appealed to him—the innocent man-child, half American, half Spanish, entering so happily and unconsciously on the enhanced uncertainties of life in the tragic land of his birth.

During the trying, stormy voyage home on the great hospital ship, Hamilton had strange, half-waking visions of a curly-headed lad with brown eyes, standing at his mother's knee, looking into her face as she talked of an American soldier. He began to fancy that the vision held at bay the other crowding horrors which lay in wait. If he could keep his mind on that he was safe. He was glad the mother and son could not, in their turn, picture him—as he was.

When the photographs arrived, soon after he reached New York, the helpless officer opened the bulky package with eager fingers. There were two "cabinets," both of the child. One showed him at the tender age of 2, a plump, dimpled, beautiful baby, airily clad in an embroidered towel. A second was apparently quite recent. A 5-year-old boy, in black velvet and a bewildering expanse of lace collar, looked straight out of the picture with tragic dark eyes, whose direct glance was so like his mother's that 10 years seemed suddenly obliterated as Hamilton returned their gaze. With these was a little letter on a child's note paper, in printed characters which reeled drunkenly down the page from left to right. Hamilton read it with a chuckle.

"Dear Captain Hamilton:—I love you very much. I love you becos you fought in the war. I have your picture. I have put a candle befront of your picture. The candle is burning. I love you very much.

"Your boy,
"CHARLIE."

Accompanying this epistolary masterpiece was a brief note from the writer's mother, explaining that the "picture" of Capt. Hamilton, of whose possession her infant boasted, had been cut from an illustrated newspaper and pasted on stiff cardboard in gratification of the child's whim.

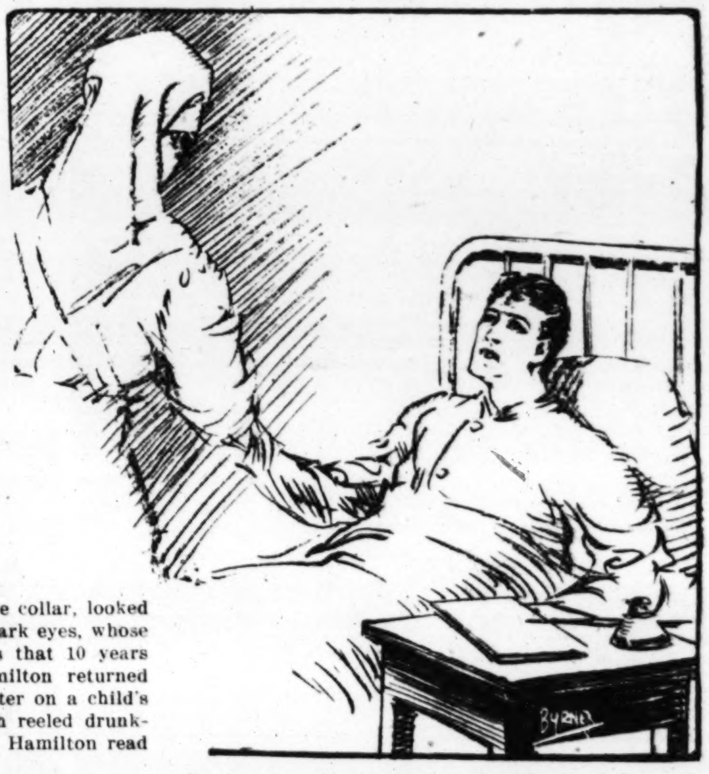
"He insist on burning a candle before it," she wrote, "evidently from some dim association with tapers and altars and the rest. As it is all a new manifestation of his character, I am indulging him freely. Certainly it can do him no harm to love and admire a brave man. Besides, to have a candle burned for you! Is not that a new flutter of glory?"

Hamilton, still in the grasp of a dumb depression he would voice to no one, was a little amused and more touched. In his hideous loneliness and terror the pretty incident, one he would have smiled at and forgotten a year ago, took on an interest out of all proportion to its importance. He felt a sudden, unaccountable sense of pleasant companionship. The child became a loved personality—the one human, close, vital thing in a world over which there seemed to hang a thick black fog through which Hamilton vaguely, wretchedly groped.

He himself did not know why the child interested him so keenly, nor did he try to analyze the fact. He was merely grateful for it, and for the other fact that he cherished no sentimental feeling for the boy's mother. That had passed out of his life as everything else had seemingly passed which belonged to the old order of things. He had always been a calm, reserved, self-absorbed, unemotional type of man, glorying a little, perhaps, in his lack of dependence on human kind. In his need he had turned to his fellows and turned in vain. Now that a precious thing had come to him unsought, he did not intend to lose it.

That was the beginning of an intercourse which interested and diverted Hamilton for months. He spared no pains to adapt his letters to the interest and comprehension of his small correspondent, and he derived a quite incredible amount of satisfaction from the childish scrawls which came to him in reply. They were wholly babyish documents, about the donkey, the nurse, the toys, and games of the small boy's daily life. Usually they were written in his own printed letters. Sometimes they were dictated to his mother, who faithfully reported every weighty word that fell from the infant's lips. But always they were full of the hero-worship of the little child for the big, strong, American fighting-man; and in every letter, sometimes in the beginning, sometimes at the end, occasionally in both places, as the enthusiasm of the writer waxed, was the satisfying assurance, "I am your boy." Hamilton's eyes raced over the little pages till he found that line, and there rested contentedly.

As the months passed, the healing influence of time wrought its effects. Hamilton, shut in though he was, adapted himself to the narrow world of an invalid's room and its few interests. With the wealth he had fortunately inherited he brought to his side leading specialists who might possibly help him, and went through alternate ecstatic hopes and abysmal fears as the great men came and departed.



So he wearily sealed and addressed it, and gave it to Miss Foster for the next mail.

Very quietly, too, he helped others less fortunate, fianancially, than himself. The nurses and physicians in the hospital where he lay learned to like and admire him, and other patients, convalescents or newcomers, who were able to move about, sought his cheerful rooms and brought into them a whiff of the outside world. Through it all, winding in and out of the neutral-colored months like a scarlet thread of life and hope, came the childish letters from Spain, and each week a thick letter went back, artfully designed to keep alive the love and interest of an imaginative little boy.

At the end of six months young Charles fell from his donkey and broke his left arm, but this trivial incident was not allowed to interfere with the gratifying regularity with which his letters arrived. It was, however, interesting, as throwing a high light on the place his American hero held in the child's fancy. His mother touched on this in her letter describing the accident.

"The arm had to be set at once," she wrote, "and of course it was very painful. But I told Charlie you would be greatly disappointed if your boy were not brave and did not obey the doctor. He saw the force of this immediately, and did not shed a tear, though his dear little face was white and drawn with pain."

Master Charlie himself discussed the same pleasant incident in the first letter he dictated after the episode.

"I did not cry," he mentioned, with natural satisfaction. "Mamma cried, and Inez cried. Men do not cry. Do they? You did not cry when you were hurt, did you? I am going to be just like you."

Hamilton laughed over the letter, his pale cheeks flushing a little at the same time. He had cried, once or twice; he recalled it now with shame. He must try to do better, remembering that he loomed large as a heroic model for the young man.

He was still reading the little letter when Dr. Van Buren, his classmate at the Point, his one intimate since then, and his physician now, entered the room, greeted him curtly, and stood at the window for a moment, drumming his fingers fiercely against the pane. Hamilton knew the symptoms; Van Buren was nervous and worried about something. He dropped the small envelope into his lap and looked up.

"Well?" he said, tersely.

Van Buren did not answer for a moment. Then he turned, crossed the room abruptly, and sat down near the reclining chair in which the officer spent his days. The physician's face was strained and pale. His glance, usually direct, shifted and fell under his friend's inquiring gaze.

"Well?" repeated the latter, compellingly. "I suppose you fellows have been talking me over again. What's the outcome?"

Van Buren cleared his throat.

"Yes, we—we have, old man," he began, rather huskily—"in there, you know." He indicated the direction of the consulting room as he spoke. "We don't like the recent symptoms."

Unconsciously, Hamilton straightened his shoulders.

"Out with it. Don't mince matters, Frank. Do you think life is so precious a thing to me that I can't part with it if I've got to?"

Van Buren writhed in his chair.

"It isn't that," he said, "life or death. It's wor—I mean, it's different. It's—it's these." He laid his hand on the officer's helpless legs, stretched out stiffly under a gay red afghan. "God!" he broke out, suddenly, "I don't know how you'll take it, old chap; and there's no sense in trying to break a thing like this gently. We're afraid—we think—they'll—have to come off!"

Under the shock of it Hamilton set his teeth.

"Why?" he asked quietly.

"Because—well, because they're no good. They're dead. They're a constant menace to you. A scratch or injury of any kind—they've got to go—that's all, Arthur. But we've been talking it over, and we can fix you up so you can get about and be much better off than you are now."

He leaned forward as he spoke, and his words came quickly and eagerly. The worst was over; he was ready to picture the other side. Hamilton stopped him with a gesture.

"Suppose I decline to let them go?" he asked grimly.

Van Buren stared at him.

"You can't," he stammered.

"Why not?"

"Because—why, because your life depends on their coming off!"

Hamilton's lips set.

"My life!" he repeated. "My precious, glad, young life! So full of happiness! So useful!" He dropped the savagely bitter tone suddenly. "No, Frank," he said, quietly, "I won't go through life as the half of a man. I'll let the thing take its course; or, if that will be too slow and too—horrible, I'll help the hobbling beast on its way. I think I'd be justified. It's too much to ask—you know it—to be hoisted through life as a remnant."

Van Buren arose, moved his chair nearer to Hamilton's, and sat down close to his friend's side. All nervousness had left him. He was again cool, scientific, professional; but with it all there was the deep sympathy and understanding of a friend.

"No, you won't," he said, firmly, "you won't do anything of the kind, and I'll tell you why you won't. Because it isn't in your make-up to play the coward. That's why. You've got to go through with it and take what comes, and do it all like the strong chap you are. If you think there won't be anything left in life, you are mistaken. You can be of a lot of use—you can do a lot of good. You will have time and inclination and money. You will be able to get around, not as quickly, but as surely. With a good man-servant you'll be entirely independent of drafts on charity or pity.

"Money has some beautiful uses. If you were a poor devil who hadn't a cent in the world and would be dependent on the grudging service of others, I should wish you to accept and bear, perhaps, but I could not urge you to. Now, your life is helpful to others. You can give and aid and bless. You can be a greater hero than the man who fought in France, and there are those who will feel it."

"That is, my money is needed, and because I've got it I should drag out years of misery while I spread lit-

"THAT—that is the way, is it not?" she asked. "I was brought from below."

"Yes; it is not far; see, the passage leads upward. Come, we might as well learn what is ahead."

They advanced slowly, keeping closely against the wall, and testing the floor cautiously before venturing a step. A few yards plunged them into total darkness, and, although Cavendish had been conducted along there a prisoner, he retained small recollection of the nature of the passage.

Their progress was slow but silent, neither venturing to exchange speech, but with ears anxiously strained to catch the least sound. Stella was conscious of the loud beating of her heart, the slight rasping of Cavendish's feet on the rock floor. The slightest noise seemed magnified. The grade rose sharply, until it became almost a climb, yet the floor had evidently been levelled and there were no obstructions to add to the difficulty of advance. Then the passage swerved rather sharply to the right, and Cavendish, leading, halted to peer about the corner. An instant they both remained motionless, and then, seeing and hearing nothing, she could restrain her impatience no longer.

"What is it?" she questioned. "Is there something wrong?"

He reached back and drew her closer, without answering, until her eyes also were able to look around the sharp edge of rock. Far away, it seemed a long distance up that narrow tunnel, a lantern glowed dully, the light dim and flickering.

The lantern occupied a niche in the side wall at the bottom of a flight of rude steps. Not more than a half-dozen of these were revealed, but at their foot, where the passage had been widened somewhat, extended a stone bench, on which lounged two men. One was lying back, his head pillowed on a rolled coat, yet was evidently awake; for the other, seated below him, with knees drawn up for comfort, kept up conversation in a low voice, the words being inaudible at that distance. Even in that dim light the two were clearly Mexican.

"What shall be do?" she asked, her lips at Cavendish's ear. "We cannot pass them—they are on guard."

"I was wondering how close I could creep in before they saw me," he answered, using the same caution. "If I was only sure they were alone, and could once get the drop, we might make it."

"You fear there may be others posted at the top?"

"There is quite likely to be; the fellows are evidently taking no chance of surprise. What do you think best?"

"Even if you succeeded in overawing these two, we would have no way of securing them. An alarm would be given before we could get beyond reach. Our only hope of escape lies in getting out of here unseen."

"Yes, and before Cateras is discovered."

"He gave no orders to the guard to return."

"No; but he will be missed after a while and sought for. We cannot count on any long delay, and when it is found that he has been knocked out, and we have disappeared, every inch of this cave will be searched. There is no place to hide, and only the two ways by which to get out."

"Then, let's go back and try the other," she urged. "That opens directly into the valley and is probably not guarded. What is happening now?"

A gray gleam of light struck the steps from above, recognized instantly as a reflection of day, as though some cover had been uplifted connecting this underground labyrinth with the clear sky. A dim shadow touched the illumined rocks for a brief moment, a moving shadow, uncertain in its outlines, grotesque, shapeless; and then the daylight vanished as suddenly as it dawned. There was a faint click, as though a door closed, while darkness resumed sway, the silence unbroken, but for the scraping of a step on those rude stairs. The two guards below came to their feet, rigid in the glow of the lantern their faces turned upward. Then a man came slowly down the last steps and joined them.

CHAPTER XXVII.

A DANGEROUS PRISONER.

HE WAS tall and thin, wearing a wide cloak about his shoulders, and high hat, with broad brim. Even at that distance it could be seen than his long hair was gray, and that a heavy mustache, snow-white, made more noticeable the thin features of his face. The man was Mexican, no doubt of that, but of the higher class, the dead pallor of his skin accented by the black, deep-seated eyes. He looked at the two men closely, and his voice easily reached the ears of the listeners.

"Who posted you here?"

"Juan Cateras, senor," answered one.

"Not on my order. Dias is watching above. Did the lieutenant give you a reason?"

"The prisoners, senor."

"The prisoners! Oh, yes, those that Lacy had confined here. Well, they will not be here for long. I do not believe in prisoners, and because I do business with that dog is no reason why he is privileged to use this place to hold his victims. I have just dispatched a messenger to Haskell to that effect, and we'll soon be rid of them. Where is Cateras?"

"In the valley, senor; he went back down the passage with Silva after posting us here."

"Occupy the two inner cells. Merodiz here says one of them is a girl."

"A girl!" the tall man laughed. "That then will account for the unusual interest of Juan Cateras, and why he preferred being left in charge. A girl, hey, Merodiz! You saw the witch? What sort was she?"

"An American, senor, young and good to look at," the other man explained. "Her eyes as blue as the skies."

"Good! 'tis not often the gods serve us so well. I forgive Cateras for failure to report such a prize, but from now on will see that he takes his proper place. She was here when we came?"

"No, senor, the two Americanos brought her; it was Silva and I who put her in the cell."

"At Cateras' order?"

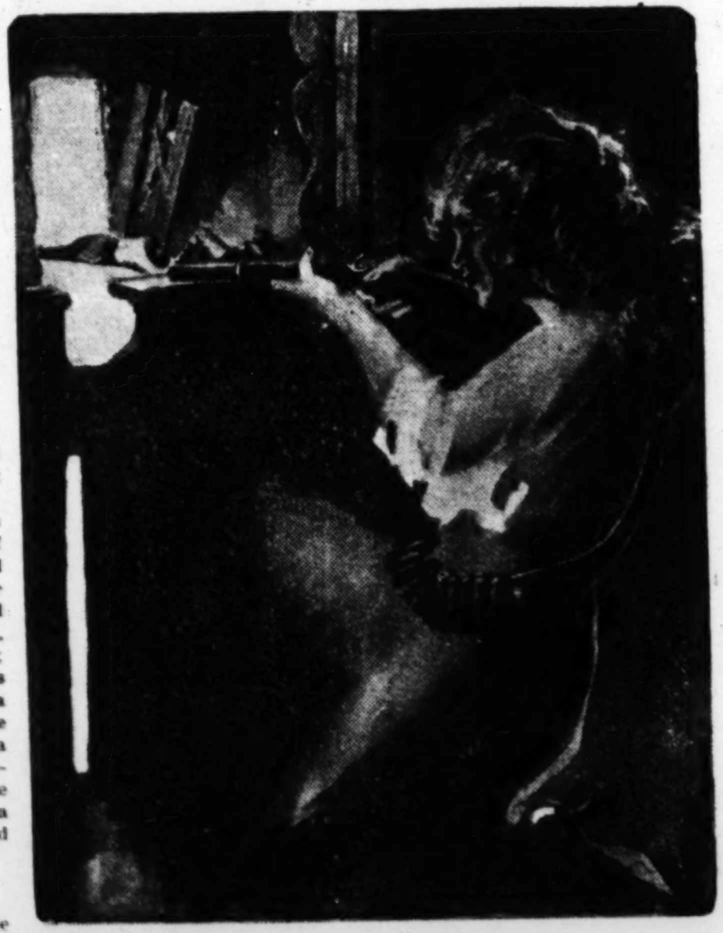
"Yes, senor."

"In what cell?"

"The second in the passage; the man who was here when we came has the one this way."

"Caramba! this is all pleasant enough. I will pay my respects to the lady, and there is no time like the present."

He turned away, thumbing his moustache, quite pleased with his conceit, but one of the men stopped him with a question.



Quietly she pushed forward the barrel of the shotgun, and waited.

"We remain here, senor?"

"Yes, you might as well," his lips smiling, "and if the Senor Cateras passes, you can tell him that I visit the fair American. It will give him joy."

The girl drew Cavendish back hurriedly, her mind working in a flash of inspiration.

"Quick," she breathed in his ear. "There is a niche where we can hide a few yards back. If he follows the other wall he might pass, and not notice."

"But he goes to your cell; 'tis Pasqual Mendez."

"I know, but come. He must not go there. I will tell you my plan."

They were pressed back within the slight recess before the Mexican turned the corner, and she had hastily breathed her desperate scheme.

"It can be done," she insisted, "and there is nought else possible. We dare not let him enter, and find Cateras, and to kill the man will serve no good end. You will not? Then give me the revolver. Good! Be silent now."

Mendez came down the black passage, evidently in rare good humor, humming a tune, with one hand pressed upon the wall to better guide his movements. So dark it was, even the outlines of his form were indistinguishable, yet, as he felt no need for caution, it was easy enough to trace his forward progress. The girl stood erect, the revolver gripped in one hand, the other pressing back her companion into the recess. She had lost all sense of fear in the determination to act; better risk all than surrender without a struggle. Mendez fumbled along the wall, stumbled over some slight projection and swore; another step, and his groping hand would touch her. He never took the step, but was whirled against the side wall, with the cold barrel of a revolver pressed against his cheek. A stern, sibilant whisper held him motionless.

"If you move, I fire, senor; raise your hands—quick!"

He responded mechanically, too profoundly astounded to dream of resistance. It was the sound of the voice which impressed him.

"Santa Maria! A woman?"

"Yes, senor, a woman; the same you sought, but I have found you first."

He chuckled.

"A good jest, surely; how came you here?"

"Not to discuss that, senor," quietly. "Nor is this to be laughed over. If you would live, do as I say. Mr. Cavendish, see if the man bears weapons."

"Only a belt with a knife."

"Keep the knife; it may come handy for some purpose. Now, bind his hands with the belt. Cross your wrists, senor."

He had lost his temper, no longer deeming this a joke.

"You damn vixen," he growled savagely. "This play will soon be done; do you know who I am?"

"The Senor Pasqual Mendez, but that means nothing," she answered. "This revolver will kill you as surely as anyone else. Do what I say then, and talk no more—cross your wrists behind."

He did so, and Cavendish strapped the stout belt about them, winding it in and out until he had sure purchase. He drew it so tightly the fellow winced.

"It hurts, senor," she said, satisfied. "Well, to hurt you a little is better than what you planned for me. Now lead on. No, listen first. I know who you are and your power here. That is why we took this chance of making you prisoner. We are desperate; it is either your life, or ours, senor. You are an outlaw, with a price on your head, and you realize what chances one will take to escape. Now, there is just one opportunity given you to live."

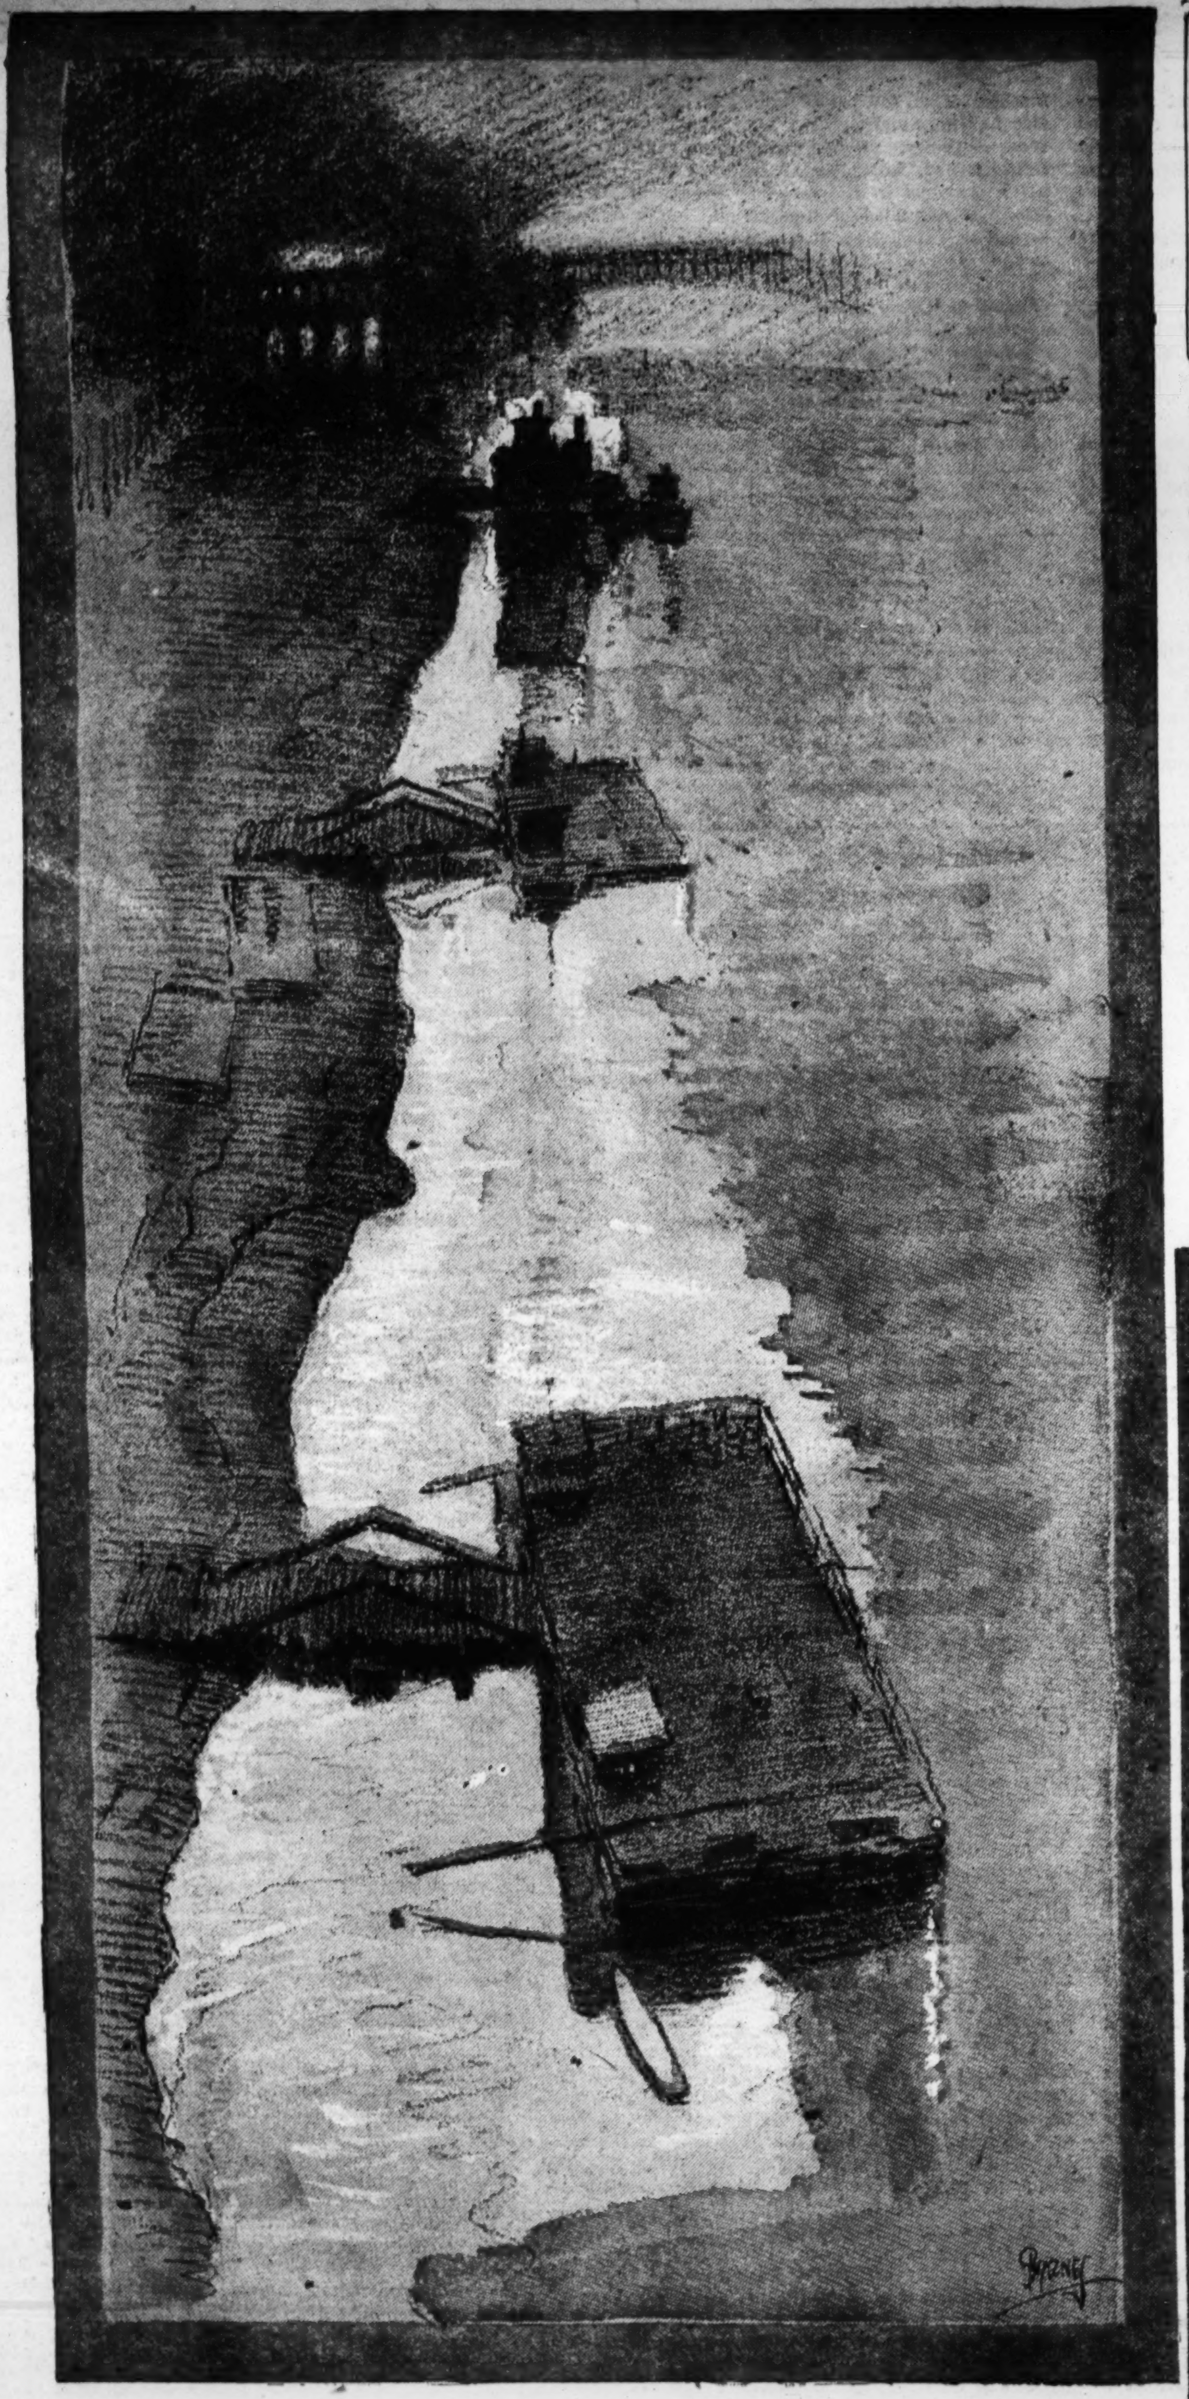
"What, senorita?"

"That you accompany us down the passage into the valley as hostage. You will compel your men, if we encounter any, to furnish us horses."

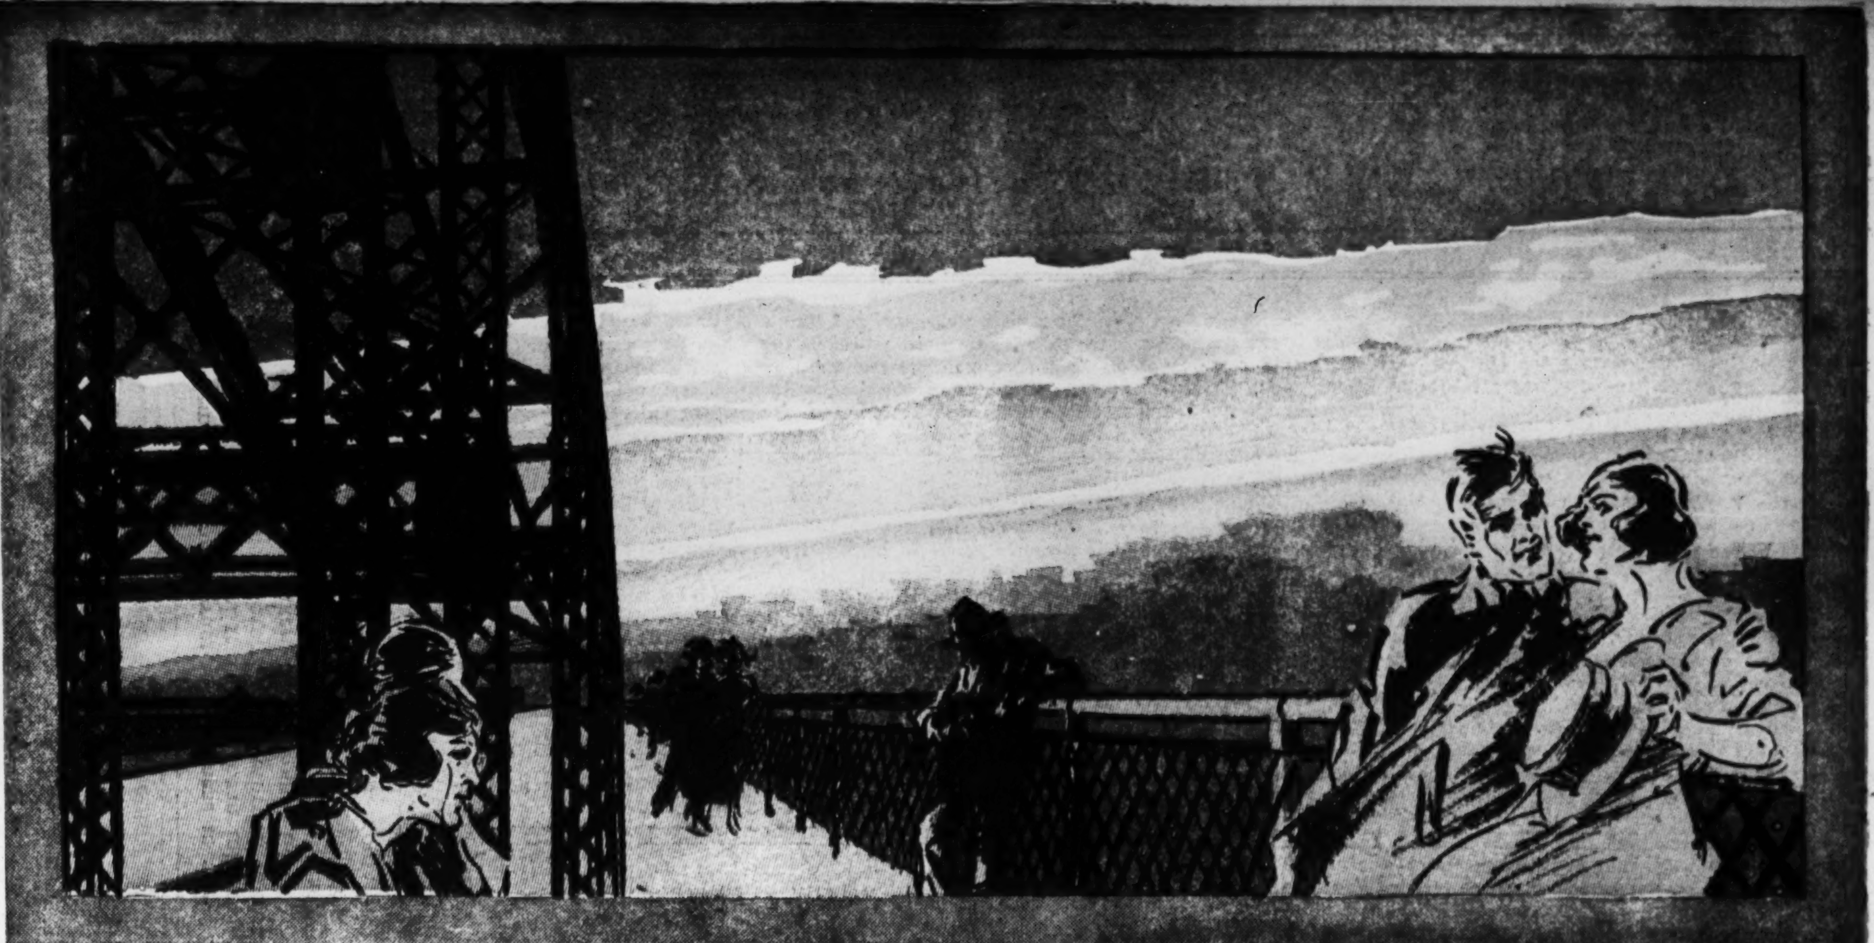
"But the men may not obey. I cannot promise; Senor Cateras"——

"Senor Cateras will not be there," she interrupted sharply. "We have already seen to Senor Cateras. The others will obey you?"

"They may; I cannot promise."



Our Nearest Summer Resort --- The Free Bridge



WHAT has become of the free bridge—the bridge that once filled columns of our newspapers, made planks in our political platforms, and furnished a subject for our civic orators?

Just this: The free bridge has become the board walk of South Broadway, the promenade of the people. It is a place where little children gather in the evenings to play, and where old men wander to ruminate. It is a trysting spot for lovers, and a grand stand with free seats for everybody. The people who live down in that neighborhood think a whole lot of the free bridge, especially on hot nights.

The best time to go is just before sunset. Long streaky clouds with bellies of gold and backs of dark purple smolder slowly into the leaden gray of cooling metal high over the jagged horizon of church spires, square roofs, smokestacks and water tanks that compose St. Louis' skyline.

A big man and a little woman sit on a bench at the edge of the sidewalk of the bridge, he pulling at a battered pipe while she, in gingham bungalow apron, strains her eyes at a newspaper until he playfully takes it away from her.

Four small, barefoot boys sit on a bench. You ask them why they come on the bridge.

"To keep cool," answers the first, promptly.

"To see the boats go down," says the second.

"Fresh air," the third, and:

"Aw, I dis come wid de gang," concludes the very small one, at the end.

Darkness falls swiftly. An incandescent palace, a blazing radiant thing, moves out from the bank with a hoarse whistle, and floats on its stately way downstream. From a bench beside a great girder comes the strumming of a guitar, and the gleaming of white teeth and the sound of low, mellow laughter, for the bridge has no distinction of color. An old man, gray and nondescript, watches the brilliant excursion steamer until its lights melt into the gray distance, and there is hopelessness and defeat in his eyes.

A swarthy woman herds five swarthy children along, with much chattering and exclaiming. A couple under 20 years of age hunt for a bench where the arc light doesn't shine so brightly. A foundry farther down comes into fiery prominence. From the tangled, indistinguishable, dark mass that lines the levee below the Eads bridge a red light, then a green, wink out.

That is the free bridge now.

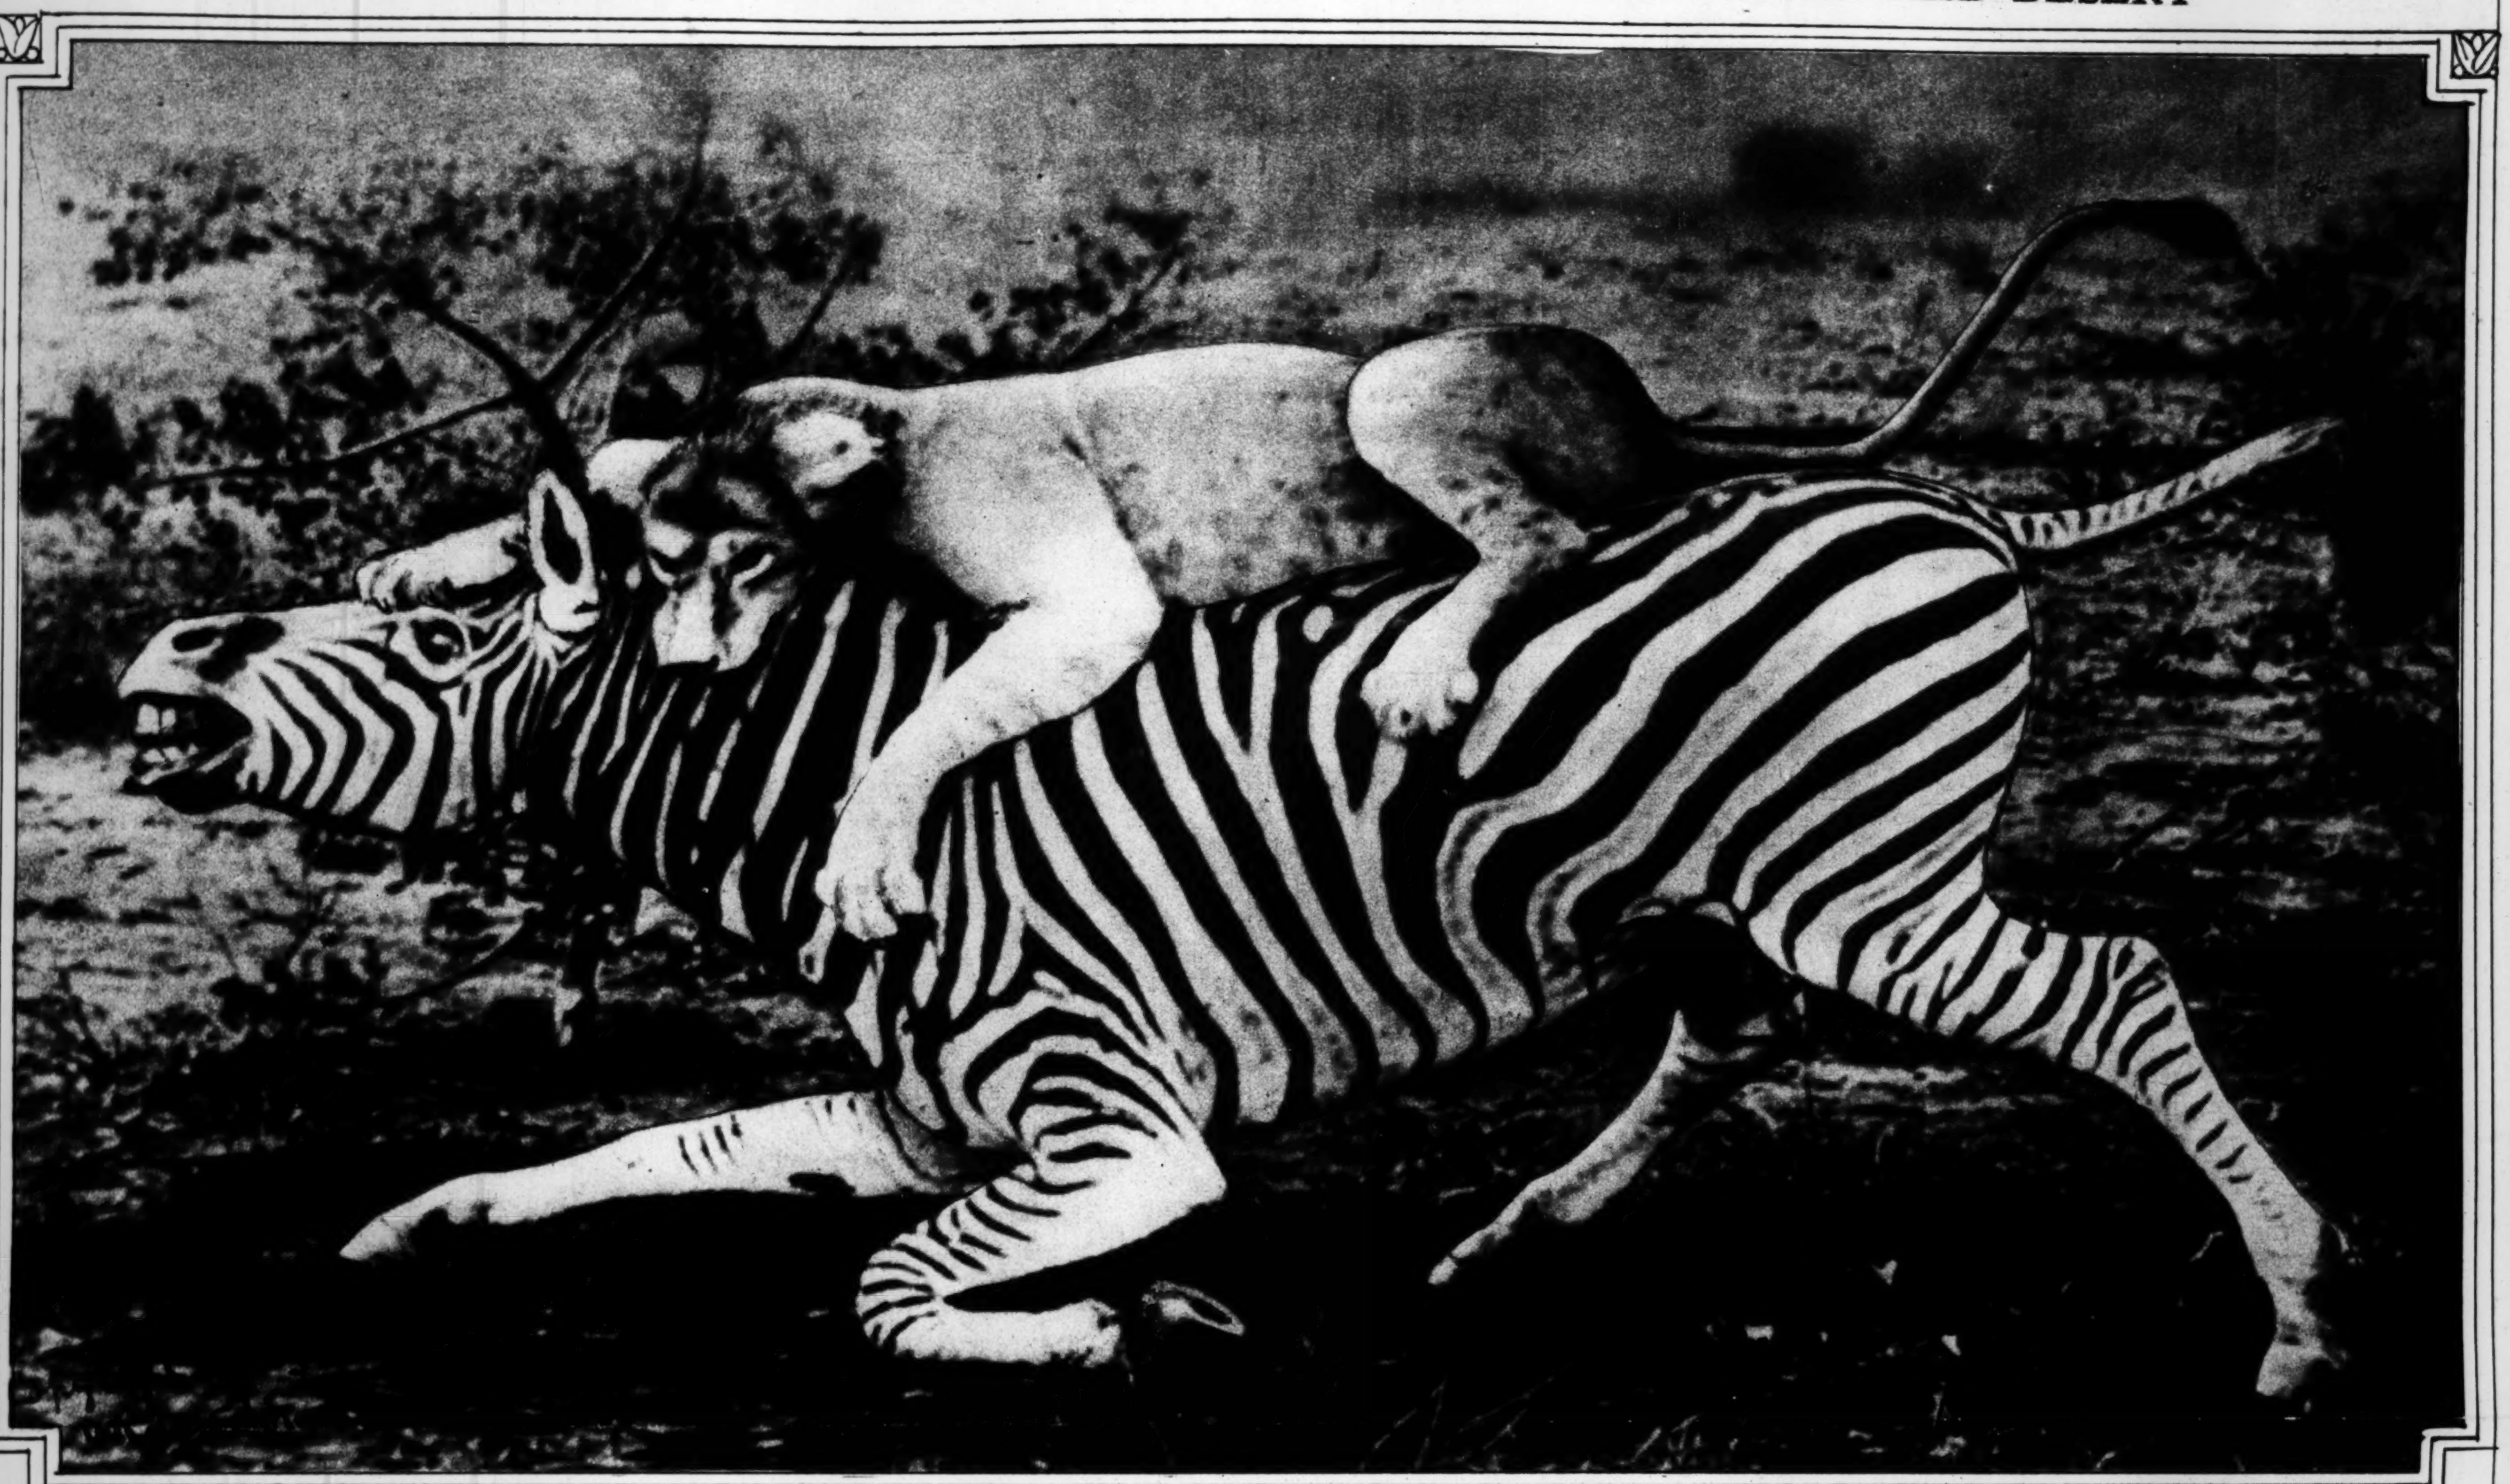
THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST. SUPREME LAW OF THE JUNGLE AND DESERT



Remarkable photograph of a lioness in the act of breaking the neck of a zebra, taken in the Uganda region of Africa by Capt. W. Robert Foran, noted English soldier, hunter of big game and journalist. Capt. Foran followed the Roosevelt expedition through the African jungles as a newspaper correspondent and contributed largely to the literature of that noted hunt. Later Foran returned to England in time to take part in the big war. When last heard of he was wounded in Belgium.

This picture was taken in the Uganda by Capt. Foran some years prior to the Roosevelt expedition. One morning while Foran was hunting, he saw a zebra stallion grazing some distance from a herd of its striped companions. At the same time he saw the lioness make the attack, and hastily taking the camera from the gun bearer, got within 15 paces of the scene and thus procured his view of the death struggle. Then taking his magazine rifle he dispatched the lioness and ended the zebra's agony.

This picture was examined by Col. Roosevelt and pronounced a faithful reproduction of scenes that are not uncommon in the African game haunts.

Culture in New York is broad enough to include cabbages as well as classics—these two giant vegetables, displayed by Park Commissioner Gallatin, were grown in the public library plot, in the heart of the city.

Twice the life for your silk stockings!

After every wearing, dip them in these delicate suds

SILK stockings should never be left unlaundered after a single wearing, as perspiration attacks the fibre and weakens it. Freshen them, the moment they get soiled, in pure Lux suds!

Lux comes in delicate white flakes that dissolve instantly in hot water. You simply toss a tablespoonful into hot water and stir up a rich lather. Then add cold water until the suds are lukewarm—and in your stockings go!

Don't let another pair of your silk stockings be ruined by perspiration. Get Lux today from your grocer, druggist or department store.—Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

A few dont's for silk stockings

Never wring silk stockings. Wringing injures the fibre. Just squeeze the water out gently.

Always use a warm iron, never a hot one. Heat injures silk fibre and yellows white and delicate colors.

Spread clocked stockings on a towel, and roll immediately to dry. Iron while still damp. This will keep the clocks from running.

TROCO NUT BUTTER COMPANY MILWAUKEE U.S.A.

No Wonder It's So Good

—Made From Coconuts and Milk

There's a very good reason for this quality of Troco—for its sweet, delicate flavor and perfect texture—for it is made from the dainty white meat of coconuts churned with pasteurized milk. It is appetizing, wholesome and nutritious.

Such quality naturally makes Troco your ultimate choice, once you try it. You can pay more, but you can't buy finer flavor, sweetness and delicateness, than you enjoy in Troco.

Every carton of Troco is straight from the churn. You are always assured of freshness. It will save you from 15 to 40 cents the final argument for the adoption of Troco.

If your grocer hasn't Troco or can't get it for you, order it by mail. There are many similar products, but only one Troco.

Troco is labeled "oleomargarine" by reason of old laws made before it was invented. But it contains no animal oils just pure vegetable fats and pure pasteurized milk
